TO
A PEACE OFFERING

*Her hills and plains have sheltered through the ages
Saints, seers, sages;
Whose thoughts have spread like sunlight o'er the world;
Nor shall they pass, save to be new unfurl'd.*

WHO SHALL DELIVER ME

*GOD strengthen me to bear myself;
That heaviest weight of all to bear,
Inalienable weight of care.*

*All others are outside myself;
I lock my door and bar them out,
The turmoil, tedium, gad-about.*

*I lock my door upon myself,
And bar them out; but who shall wall
Self from myself, most loathed of all?*

*If I could once lay down myself,
And start self-purged upon the race
That all must run! Death runs apace.*

*If I could set aside myself,
And start with lightened heart upon
The road by all men overgone!*

*God harden me against myself,
This coward with pathetic voice
Who craves for ease, and rest, and joys:*

*Myself, arch-traitor to myself;
My hollowest friend, my deadliest foe,
My clog whatever road I go.*

REFERENCES

ALL the references to different portions of the present work are cross-references, so that a reader on referring to a paragraph or section may find the exact passage or phrase for which he is looking indicated there by a corresponding reference to the passage from which he is looking.

Those readers who wish to obtain only a general survey may very well dispense with the references, all of which merely provide comparisons supplying confirmation, expansion, or modification. The cross-references will be found to serve as a full Index, if trouble be taken to follow up all the links.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

General Survey

2. Writing of the Pāli Introduction (Nidāna-Kathā) in 1877; Rhys Davids observes: 'The light it throws on the other [later] accounts [of Buddha's life] is often exceedingly interesting and instructive, especially as showing the gradual growth of the supernatural parts of the biography' (Buddhism, p. 13). Of the Piṭakas or Canonical Books he writes: 'It may be possible, hereafter, when the Piṭakas shall have been published, to ascertain which parts of them are older than the rest, and whether they contain an older system hidden under a later one;<sup>9</sup> at present it can only be said that of difference in age there is already sufficient evidence, but of growth or change in fundamental ideas none of any certainty,—except, indeed, as regards the person of Gautama himself' (Buddhism, p. 87).<sup>10</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Dr. E. J. Thomas's Life of Buddha (1927) comprises a scrupulous analysis and comparison of all the texts, Pāli (canonical and commentarial), Sanskrit, and Tibetan, available for the several parts of Gotama's biography. His somewhat sceptical survey leaves the conviction that the least unreliable sources are the accounts, not seldom supported by the other traditions, though sometimes inconsistent among themselves, found in the different parts of the Pāli Canon. The Sanskrit poetical narratives, Lalitā-Vistara and Buddha-carita, as in Sir Edwin Arnold's Light of Asia, are little more than gracious fantasies.

3. Just as the earlier biographies of Buddha have clearly been added to and 'improved'<sup>1</sup> by later Buddhist editors, so the original and canonical accounts of Buddha's teachings have been touched and 'improved' in later recensions, generation after generation, to bring them into accordance with current ideas. The method of the growth of the Books of the Canon<sup>2</sup> is illustrated by the Buddhist theory that whatever is well said is a word of the Buddha.<sup>3</sup> Thus doubtless, as might have been assumed a priori, doctrines which to the early Fathers of the Buddhist Church, before the final closing of the Sacred Canon, seemed consonant with the original teachings of the Buddha, were gradually added to the tradition, their own misapprehensions of his teaching being naturally emphasized. It is here contended that the original core of Gotama's teaching<sup>4</sup> was the doctrine of pure altruism or non-egoism,<sup>5</sup> which has since been overlaid very naturally by one making a stronger appeal, namely the wonderful Indian dogma of personal salvation through long purgation by transmigration in successive lives. The ethical ideal of complete altruism is of such beauty that it would seem to be worth presenting in a concrete form, even if that form were not strictly historical. Of its historical truth, however, in the life of Gotama Buddha, there appears to be sufficient proof.

4. That Buddha found the doctrine of transmigration<sup>6</sup> prevalent among his contemporaries is sufficiently established.<sup>7</sup> It seems clear that he accepted so much of it<sup>8</sup> as declares the endless results of all actions of the individual;<sup>1</sup> but the theory of personal reward and punishment in successive lives is radically inconsistent with his characteristic doctrine of No Self, or the impermanence of individuality (sabbe dhammā an-attā),<sup>2</sup> and with altruism, being in essence individualistic.<sup>3</sup>

5. It is sometimes said that, whilst Gotama accepted the Brāhman doctrine of Karma or transmigration (metempsychosis), he reformed it by clearing away the ancient reliance upon priestly ritual, of which the object was progress in the series of re-births, and by teaching that every man must be his own saviour.<sup>4</sup> But, whatever the degree of reliance upon ritual, the idea of ultimate salvation by self-effort and moral action is inherent in the doctrine of Karma, and must therefore have been current before the time of Gotama. The man born blind is punished for some sin of the eye in a previous birth, and not for neglect of ritual. What is distinctive of Gotama's teaching is, not salvation attained by non-reliance upon ritual and by reliance upon self, though self-reliance<sup>5</sup> is definitely taught by him, but the present attainment of the peace of Nibbāna<sup>6</sup> (Nirvāna) or freedom from sorrow, through the eradication of selfish desire or egoism, by following the Noble Eightfold Path,<sup>7</sup> which necessarily involves unselfish

<sup>3</sup> 'The doctrine of Karman, of metempsychosis, was already so deeply rooted in the popular conscience that Buddhism has retained it notwithstanding its standing in the most glaring conflict with Buddhist psychology, which denies the existence of soul altogether' (Kern, Manual of Indian Buddhism, 1896, p. 11).

'The two fundamental formulas ["These formulas are the four Āryasatyāni (Noble Truths) and the twelvefold Pratityasamutpāda (Dependent Origination)", p. 46], to which may be added the stanza "Ye dhammā hetuppabhavā (Those things which spring from a cause)", do not presuppose the belief in retribution and rebirth, the Karman theory, nor do they contain anything decidedly opposed to it. The same cannot be said of the Buddhist doctrine regarding the Ātman, self, soul, individuality. . . . The more we try to remove the difficulties, the more we are driven to the suspicion that original Buddhism was not exactly that of the canonical books. If we suppose that the teaching of the founder of the Order was free from mythology and the Karman theory, we get a system intelligible, self-consistent and perfectly apt to lead persons possessing a contemplative bent of mind, by means of a dignified and harmless solitary and cenobitic mode of life, to the blissful state of calm beatitude, called Nirvāna, a state only surpassed by the final Nirvāna or Parinirvāna, when all suffering is absolutely and for ever at an end.

'Whatever may be our doubts about the original form of Buddhism, it is certain that the dogma in question made part and parcel of the whole system of Dharma before the great bulk of the canonical books were composed. The hypothesis that in course of time some elements were incorporated into the creed to which originally they were foreign, does not involve the belief in a radical change. In our view Buddhism was from the very beginning essentially such as we find it in the Tripiṭaka . . . ' (Kern, Manual, pp. 49-50). Cp. Int. § 91.

activity and precludes the self-cultural passivity of such asceticism as that of Yoga, tried and abandoned<sup>1</sup> by Gotama.

6. The centre of Gotama's doctrine lies in the Four Noble Truths, which culminate in the Noble Eightfold Path.<sup>2</sup> And in the discourse in which these appear there is but one word (and that perhaps interpolated) possibly referring to rebirth. That one word is pono-bbhavikā<sup>3</sup> (tending to being again), and is an epithet of taṇhā (thirst or desire). Now if the 'being again' is not that of the soul, of which the lasting existence was denied<sup>4</sup> by Gotama, and if it is taṇhā, desire itself, that is here said to tend to re-exist or be again, then the epithet points to a fact which cannot be denied, and which, if once realized in its fullness, is as sufficient a moral sanction for altruism as future reward and punishment are for individualism; for the thought of ill once done reproducing itself and affecting endless lives through countless ages is at least as powerful a deterrent as the fear of punishment which is to be suffered hereafter by oneself and possibly may be escaped.<sup>5</sup> Those who consider that so purely rational a doctrine as that which is here attributed to Gotama could not have arisen at so early a date overlook not only generally the thousands of years of human civilization and intercommunication prior to that period, but specifically the rationalism<sup>6</sup> of Gotama's Indian philosophic contemporaries and opponents, as well as the rationalism of Confucius in China before Gotama, and that of the Stoics<sup>7</sup> in Asia Minor and Greece not many generations later.

7. All definitely transmigrationalist phrases and passages have been omitted from the present text and have been placed in footnotes. Readers can thus judge for themselves, but it is here maintained that these are probably additions by later Buddhist authorities whose view of Karma (kamma)<sup>8</sup> was personal or individualistic, whereas Buddha's original teaching denies emphatically all permanent personality (attan, or puggala).<sup>9</sup> for every action, word, or thought,<sup>1</sup> the necessity of morality, are throughout assumed in Buddha's teaching. To this extent the force of Karma<sup>2</sup> is assumed by him, as by all his Hindu contemporaries; but the doctrines of lasting personality and of reward and punishment he definitely repudiated.<sup>3</sup> Assuming the common origin and the fundamental unity<sup>4</sup> of all life and spirit, he assumed the unity of the force of Karma upon the living material of the whole world, and the doctrine of Karma taught by him is collective not individual.<sup>5</sup> This doctrine of Collective Karma (Pāli, Kamma) is exactly expressed by the French statesman and writer Turgot, who in the year 1750 in his famous Discourse wrote that 'All epochs are fastened together by a sequence of causes and effects, linking the condition of the world to all the conditions that have gone before'. The influence of the great and unifying genius of Sir Isaac Newton upon Turgot is pointed out by Lord Morley in his essay on the French statesman. The doctrine is in accord with modern scientific thought.

9. 'None of the books of the Three Piṭakas', writes T. W. Rhys Davids (Buddhism, p. 86), 'can at present be satisfactorily traced back before the Council of Asoka, held at Patna about 250 B.C., that is to say, at least 130 years after the death of the teacher; but they undoubtedly contain a great deal of much older matter.'<sup>6</sup> The problem is to find a test which will distinguish between earlier and later passages and doctrines attributed to Gotama. That probably is to be found in the difference between altruistic and individualistic Buddhism. Gotama's teaching was a revolt<sup>7</sup> from the pious self-seeking of extreme asceticism; herein lies the key. Buddha's later followers reverted, naturally enough, to the effort after personal salvation, as also to personal worship and ultimately to polytheism—to bhakti

'Owing to the unsettled state of Indian chronology we cannot with full certainty fix the absolute date of the Nirvāṇa; yet we may confidently assert that the rise of Buddhism nearly coincides with the close of the Upaniṣad period. From the very tenets of Buddhism it is evident that the theories of the Vedānta had reached their full development, albeit not in the scholastic form of the Brahma-Sūtras. The practices of the Yoga, which though dogmatically no integral part of the Vedānta are not repudiated or disapproved by the Vedāntins, were scarcely less developed in the days of Buddha than later in the time of Patañjali, the author of the manual titled Yoga-sūtra' (Kern, Manual of Indian Buddhism, 1896, p. 11). (adoration), and so to Hinduism, from an earlier form of which Buddhism originally had emerged and in which the Indian school of Buddhism was ultimately reabsorbed.<sup>1</sup> To find again the teachings of Gotama, it is necessary to reverse their steps—to discard polytheism and the hierarchy of heaven, to discard personal adoration, and so finally to discard the doctrine of personal Karma and return to the fundamental doctrine of selfless well-doing without a thought of reward.<sup>2</sup>

10. The Buddha is described as hesitating long before deciding to teach his doctrine; he feared that it would not be understood.<sup>3</sup> There was, however, no reason why he should hesitate to teach the doctrines of Transmigration and Karma, ordinarily attributed to him, if he held them; they are perhaps the most popular religious doctrines in the world. We must look for the causes of his hesitation in some other form of doctrine, more difficult of acceptance by the world, and we may find it in the teaching of pure altruism (non-egoism).<sup>4</sup> The difficulties in the way of making the generality of the world understand the metaphysical basis<sup>5</sup> of this doctrine he might well regard as almost insuperable; but as regards the dogmatic teaching of the evils of selfishness, adopted finally by him, the difficulty was not so much of comprehension as of acceptance by the world. Gotama himself repeatedly insists upon the simplicity of the doctrine, and that a man can master it by himself.<sup>6</sup> To social man indeed the need for self-denial is self-evident when once clearly pointed out. It is perceived directly, like the reality of the world, but is equally unprovable by logic or metaphysics. It is this thread<sup>7</sup> which requires to be disentangled from the skein with which it has been intertwined.

11. In the Conversion Sermons<sup>8</sup> is probably to be found the nucleus and the purest form of the Buddha's own teaching,<sup>9</sup> to be distinguished from the developments of his later followers. It may be questioned whether the doctrine of Rebirth<sup>10</sup> is referred to in these sermons even in the present, possibly late, form in which they have come down to us. Their mention of Heaven (sagga)<sup>11</sup> is inconsistent with that doctrine, if sagga implies a future blissful existence, since descent from Heaven back to earth is possible only in the case of re-incarnations of the highest spirits, and sagga in the sermons is promised to all true converts. means 'light', probably denotes not the radiance of a future existence but the bliss of perfect enlightenment and self-forgetfulness in this world.

12. Apart from the Buddhist Canon, the Edicts of the Emperor Asoka<sup>1</sup> present to us the earliest known concise form of the Buddhist doctrine. In these edicts the first importance is attributed to the duties of a man towards his parents, teachers, relatives, neighbours, and animals. The teaching is substantially the same as that of the Singālovāda Sutta,<sup>2</sup> in which Gotama laid down what was practically the whole duty of the pious layman. Asoka frequently refers to 'the hither side and the further side' (hida and palata), and these terms have hitherto been taken to refer to present and future lives. There is no other possible reference to the doctrine of Rebirth in the edicts. These two words, however, quite probably refer, as an examination of the context<sup>3</sup> will show, not to present and future lives but to the hither and further sides of the stream of Conversion,<sup>4</sup> i.e. the transition from an egoistic life to one of self-forgetfulness.<sup>5</sup> The edicts also mention on several occasions Heaven (svaga; sagga, svarga),<sup>6</sup> but as in the Conversion Sermons of Gotama this term much more probably refers to the blissful state of enlightenment on earth than to a radiant future existence. For the rest the Emperor in his edicts explains repeatedly how he has striven to serve his subjects and all men in accordance with the precepts of the Buddha. Whatever in the Canon is inconsistent with the simple form of Buddhism disclosed expressly or implicitly in the Edicts of Asoka is probably a later accretion added to the original Dhamma<sup>7</sup> after the middle of the third century B.C.<sup>8</sup> presented in historical order up to the point when the Dhamma<sup>1</sup> had been definitely formulated (Chs. 1-4) and the Saṃgha<sup>2</sup> securely founded (Chs. 5-7); and also of the last few months of the Teacher's life, the so-called period of the Great Decease<sup>3</sup> (Chs. 20-2). Further we have accounts, but no consecutive narrative, of the long period of some forty-five years lying between those points, the period of Gotama's ministry in which the organization of the Saṃgha was completed. This difference in the nature of the records is natural enough. A continuous historical narrative of the steps by which the organization of the Buddhist Society or Community (Saṃgha) was gradually advanced and completed during the founder's prolonged ministry would be far more lengthy and less readily comprehensible than the logically, or systematically, arranged account given by the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga of the Vinaya Piṭaka,<sup>4</sup> in which the disciplinary regulations of the Society are presented in a classified order, according to the subjects, with brief narratives of the circumstances and occasions out of which they severally arose.

14. Belonging to the middle period also are most of the great occasional Discourses (Suttas) which constitute the Sutta-Piṭaka.<sup>5</sup> The Nikāyas or great divisions of the Sutta-Piṭaka, which are less systematized than the Vinaya-Piṭaka, show how the doctrine was spread among the clans,<sup>6</sup> whilst the Vinaya-Piṭaka shows how the rules were formulated. In the present narrative both the Vinaya-Piṭaka and Sutta-Piṭaka (the First and Second 'Baskets' or Collections) have been largely drawn on, but nothing has been included from the Abhi-dhamma-Piṭaka<sup>7</sup> (the Third Basket), which deals with the 'metaphysics', or rather the logical and psychological developments and intricacies, of Buddhism and not with the life of the Teacher. Of the Sutta-Piṭaka only the first four Nikāyas or Collections, viz. the Dīgha, Majjhima, Samyutta, and Aṅguttara Nikāyas, have been extensively drawn upon, since the fifth or Khuddaka-Nikāya bears all the signs of having been added at a comparatively late date. The Pāli Commentaries,<sup>8</sup> though they are necessary to an understanding of medieval Buddhism, have not been referred to except in their narrative portions, because they necessarily give later and scholastic interpretations and favour Abhi-dhamma metaphysics and mystery rather than the original opinions of the Buddha. main reliance must be placed on a comparison and classification of the earliest texts.

15. The period up to the definite formulation of the Dhamma and the secure foundation of the Saṃgha forms the subject of Part I; the middle period of development and ceaseless propaganda that of Part II; and the last twenty years of permanent residence in Sāvattthi, the Teacher's last tour and the Great Decease that of Part III. Those readers who desire to start from secure historical ground may care to begin with Chapters 8A and 8B at the commencement of Part II, which present an account of the structure, duties, and daily life of the Saṃgha as it existed during the period between the lifetime of Gotama and the reign of the Emperor Asoka, and which are based upon the firm ground of the ancient rules contained in the Vinaya-Piṭaka. Thence they may turn back to the chapters of Part I, which in a necessarily more hypothetical manner deal with the origins of the Saṃgha and the youth and enlightenment of its founder—subjects which have presented an ample field for the poetic fancy and wonder of the old chroniclers and commentators.

16. Part I comprises the fundamental portion of the subject-matter of the Nidāna-kathā,<sup>1</sup> or biographical Introduction to the Commentary on the Ĵātaka,<sup>2</sup> and the corresponding chapters of the Piṭakas, including the narrative introductory portion of the Mahāvagga of the Vinaya-Piṭaka with the Dhamma-cakka-ppavattana-Sutta;<sup>3</sup> Part II comprises the period subsequent to this, covered by the brief but consecutive summary of Gotama's rainy season (vassa)<sup>4</sup> visits, or months of continuous residence for meditation and instruction, recounted in the Madhurattha-vilasini<sup>5</sup> or Commentary on the Buddha vamsa, of which the narrative has to be pieced together out of the Canon and more especially out of the Sutta-Piṭaka; and Part III comprises those portions of the Canon which narrate events occurring in Sāvattthi after Gotama had established his head-quarters in that city, and finally the bulk of the Mahā-parinibbāna Sutta.<sup>6</sup>

17. The subject-matter of the middle period has not been arranged in chronological order but has been classified, partly under the more essential features of the Saṃgha discipline, and partly under the clans<sup>7</sup> and their chief towns—Rājagaha, Vesālī, Kapilavatthu, Kosambi, and Sāvattthi—and their scattered townships and villages, in which Gotama pursued his ministry after the Enlightenment at Bodh-Gaya and the first beginnings of the Saṃgha at Benāres. Nor indeed are there great events to record in the middle period of the Teacher's life save, firstly, the development of the multiple rules (the Vināya) governing the Saṃgha, and secondly, the carrying of the Law (the Dhamma) to the several kingdoms and peoples adjoining Magadha, in the Middle-land<sup>1</sup> of India, with, finally, the dissensions<sup>2</sup> breaking forth, perhaps necessarily, in the Saṃgha between the ascetic or Hinduizing section and the moderate party of the Middle Way<sup>3</sup> favoured by Gotama himself.

18. Dimly behind the immense journeys<sup>4</sup> of the Teacher we see the greater and lesser political powers of that time<sup>5</sup>—the powerful kingdom of Magadha,<sup>6</sup> centred at Rājagaha, on the south side of the Ganges, poised on the one hand against the kingdom of Kosala,<sup>7</sup> centred at Sāvathī, on the north of the Ganges to the north-west of Magadha, with the subordinate principality of Benāres (Bārāṇasī),<sup>8</sup> and the small dependent republic of Kāpilavasthu,<sup>9</sup> with the Sakyan nobility of which state the royal house of Kosala was anciently connected;<sup>10</sup> and on the other hand against the confederacy of the Vajjian<sup>11</sup> clans, centred at Vesālī, east of Kosala and also on the north of the Ganges. To the south of Kosala extended the small kingdom of Kosambi,<sup>12</sup> of which the capital was situated upon the northern bank of the river Jamna, not far from the junction of that river with the Ganges. Beyond Kosambi lay the western kingdom of Avanti,<sup>13</sup> centred at Ujjeni. Shortly before the close of Gotama's life the king of Kosala destroyed the Sakyan capital,<sup>14</sup> Gotama's birthplace. About the same time the rivalry between Magadha and Kosala broke out into open warfare and Sāvathī was temporarily captured by the Magadhan king.<sup>15</sup> Shortly after Gotama's death the Vajjian Confederacy fell before the aggressive southern power.<sup>16</sup> This latter emerged, less than two hundred years later, as the Mauryan empire, comprising all these states and others, of which powerful and enduring dominion the founder was Chandragupta,<sup>17</sup> the younger contemporary of Alexander the Great, and of which the greatest ornament was the famous Emperor Asoka,<sup>18</sup> Gotama's devout follower.

19. If indeed Gotama taught to his listeners a doctrine of pure altruism, the intellectual condition of India, which accepted his teachings so widely during his lifetime and in the immediately succeeding generations, must have been singularly advanced at that period, which we are apt to consider as so early, but which in reality was preceded by long ages of civilization and religious and philosophical thought.<sup>1</sup> It is more than probable, however, that, whatever may have been his actual teaching, the bulk of his followers were unable to dispense with the support either of a belief in heaven (svarga),<sup>2</sup> or of the doctrine of Rebirth,<sup>3</sup> and with the sanctions of a system of rewards and punishments, appealing to those individual interests and desires, the extinction or eradication of which was Gotama's special ideal and aim.<sup>4</sup> None the less, despite this qualification, there must have been in India at that period a society, widely spread over a vast territory, ready to accept generally an ethical code of disinterested and devoted social service, similar to and at least as lofty as that of the best form of Stoicism,<sup>5</sup> a philosophy which in Greece and Rome at a somewhat later period appealed only to the choicest and most highly educated spirits of the age.

20. Many features of Indian life are illustrated by the passages here selected from the Pāli Canonical Books. These present a complex picture of the general life of the Middle-land of northern India in the time of the Buddha, and are dealt with in Notes 13 and 14 at the end of this Introduction. The difficult question of the exact dates of the birth and death of the Buddha is discussed by T. W. Rhys Davids in his Introduction to vol. xi of the Sacred Books of the East (1900).<sup>6</sup> It is agreed on all hands that the greater part of Gautama's life falls into the sixth century before the Christian era.

century before Christ when they were first committed to writing.<sup>1</sup> In the first half of the fifth century A.D. the great Buddhist scholar and commentator, Buddhaghosha,<sup>2</sup> arrived in the island from northern India and translated or re-translated the Commentaries<sup>3</sup> into Pāli. So much for the tradition. The Pāli books have been preserved in no other country. Buddhaghosha was born at Bodh-Gayā, near the scene of the Buddha's enlightenment. His translated and original Commentaries are still the most authoritative treatises on the Pāli Canonical Books. His famous contemporary, the Chinese Buddhist traveller Fa Hian,<sup>4</sup> travelled in northern India and Ceylon at this time collecting manuscript copies of the Books of the Canon belonging to both the Hīna-yāna (Low or Lesser Vehicle) and Mahā-yāna (Greater Vehicle) sects, sometimes conveniently though not altogether accurately called the Southern and Northern Schools<sup>5</sup> of Buddhism. In the seventh century A.D. the equally famous Chinese traveller, Hiuen Tsang,<sup>6</sup> travelled through northern India on a similar mission. Thus it is evident that the Buddhist Canon existed in India at this period in a written form. That Buddhaghosha brought with him from Magadha the Sacred Books of the Pāli Canon is possible whether he found copies of some or all of them existing in Ceylon or not. If he brought some or all of the present books<sup>7</sup> of Modern Sinhalese is akin to Pāli.

<sup>5</sup> The distinction is practically that between the Pāli books and the Sanskrit Buddhist books. Post-Vedic Sanskrit, the philosophic and universal language of the Upanishads, gradually ousted Pāli from literature (see RDBI, ch. viii). The Ceylon Books in Pāli are the sole representatives of the Canon of the Hīna-yāna, or 'Low' Vehicle. The Books of the Mahā-yāna or 'Great' Vehicle partly survive in Sanskrit, Tibetan, and Chinese (cp. Kern's Manual, pp. 3-6; T. W. Rhys Davids's lectures on Buddhism, its History and Literature, 2nd ed. 1926, pp. 204-8) and greatly emphasize the miraculous and metaphysical sides of Buddhism. The Mahāyānists in stressing the fundamental doctrine of self-sacrifice attributed a minor importance to the Buddha himself in as much as his Buddhahood implied his own final attainment of bliss, and they attributed a loftier importance to the Bodhisattas (Wisdom-Beings) who refrain from the bliss of Buddhahood in order that they may influence from the Heavens the well-being of mankind (cp. Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, pp. 166-7; and A. B. Keith, Buddhist Philosophy, Pt. III, for Mahāyānist developments). Int. §§ 22 n, 23, 87; IN 8 c (Mahāyāna); Ch. 11 d § 10 [1] n; Ap. <sup>6</sup> See V. A. Smith, Oxford History of India, p. 168.

<sup>7</sup> The Sāsana-vamṣa attributes to him the re-translation of the whole Canon the Canon in Pāli from the Middle-land of northern India this would imply the possibility that portions of the books are of a considerably later date than that of the Emperor Asoka and the missionary prince Mahinda. The Pāli<sup>1</sup> tongue is a highly elaborated literary language developed from the Prākṛit vernaculars of middle northern India, including Kosalese and Magadhese, in which latter dialect the Edicts of Asoka<sup>2</sup> are written and with which language no doubt the Buddha was well acquainted during the long years of his ministry in Magadha.<sup>3</sup> The vernaculars of the numerous States in which Gotama worked and taught were doubtless closely similar since we hear of no difficulty encountered by him in teaching in any of these.

22. The authenticity of the Ceylon<sup>4</sup> Canon is borne out both by internal and external evidence. The internal evidence is particularly strong. There is practically no reference<sup>5</sup> in any of the Books of the Canon to any event outside northern India, or later than the immediate times of the Buddha. The political, social, and economic life depicted bears practically no traces of other countries or times. The historical references are very frequent and equally consistent; the books make no mention of the great Buddhist Emperor Asoka (third century B.C.) or his contemporaries. The whole picture presented by the books is completely Indian, and except in regard to the development of the miraculous<sup>6</sup> and the metaphysical,<sup>7</sup> is consistently early Buddhist in tone.<sup>8</sup> The Buddhist monks of Ceylon refrain scrupulously from any addition betraying a Sinhalese atmosphere. As regards external evidence the Edicts of Asoka,<sup>9</sup> which have been rediscovered and interpreted to the world during the last hundred years, strongly support the authenticity of the Ceylon Canon. Asoka avows himself a follower of the Buddha and sets forth the main principles of the Dhamma, which closely correspond with those laid down for laymen by Gotama in the Singālovāda Sutta<sup>10</sup> of the Digha Nikāya in the Sutta Piṭaka. The emperor also commends a list of texts which have been sufficiently satisfactorily identified<sup>11</sup> with portions of the Ceylon Canon. The remarkable sculptures on the gates and railings of the great stupas at Bharhut and Sāñchī<sup>1</sup> depict scenes easily identified with events mentioned in the same Canon, e.g. the sale by Prince Jeta of land to Anāthapiṇḍika for the building of the famous Vihāra (rest-house or monastery) at Sāvatti and also many scenes from the Jātaka (Book of Previous Births of the Buddha).<sup>2</sup> These sculptures were executed about the end of the third century B.C.<sup>3</sup> Inscriptions found on the same monuments mention the Piṭakas, the five Nikāyas, and the Suttas,<sup>4</sup> the chief and most characteristic divisions of the Ceylon Canonical Books. In the Pāli classic, Milinda-Pañha (Inquiry of Milinda),<sup>5</sup> a treatise composed in northern India about the first century A.D., all the texts quoted from the Canon (though these may have been added later)<sup>6</sup> are drawn from the Pāli books included in the Ceylon Canon. Again, despite the radical differences between the Chinese and the Pāli Buddhist Canons, their resemblances are notable and they have certain texts in common, e.g. the Dhammapada verses and Pāṭimokkha rules and similarly the Dhūtanga<sup>7</sup> rules, and the evidence shows that these have their point of origin<sup>8</sup> in northern India, not in Ceylon. Thus the presumption is that since these portions of the Pāli Canon are clearly traceable to an origin in northern India,<sup>9</sup> the bulk of the Ceylon Canon may equally be attributable to that source, as its supporters claim. It may therefore be said that the external evidence in favour of the Indian origin and great antiquity of the Pāli Canon is very considerable, and the internal evidence is still more convincing.

23. Apart from the great series of the Sacred Books of the East and the publications of the Pāli Text Society, and the late Professor T. W. Rhys Davids's Dialogues of the Buddha (Dīgha Nikāya) and Buddhist Birth Stories (Jātaka Introduction; Sacred Books of the Buddhists, vol. i), to which all workers on the Pāli Canon must be indebted, the editor of the present work owes special gratitude to the late Henry Clarke Warren's Buddhism in Translations (Harvard Oriental Series), a wide and suggestive selection of Hīnayāna<sup>10</sup> texts. # INTRODUCTORY NOTES

24. The core of Gotama's teaching<sup>4</sup> is to be found in the First Sermon, the Dhammacakkappavattana-Sutta,<sup>5</sup> in which he lays down the Four Noble Truths including the famous Noble Eightfold Path.<sup>6</sup> In this famous discourse there is no phrase or word which can be claimed as supporting the doctrine of Rebirth except possibly the word pono-bbhavikā<sup>7</sup> which is usually translated as 'causing re-existence or re-birth'. Thus translated this word, used as an epithet of taṇhā (thirst, craving), is so startlingly irrelevant in the sermon that it would appear to have been added by a later hand.<sup>8</sup> Its omission makes no difference to the closely woven argument establishing the origin of all sorrow in selfish desire; and the phrase itself is entirely unsupported here by any argument. It implies the motive of self-salvation and that self-interested desire which is declared by Buddha in the rest of the discourse to be the root and cause of all the sorrow in the world. The rest of the discourse implies, and other discourses of the Buddha definitely state, that there is no permanent individual soul or attan,<sup>9</sup> and this phrase, taken literally, states the opposite.

25. The synthesis of these opposing tenets<sup>10</sup> is sometimes stated

- (1) that all individual life is sorrowful;
- (2) that the cause of sorrow is (individualistic) desire;
- (3) that the eradication of (individualistic) desire is the destruction of sorrow;
- (4) that the road to the destruction of sorrow, to the eradication of (individualistic) desire, to the bliss of Nibbāna (Extinction of Self)—the Middle Way, avoiding self-torture and luxurious self-indulgence, both of which are vain—is the Noble Eightfold Path, to wit, right outlook, right wish, right word, right deed, right effort, right way of livelihood, right mindfulness (sammā sati), and right rapture or deep meditation (sammā samādhi).

Ch. 5 b §§ 4, 10; Ap. G 1 a (Truths); and Ap. F 2 d; also Int. §§ 104, 106 n. <sup>7</sup> IN 5 b n; Ch. 5 b § 6; Ch. 9 a § 11; Ch. 20 § 2 (5); Ap. D a § 1; Ap. E b § 2 [6]; and Int. § 55. Cp. Ch. 4 § 16 (puna-bbhava); Ap. A 2 a (7); also Ap. B c § 1 (2) (builder); Ap. G 2 a, Note (burden). 'Causing rebirth' implies that rebirth is a misfortune. In the threefold analysis of taṇhā which follows immediately in the sermon the phrase vibbhava-taṇhā is usually translated as 'craving for a higher or divine existence'. This at least is inconsistent with the idea that rebirth is necessarily a misfortune, though not with the idea that craving is contagious and deplorable.

to be one of the mysteries<sup>1</sup> of Buddhism; but the reconciliation savours more of his metaphysical successors than of Gotama himself, who declared that he did not deal with metaphysical<sup>2</sup> questions but with the extinction of sorrow<sup>3</sup> and with the Eightfold Path of conduct.<sup>4</sup> The reconciliation is supposed to consist in the assumption that whereas the individual soul disappears at the close of this life, its aggregate of actions or Karma (kamma) causes the birth of a new individual, and so on—as a flame<sup>5</sup> is transmitted—until Karma ceases. This doubtless shows that Buddha taught that all actions have their inevitable effects,<sup>6</sup> but it is not established that he himself assumed that the aggregate of one individual's actions miraculously creates upon his death a new individual to bear the consequences. That his later followers endeavoured to reconcile his twofold doctrine of no-permanent-soul<sup>7</sup> and the moral responsibility<sup>8</sup> of the individual for his actions, with the Hindu view of the transmigration of the soul, is probable enough. In the Hindu view the same individual acts and suffers in different lives; the usual modern Buddhist view is the same; but the strict original Buddhist view is altruistic, the actor being one, and the ultimate sufferer or beneficiary another, individual. Allowing that the reconciliation is later, it may be assumed that Buddha, teaching the doctrines of no-permanent-soul, moral responsibility, and altruism,<sup>9</sup> taught a doctrine of altruistic responsibility or collective Karma,<sup>10</sup> according to which every action, word, and thought<sup>11</sup> of the individual, transient though he be, brings forth inevitably consequences to be suffered or enjoyed by others in endless succeeding generations. The sanctions of such a doctrine of altruism appear to be as impressive as those based upon the individualistic doctrine of personal immortality.

26. If, however, the epithet pono-bbhavikā, applied to tanhā (thirst, desire, selfishness), be translated as 'tending to arise again, repeating itself, recurring' (that is, causing the rebirth of itself, not of the individual), it is fully in accord with the doctrine of altruistic responsibility. If each selfish grasping act ceased with itself, and had no consequences, it would be ill enough; but each such action, word, or thought is endlessly fertile in its kind, and the idea of these endless repercussions<sup>12</sup> throughout the generations of men is an essential part of Gotama's doctrine. It would be natural therefore to stress that idea by the application of this epithet to desire (taṇhā), though in this sense it might equally be applied to love or self-denial.

27. If the word pono-bbhavikā be translated as 'recurring, self-perpetuating', i.e. causing the renewal of its own existence, not another individual's existence, then the translation certainly corresponds with actual fact, and apparently with the etymology of the word, meaning literally 'concerned with again-being'.<sup>1</sup> The ever renewed existence of craving, begotten by itself, is clear: the 'renewal of existence', presumed by the doctrine of transmigration, is an assumption of that metaphysics which Gotama deprecated,<sup>2</sup> and implies either (a) a transfer of the attan (soul, self), the existence of which was denied<sup>3</sup> by Gotama; or (b) an earlier and more orthodox doctrine, viz. a transfer of kamma (accumulated merit or demerit, karma) at the time of death from one individual to another newly born<sup>4</sup>—no proof of which mystery<sup>5</sup> is ever attributed to Gotama, though his intellect probed to the quick all that was submitted to it, and he declared that he had 'preached the truth without making any distinction between exoteric and esoteric doctrine' and had 'no such thing as the closed fist of a teacher who keeps some things back',<sup>6</sup> and stated repeatedly that everyone could learn the truth for himself in this life.<sup>7</sup>

28. That desire perpetuates itself from one generation to another of mankind is clear, and Gotama can scarcely have failed to be aware of it. That he expressed the idea in the term pono-bbhavikā, thus interpreted, seems not improbable. One of the beautiful sayings attributed to him is 'Never in this world does hatred cease through hatred; hatred ceases through love; this is always its nature',<sup>8</sup> i.e. hatred causes hatred, love causes love. If one adds to this the plain truth that these feelings continue beyond the individual's life, to succeeding generations, one has the true doctrine of collective Karma or kamma<sup>9</sup>—mankind bearing the sorrowful burden of the sins of its desirous units together with the transforming hopes of those who can transcend the self—which would seem to be the real dhamma (dharma, law) of Gotama, the foundation on which so much that is extraneous to his teaching was constructed in later ages.<sup>10</sup>

29. It is noticeable that the subject of transmigration receives no mention whatsoever either in the famous Tevijja Sutta,<sup>11</sup> in which Gotama is represented as showing the way to a state of union with the Divine (Brahman),<sup>12</sup> or in the equally famous 'comprehensive religious talk',<sup>13</sup> summarizing the faith, and repeated by him in every town and

Nor is there mention of transmigration in the well-known Singālovāda Sutta,<sup>1</sup> which lays down the duties of laymen, though in the last line of the list there is mention of 'the way to heaven'.<sup>2</sup> 'Heaven' similarly is mentioned in the Conversion Sermons,<sup>3</sup> but not transmigration. Nor is rebirth referred to in the crucial passages relating to the essentials of the Dhamma.<sup>4</sup> Moreover, in the Questions of Milinda,<sup>5</sup> the orthodoxy of which is undisputed though the book is extra-canonical, having been written in or about the first century of the Christian era, the Buddhist sage Nāgasena is represented as stating categorically that 'it is not the same name-and-form (nāma-rūpa, individual) that is born into the next existence',<sup>6</sup> and 'the new birth takes place without anything transmigrating', which interpreted plainly and without mystery, is tantamount to stating that the effects of actions pass on but the individual soul does not.

REBIRTH<sup>7</sup> AND (a) THE CONVERSION SERMONS; (b) THE INSTRUCTIONS TO THE FIRST MISSIONERS

30. In the Conversion Sermons is probably to be found the nucleus and the purest form of the Buddha's own teaching, to be distinguished from the developments of his later followers. The greatest of these sermons was the First Sermon, delivered at the Hermitage (Isipatana)<sup>10</sup> in the Deer-park (Miga-dāya) near Benares (Bārāṇasī), the famous Dhammacakkapavattana-Sutta (Sermon of the Starting of the Wheel of the Law),<sup>11</sup> which sets forth the Four Noble Truths and the Middle Way or Noble Eightfold Path. The First Sermon converted Gotama's five original followers—Koṇḍañña, Vappa, Bhaddiya, Mahānāma, and Assaji. After these the first convert was the rich merchant's son Yasa,<sup>12</sup> in Benares. The number of converts in Benares soon amounted to sixty.<sup>13</sup> Thereafter came the important conversions<sup>1</sup> of Uruvela-Kassapa<sup>2</sup> sometimes identified with Mahā-Kassapa, who succeeded to the leadership after Gotama's death, and Sāriputta<sup>3</sup> and Moggallāna,<sup>4</sup> the two friends who during their life-time were nearest to the Buddha in intellectual sympathy. Among the most important names after these great converts come King Bimbisāra,<sup>5</sup> Anāthapiṇḍika,<sup>6</sup> the great merchant of Sāvattthi and chief lay follower of the Buddha, and Gotama's father, Suddhodana,<sup>7</sup> with other Sakyans,<sup>8</sup> members of Gotama's own clan in Kapilavatthu, including his faithful cousin and personal attendant Ānanda.<sup>9</sup> Among other converts come the Brāhman student Vāsetṭha and his friend Bhāradvāja,<sup>10</sup> the householder Siṅgāla,<sup>11</sup> Bhāradvāja the farmer,<sup>12</sup> Vaccha the sophist,<sup>13</sup> Siṃha the general,<sup>14</sup> and Subhadda the last convert.<sup>15</sup> In none of the discourses recorded as responsible for these conversions is there anything to establish that Gotama accepted the doctrine of rebirth or transmigration. The same may be said of his instructions to the first missionaries,<sup>16</sup> whom he sent forth from Benares when the total number of his followers was sixty; and of the famous Fire Sermon<sup>17</sup> preached by him to the multitude on a hillside near Gayā by night in sight of one of those jungle fires that creep along the spurs of the great Vindhyan mountain range, which shut off the mysterious Southern Country from the inhabitants of the great Indian plain; and of the 'comprehensive religious discourse'<sup>18</sup> so often delivered by him during his last journey; and finally of the solemn last words<sup>19</sup> in which the dying Teacher addressed his followers. Even in their present form, as handed down in the tradition, these taken as a whole lay no emphasis upon, if indeed they can be said to refer to, the doctrine of rebirth.

31. The account of the conversion of Yasa is given in the Mahā-Vagga of the Vinaya Piṭaka, and in the Nidāna-kathā of the Introduction to the Jātaka.<sup>20</sup> In these narratives the account of Gotama's address to Yasa is given in what is evidently a systematized summary covering all such addresses delivered by the Buddha on similar occasions. The sermon is called a 'graduated discourse (anupubbikathā)',<sup>21</sup> and then more specifically described as a discourse on giving or charity (dāna-kathā), a discourse on virtuous action (silā-kathā), and a discourse on 'heaven' (sagga-kathā). first part of this 'graduated discourse' the word dāna<sup>1</sup> meaning literally 'giving' is equivalent to altruism, that self-sacrificing charity which is the theme of the Jātaka<sup>2</sup> and is the chief of the Ten Perfections<sup>3</sup> illustrated in the life of the Bodhisat Sumedha,<sup>4</sup> the first sage in the final series of the earthly previous-existences of the Buddha according to the Buddha-vamśa, and is moreover the basis of the Four Noble Truths.<sup>5</sup>

32. The second part of the 'graduated discourse' to Yasa deals with right or virtuous conduct (sīla)<sup>6</sup> which is in effect the pursuing of the Fourth Noble Truth or Noble Eightfold Path. This virtuous conduct is set forth in a detailed manner for the guidance of laymen in the Singālovāda Sutta,<sup>7</sup> and is described more generally as Brahma-cariya<sup>8</sup> or holy living, and again as the four Brahma-vihārā<sup>9</sup> or holy attitudes of mind, namely friendliness or love (mettā), pity (karuṇā), sympathy with joy (muditā), and serenity (upekkhā), all of them being characteristically altruistic.

33. The last section of the 'graduated discourse' treats of 'heaven', but the word sagga<sup>10</sup> which is translated as 'heaven' may mean and should mean the peace of enlightenment, nirvāna (nibbāna), the extinction of all selfish desire here on earth during this present life,<sup>11</sup> referred to in the Fourth Noble Truth of the First Sermon. This contention is borne out by the words which in the narrative immediately follow the division of the discourse into three parts; these words are 'the misery, worthlessness, and painfulness of desires<sup>12</sup> and the joy in renunciation', words which have no relation to a transcendent 'Heaven', but plainly refer to a present state of mind, serenity.

(b) The Instructions to the First Missioners;<sup>13</sup> the spirits or gods (the word devatā)<sup>14</sup>

34. The account of Gotama's instructions to the first Buddhist missioners is a very remarkable document. In the first place it is to be noticed that it contains no word regarding Saṃsāra<sup>15</sup> (rebirth) and (personal) Karma. The goal to which Gotama points is freedom<sup>16</sup> from the temptations arising from the bodily senses<sup>17</sup> and from spiritual desires,<sup>18</sup> not freedom from the terror of rebirth. (Dhamma, Law) which it inculcates is that of the Four Noble Truths, which reveal the origin of all sorrow in the desires of a transient Self, and show the path leading to the annihilation of selfish desire by due activity in thought, deed, and word.<sup>1</sup> In effect these instructions to the first missionaries merely say that having themselves attained freedom by the subjugation of the passions they should carry this freedom to all who are ready to receive it. The two bases of the Dhamma are thus selflessness and helpfulness. The whole elaborate metaphysical superstructure, built up later upon this, fades away.<sup>2</sup>

35. (i) In the text as we have it the missionaries are bidden to go forth and teach for the benefit of 'gods and men'. The word translated as 'gods' is much more accurately rendered as 'spirits' (devā, bright spirits;<sup>3</sup> devatā, divinities). Gotama's own attitude towards the hierarchy of Hindu gods is shown in the first part of the Tevijja Sutta<sup>4</sup> in which he demonstrates that it is impossible to have any knowledge of the nature of Brahmā,<sup>5</sup> and that therefore any attempt to attain union of spirit with Brahmā is beyond the capacity of any religious teacher. In the last part of the Sutta,<sup>6</sup> however, he lays down that through the practice of the four Brahma-vihārā,<sup>7</sup> namely loving-kindness,<sup>8</sup> pity,<sup>9</sup> sympathetic joy,<sup>10</sup> and serenity,<sup>11</sup> it is possible to draw near to Brahman;<sup>12</sup> and unless the two parts of the Sutta are entirely contradictory, the Brahman of the latter part must be the universal impersonal divine spirit (Brahman), the Param-ātman<sup>13</sup> of the Vedāntists, and not the personal Hindu deity of whom he had declared that no knowledge was possible and with whom all attempts at union were consequently futile. (ii) As regards the views of the Buddha's followers after his death, the Nidāna-kathā of the Introduction to the Ĵātaka shows the great gods of Hinduism and other similar deities as inferior<sup>14</sup> to, and as attending upon, the Buddha, and the Mahā-Vagga of the Vinaya Piṭaka shows them in the same subordinate character.<sup>1</sup> Prayer to the gods would have been entirely superfluous, since a man could attain Nirvāna only by his own exertions.<sup>2</sup> In the present instructions to the missionaries the gods or spirits are open to teaching by the simple missionaries of the Dhamma. To attain the rank of Buddhahood it was necessary for the gods to become men;<sup>3</sup> as men alone could they rise to the ultimate height of Enlightenment, Arahatsip.<sup>4</sup> In the Mahā-Vagga the most prominent supernatural figure is that of Māra,<sup>5</sup> the Tempter, who clearly is a personification of those desires, grossly or more subtly selfish, which naturally arise in the human mind, and the eradication of which is the object of the teaching of the Four Noble Truths. The lower ranks of spirits haunting the earth<sup>6</sup> figure also in the Book of the Great Decease,<sup>7</sup> and are plainly survivals of ancient rustic animistic beliefs. (iii) That Gotama denied the existence of beings in the spiritual world does not seem provable; it is much more probable that he left such a question aside as being beyond his province, which was concerned neither with such questions nor with metaphysics,<sup>8</sup> but with the Four Truths and the eradication of selfish desire.<sup>9</sup> The whole tendency of his teaching was to secure emancipation<sup>10</sup> of the mind from superfluous burdens and superstitions, and to concentrate upon the plain duty of unselfish activity. The phrase 'spirits and men' in the mouth of Gotama perhaps means 'all classes of intelligent beings, whether invisible (if any) or visible', and such a phrase, at the opening of the career of a Hindu reformer, seems not improbable.

REBIRTH<sup>11</sup> AND (a) THE 'THREE CHARACTERISTICS'; (b) THE BUDDHA'S LAST WORDS

(a) The Three Characteristics of Individuality; the word an-attā<sup>12</sup>

<sup>14</sup> The word saṃkhārā is used in connexion with the first two characteristics here mentioned and dhammā in connexion with the third. Cp. Buddha's last words in as 'transient' (a-niccā), 'sorrowful' (dukkhā), 'without (durable or separate) self' (an-attā).<sup>1</sup> The last<sup>2</sup> of these three characteristics is plainly opposed to belief in the doctrine of Rebirth or transmigration; if there is no durable self there cannot be a transmigration of the soul to a new body after the death of the first. This was clearly perceived by the early Buddhists, and even so late as five hundred years after the death of the Buddha the Milinda-pañha<sup>3</sup> makes the orthodox Buddhist sage Nāgasena, explaining the (Hīnayāna) doctrine, state that on the death of an individual there is no transmigration of the soul, though there is transference of karma (effect of actions), like the passage of fire, from the dying person to a new individual. This explanation represents the effort of the orthodox Buddhists to reconcile the teaching of Gotama with the ancient and powerful Indian doctrine of transmigration, the influence of which they evidently felt deeply. The explanation, however, plainly leaves the matter a mystery.<sup>4</sup> The doctrine that the soul migrates on the death of one individual to the newly born body of another is perfectly logical though subject neither to proof nor to disproof. The doctrine that the effects of an individual's actions (i.e. his karma) pass at his death to a new individual places plainly arbitrary and illogical limitations upon those effects (i.e. his karma), which obviously are in reality neither limited to the time of the death of one individual nor are borne by a single new individual. Those effects act upon innumerable persons, during the whole of the lifetime of the individual.<sup>5</sup> This was as obvious in the time of Gotama as at the present day, as is evidenced by the First Sermon and the Noble Eightfold Path, and the whole of his ethical teaching. In the end the ancient Indian doctrine of Rebirth overcame its rival.

37. But though Gotama's doctrine of the impermanence of the soul is strictly opposed to that of rebirth it is not necessarily in conflict with the idea of a higher Soul. He states that all individuals (dhammā or saṃkhārā) are without (permanent- or separate-) soul (an-attā). But this is not the same as saying that there is no attan<sup>6</sup> or param-ātman (Supreme Soul). In the latter part of the Tevijja Sutta<sup>7</sup> which it is stated that the saṃkhārā are perishable (Ch. 4 § 18). Cp. the pañc' upādāna-kkhandhā (fivefold grasping aggregates) in the First Sermon (cp. also Ap. E a ii § 3 [3]).

<sup>2</sup> The statement sabbe dhammā an-attā (all things in nature are without permanent soul) seems clearly to have been intended to deny the Jain doctrine of indestructible souls or spirits pervading all matter. Int. § 184.

indeed he shows how the four divine qualities (Brahma-vihārā)<sup>1</sup> unite the individual with Brahman, the latter being plainly not the personal deity Brahṃā. These divine qualities all make for unity and harmony, and Brahman<sup>2</sup> is evidently the fundamental spirit which unites all things, and from which the personal desires of the individual separate him with disastrous results of pain and sin.<sup>3</sup>

(b) The last words of the Buddha; effort and free will<sup>4</sup>

38. The last words of Gotama ('Individuals are transient; labour (therefore) strenuously')<sup>5</sup> are similarly opposed to the doctrine of transmigration. T. W. Rhys Davids<sup>6</sup> translates the latter part of this 'Work out your own salvation with diligence', but there is no mention of 'salvation' in the original. The Pāli word sampādetha means 'work (ye)'.<sup>7</sup> The Teacher says 'Our compound nature must [soon] dissolve; [therefore] labour diligently'. The opposite of this is the conclusion of individualism: 'Enjoy to-day, for to-morrow we die.' The other conclusion is possible only on an altruistic and monistic basis:<sup>8</sup> 'There is so little time to play one's part; therefore work zealously.'

39. Behind the individual self and the visible world there lies, in the Indian mind, the fundamental idea of the Whole,<sup>9</sup> the impersonal divine One, the universal breath or spirit (atta), the creative force or <sup>7</sup> Int. §§ 8, 44, 68; Ch. 18 c § 6 [4] (Self); Ap. G 2 a (Unity). Compare the Nomos, logos, pan, holon, phusis, pneuma, of the Stoics (Int. §§ 97, 186 n). Cp. 'Western thought . . . represents a world-and-life affirmation which is no longer completely ethical. . . . It endeavours now to derive ideals from reality. And it reaches a point where it no longer allows man to be preoccupied with his relation to infinite Being, but only with his relation to human society. . . . Western thought is not governed like mystical thought by the idea that the one thing needful is the spiritual union of man with infinite Being': A. Schweitzer, Indian Thought and its Development (1936), pp. 253-4. The fundamental law stated by Buddha—'Everything that has by nature an origin has also by nature an end' (Ch. 5 c § 7)—taken with his an-attā doctrine (Ch. 5 c §§ 1-5) and his view of Nibbāna (Ap. C b) implies that the individual, arising from and returning to the divine unity, dwells in it and is separated from it only by grasping and egoism which can be transcended, and equally affirms the reality of life and duty. Compare the Stoic maxim: 'God has placed it in man's power not to be sundered in any way from the whole and has empowered him when sundered to come back and grow together again', Marcus Aurelius, viii. 34.

Brahman (neuter).<sup>1</sup> With the idea of the transience of the individual self there comes, therefore, not a feeling of the crumbling away of Law, the dethronement of personal Rulership, and a reckless irresponsibility or despair, as to the modern Western, markedly individualistic, mind, but a sense of reconciliation and unity, and of the due subordination of the unstable to the stable,<sup>2</sup> of the individual to the One.<sup>3</sup> So for the Western cry, 'Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die', is substituted the Eastern, 'We are transient; let us strive without ceasing!'

40. The doctrine of free will<sup>4</sup> could hardly be more clearly stated than here: 'Labour diligently; strive arduously.' Such effort necessarily implies freedom of will. This and kindred sayings of the Teacher, 'Depend upon yourselves',<sup>5</sup> and 'You can attain full wisdom in this present life',<sup>6</sup> constitute a clear denial not only of the doctrine of predestination, but of the Indian doctrine of personal Karma. The latter implies a fatalistic evolution of the results of actions, good or bad, done in the past, and therefore beyond control, though possibly expiable by a new effort of will. Gotama calls for self-dependence and eager activity in the present, not, however, on behalf of the self, since such grasping, whether for immediate or ultimate reward, is the source of all sorrow, therefore necessarily on behalf of others.<sup>7</sup>

REBIRTH<sup>8</sup> AND THE DISCOURSE TO SĪHA<sup>9</sup> THE JAIN. THE WORDS KIRIYA-VĀDA AND A-KIRIYA-VĀDA; JAINISM

41. During one of his visits to Vesālī Gotama attracted the attention and won the admiration of Sīha,<sup>10</sup> the General of the Licchavis, the dominant clan of the Vajjian Confederacy. Sīha was a follower of the Jains,<sup>11</sup> a religious sect established not long previously by Mahāvīra, himself a member of the Licchavi clan and a somewhat older contemporary of the Buddha. In the account handed down to us in the Mahā-Vagga<sup>12</sup> of the Vinaya Piṭaka the General is represented as asking permission of the Jain leader to interview Gotama, and as being refused that permission on the ground that the recluse Gotama taught a-kiriya-vāda.<sup>13</sup> Sīha finally, however, decided to disregard this prohibition and to visit the new Teacher, whom he at once questioned as to whether he taught a-kiriya-vāda or not. Gotama is represented as replying that he taught both a-kiriya-vāda and kiriya-vāda, since he taught abstention from evil actions and the performance of good actions. From this reply it is evident that he is represented as having taken the word a-kiriya-vāda to mean 'the doctrine of non-action', i.e. passivism, and the word kiriya-vāda to mean 'the doctrine of action' or activism.<sup>1</sup> It seems evident, however, that the reporter of the incident, as we now have it in the Canon,<sup>2</sup> misapprehended the reply, for the Jains themselves were passivists (i.e. a-kiriya-vādins in this sense) and their leader cannot have reproached Gotama with being what he himself and his own followers were. Believing in the dangerous consequences of an active life, the Jains taught the utmost possible passivity.<sup>3</sup> It seems to follow, therefore, that in the present passage the word a-kiriya-vāda cannot mean 'the doctrine of non-action' (passivism); it seems more than probable that the word here really means 'non-belief in action (Karma)'.

42. Gotama's reply, which, as we at present have it, seems in no way to distinguish his teaching from that of any other moral teacher, would then become distinctive and appropriate, signifying that in one sense he was not a believer in the doctrine of Karma, but that in another he was. Disbelieving in the permanence of the individual soul he could not accept the Hindu doctrine of Karma implying the transmigration of the soul at death to a new body; but believing fully in moral responsibility<sup>4</sup> and the consequences of all acts, words, and thoughts,<sup>5</sup> he fully accepted the doctrine of Karma in another sense, implying the transmission of the effects of actions from one generation of men to all succeeding generations.<sup>6</sup> Whereas the Jains can scarcely be conceived of as reproaching Gotama with being a non-activist (passivist), partly because they were themselves passivists, and partly because, as a teacher of the Noble Eightfold Path, he was obviously not open to the reproach of passivism, it is quite possible that his opponents did think him open to a charge of moral irresponsibility, which in their eyes was involved in the rejection of the Hindu doctrine of Karma. Thus it is likely that they would charge him with being a non-believer in Karma, i.e. a teacher of the doctrine of moral irresponsibility. Gotama himself strenuously rejected this charge, as is evidenced by the rare vehemence with which he attacked the teaching of Makkhali Gosāla,<sup>7</sup> a contemporary nihilist thinker, who maintained that all actions were indifferent in their effects. The pernicious nature of this doctrine was fiercely emphasized by Gotama,<sup>1</sup> who rarely departed from his habitual attitude of tolerance.<sup>2</sup>

43. In the Book of the Great Decease Gotama is represented as teaching how some actions have effects and others have none, and that the latter are of a higher moral order. That the piercing and practical mind of Gotama should have taught any such metaphysical doctrine is more than unlikely. It seems highly probable that here again the reporter of the Sutta failed to understand the Teacher's statement that in one sense he rejected the doctrine of Karma and in another he did not, i.e. that he did not believe in the effect of actions upon one individual after rebirth but did believe in the effect of actions upon all subsequent generations of men.<sup>3</sup>

44. Jainism, which in its origin was contemporary with and the rival of Buddhism, accepted, as radical parts of the faith, the doctrines of Rebirth and Spiritism.<sup>4</sup> In ignoring the Vedas<sup>5</sup> and their ritual, and caste, and in advocating universal love based on the idea of an impersonal all-pervading One,<sup>6</sup> or in the case of the Jains an affinity of all-pervading indestructible spirits, the two faiths resembled each other. It may be questioned whether Gotama's creed would have really differed from that of his somewhat older contemporary, the Licchavi Rājput Mahāvīra, the founder of the rival religion or sect, if he had also accepted the doctrines of Rebirth and Spiritism. Yet a distinction, and a great one, must have existed. Between such men it cannot have been one of minor points or a matter of mere names or of personal rivalry. At a later period, indeed, both these doctrines were included in the Buddhist creed, and then the distinction between the two faiths became blurred, as ultimately that between Buddhism and Hinduism. What was really distinctive of Gotama's teaching was 'that Nirvāṇa, that highest good, which one might in no long time, and in the present life, learn for oneself and realize and live in possession of'.<sup>7</sup> This was none other than the peace of mind obtainable by the self-forgetful activity of the Eightfold Path,<sup>8</sup> and not any state to be attained in a future life.

45. It may be asked why, if Gotama rejected the doctrine of Rebirth, he did not renounce it. But it is a remarkable characteristic of Gotama that he denounced no religious beliefs.<sup>9</sup> He rejected the

Vedas, and did not denounce, but rather ignored, them; he rejected sacrificial ritual and caste, but denounced neither, though he held up in contrast the nature and duties of the true worshipper<sup>1</sup> and Brāhman<sup>2</sup> and the practice of the four divine virtues or Brahma-vihārā.<sup>3</sup>

46. Tolerance and gentleness were deeply rooted in his nature and mode of thought. And it is consistent that a doctrine of universal love and brotherhood<sup>4</sup> should not destroy but build up; when the new edifice is ready and suffices, it will be time for the old to be destroyed. It is the revealed dogmatic religions that denounce and uproot. Gotama strove to uproot only egotism, and this could be done only by love, not by hate.<sup>5</sup> That the things of which we know him to have expressed strong disapproval are limited in number is consistent with his outlook upon the world.

REBIRTH<sup>6</sup> AND (a) THE EDICTS OF ASOKA; (b) THE ESSENTIALS OF THE DHAMMA

(a) The Edicts of Asoka;<sup>7</sup> the Mauryan stupas at Bharhut and Sāñchi<sup>8</sup>

47. The Edicts of the Emperor Asoka (about 250 B.C.) are found engraved on rocks and pillars sparsely scattered over the provinces of his vast Indian empire. Their authenticity and that of the creed which they set forth are indisputable. They summarize with care, and again and again, the Dhamma of Buddha in the form in which it was accepted by the ruler of the greater part of India somewhat more than two centuries after the death of Gotama, and about two and a half centuries before the birth of Christ. They give us therefore a reliable picture of the state of the Buddhist faith at that period as it presented itself at least to a superior and commanding mind. Doubtless in minds of an inferior order it appeared in a somewhat different form, less clearly separated from the current superstitions of the time. That Asoka considered his creed perfectly accordant with the orthodox Dhamma of the time seems clear from the Sārnāth minor pillar edict<sup>9</sup> in which he declares that 'the unity of the Church (Samgha)' must not be broken.

48. The Dhamma accepted by the Emperor Asoka is in almost all essentials that presented in the various summaries of the faith found clearly stated in the earliest books of the Canon.<sup>1</sup> The apparent inconsistency lies in Asoka's seeming insistence on 'Heaven (sagga)',<sup>2</sup> and on the results of actions in 'the next world', though these phrases conceivably, and even probably, refer to Nibbāna in this life, and to the state of conversion<sup>3</sup> respectively, whilst the sanctions of the rewards of heaven as well as the punishments of hell are appeals to the individual and to self-interest, which are inconsistent with Gotama's doctrine of the non-existence or rather the non-permanent existence of the individual or self.<sup>4</sup> Gotama taught the doctrine of present peace or release from selfishness on earth,<sup>5</sup> and emphasized the endless effects of actions—deeds, words, and thoughts—on future generations,<sup>6</sup> and the step from these two positions to the individualistic sanctions of heaven and hell would doubtless be easy and comprehensible. Of Karma, however, in the usual Hindu personal sense, there is no trace in the emperor's edicts. In many of the books of the Buddhist Canon<sup>7</sup> personal Karma figures prominently. The conclusion seems justified that those portions of the Canon in which that doctrine appears are either of later date than the Emperor Asoka, or were not accepted by him and by the Buddhist teachers<sup>8</sup> who surrounded and influenced him. The Edicts of Asoka may be used as a touchstone to test the age of portions of the Canonical Books.

49. The doctrine of Harmlessness (a-himsā),<sup>9</sup> or the sanctity of animal life, is more strongly insisted upon by the emperor than by the Buddha, who instructed the mendicant brothers to eat whatever was placed before them without picking and choosing, but not to permit Pratt, Pilgrimage of Buddhism, 1928, p. 205), which, whilst describing the Hinayāna Buddhism of present-day Cambodia, may be applicable also, if not to the Buddhism of Asoka, yet to the popular Buddhism of his time. 'Preas Prohm [i.e. the impersonal Brahman] has no cult and plays but a small rôle in the thoughts of any but the most learned and philosophical. Nippean [i.e. Nirvāna], too, is not a matter of much practical importance. Heaven and hell, on the other hand, are much more lively, definite, and interesting conceptions for both laity and clergy. Heaven is a kind of terrestrial paradise situated on Tray-trong (Mt. Meru of Indian mythology). It has three gradations, in an ascending scale: namely, that of the laity, the bonzes, and the ascetics. The bonzes play a much more prominent place (sic) in the minds of the Cambodian Buddhists than either Nirvāna or rebirth. Hell is no less real, and is a constant peril to the unwary.' The unimportance of the next world in the early Buddhist scheme is shown in Ch. 14 f § 4 [2] n.

the slaughter of animals for meals specially prepared for them.<sup>1</sup> The edicts do not state expressly the fundamental unity of life but the doctrine of a-himsā implies it, as does the Canonical Tevijja Sutta<sup>2</sup> and, indeed, the whole of Gotama's doctrine of selflessness and non-individualism.<sup>3</sup> The periodical return of all things to the fundamental Unity is implied in the mention of 'the end of the cycle (kappa, kalpa)'<sup>4</sup> in Rock Edict IV. Of gods or spirits<sup>5</sup> there is no mention in the edicts, with the doubtful exception of one passage which has been rendered by translators as stating that 'the gods who were regarded as true all over India (in Jambudvīpa) have been shown to be untrue',<sup>6</sup> and, further, that involved in the formal and conventional title of the king, Devānampiyā (literally, Beloved of the Gods, i.e. His Sacred Majesty).<sup>7</sup>

50. That the Dhamma as summarized in the edicts was a living and working creed may be seen by a comparison with the Japanese Imperial Edict of 1890, circulated to educational institutions by the Japanese Board of Education. The resemblance of the latter to several of the Edicts of Asoka is most striking; in spirit it seems practically identical with them, and shows a continuity of thought lasting for over two thousand years. The edict<sup>8</sup> runs:

'Know ye, Our Subjects—

'Our Imperial Ancestors have founded our Empire on a basis broad and everlasting and have deeply and finally implanted virtue. Our subjects, ever united in loyalty and filial piety, have from generation to generation illustrated the beauty thereof. This is the glory of the fundamental character of our Empire, and herein also lies the source of our education.

'Ye, our subjects, be filial to your parents, affectionate to your brothers and sisters, as husbands and wives be harmonious, as friends true; bear yourselves in modesty and moderation; extend your benevolence to all; pursue learning and cultivate arts, and thereby develop intellectual faculties and perfect moral powers; furthermore, advance public good and promote common interests. Always respect the constitution and observe the laws; should emergency arise offer yourselves courageously to the State, and thus guard and maintain the prosperity of our Imperial Throne, co-eval with heaven and earth. So ye shall not only be our good and faithful subjects, but render illustration to the best traditions of your fore-fathers.

Imperial Ancestors, to be observed alike by Their Descendants and the subjects, infallible for all ages and true in all places. It is Our wish to lay it to heart in all reverence in common with you, Our subjects, that we all thus attain to the same virtue.'

51. Save for the passages in the Asokan Edicts which apparently profess belief in a future world, there is an almost perfect accord between the religion of Asoka and the Dhamma of the Buddha. The Dhamma of Asoka affords an almost exact cursory presentation of the Dhamma of Gotama Buddha, from whose lifetime it was separated by scarcely two and a half centuries—a doctrine of devoted altruistic service, based on a belief in the divine unity of all things but without personal deity or deities; without formal ritual or ceremonies,<sup>1</sup> but with a sense that all actions properly regarded are acts of worship; without expectation of personal reward other than the joy and peace of well-doing; and with no sanction save the betterment or suffering of others both now and in all future generations.<sup>2</sup>

52. Although the doctrine of Rebirth makes no appearance in the Edicts of Asoka,<sup>3</sup> it none the less took a large place in the popular form of the Buddhist belief shortly after that emperor's reign and doubtless also during his lifetime. The very animated sculptures on the late Mauryan stūpas at Bharhut and Sāñchī<sup>4</sup> depict incidents described in the ġātaka or Book of the Previous Births of the Buddha. The ġātaka<sup>5</sup> consists largely of ancient Hindu tales, illustrating the virtue of self-sacrifice, which have been adapted by the Buddhists to form narratives of the previous existences of Gotama Buddha as a Bodhisatta (wisdom-being or future Buddha). These tales fully adopt the Hindu theory of rebirth. The stūpas at Bharhut and Sāñchī date from about the close of the third century B.C., when evidently popular Buddhism did not differ from Hinduism in this respect. None the less, some three hundred years later the orthodox Hinayāna text-book, the Milinda-panhā,<sup>6</sup> emphatically denied the truth of the theory of Rebirth, though it asserted the transfer of Karma at the death of the individual to another individual newly born.

Nikāya, that is a code of social duties based upon the Four Noble Truths.<sup>1</sup> In the opening chapter of the Book of the Great Decease the Buddha is described as preaching during all the earlier stages of his last great tour a 'comprehensive religious discourse',<sup>2</sup> which may be taken as summarizing the essentials of his faith.<sup>3</sup> This discourse deals with three specific subjects, namely virtuous action (sīla), abstraction or rapture (samādhi), and reason (paññā). It is noticeable that samādhi is the last section (sammā-samādhi) of the Noble Eightfold Path, whilst paññā is practically identical with the first section (sammā-diṭṭhi, right view or outlook). Reason (paññā) is necessary, and likewise religious rapture (samādhi); but these qualities, which might be exercised in solitary retirement, will not suffice without activity, that virtuous action (sīla), which the Eightfold Path enjoins.<sup>4</sup> Reason is required for the true comprehension of the first three of the Four Noble Truths, and good deeds are enjoined by the fourth of these, the Noble Eightfold Path; but samādhi,<sup>5</sup> religious feeling or earnest contemplation, is required in addition to mere rationalism and mere duty, in order to introduce that love (mettā),<sup>6</sup> which makes of altruism a living principle, not a mere rational theory scarcely distinguishable from highly enlightened self-interest or Epicureanism. And mystical religious rapture<sup>7</sup> is not sufficient, unaccompanied on the one hand by clear reason and on the other by practical well-doing. The three-fold division of the essentials of the doctrine in the 'comprehensive discourse' covers the same ground as the sevenfold division of fundamental truths taught by the Master, which appears in a later passage of the Book of the Great Decease.<sup>1</sup> Of these the first six divisions may be said to correspond with samādhi and paññā of the 'comprehensive discourse'. The seventh is the Noble Eightfold Path.

Brahman; Ch. 13 c § 20, paññā). These oppose the three Fires of hate, desire, and delusion; Ap. D a § 10. The subject of Majjh. 44 is selfhood (sakkāya), its composite nature, its origination (Ch. 5 b § 6) in craving and its cessation in Nibbāna. This summary survey of the Dhamma contains no reference to rebirth apart from the disputable and unsupported word ponobbhavikā. A summary of the orthodox doctrine of Hinayāna Buddhism is thus presented in A Buddhist Catechism by Subhadra Bhikshu (1890), pp. 58-9: 'Buddhism teaches the reign of perfect goodness and wisdom without a personal God, continuance of individuality without an immortal soul, eternal happiness without a local heaven, the way of salvation without a vicarious Saviour, redemption worked out by each one himself, without any prayers, sacrifices and penances, without the ministry of ordained priests, without the intercession of saints, without divine mercy. Finally it teaches that supreme perfection is attainable even in this life and on this earth.' Each of these points may be tested by the ancient canonical texts collected in this volume.

54. In the final discourse which Gotama delivered to his disciples, in the moments shortly preceding his death, he uttered the words: 'It may be, Ānanda, that some of you will think, "The word (pāva-canam)<sup>2</sup> is now without a Teacher; we have now no Teacher". But that, Ānanda, is not the correct view. The Law (dhammo ca) and Discipline (vinayo ca), which I have taught and enjoined upon you is to be your teacher when I am gone.' Overlaid as the Law (dhamma) and Discipline (vinaya) have been by later accumulations, the difficulty is to get down to that stratum in which the original doctrine and rules are to be found.<sup>3</sup> We must look first to the great Sermon in the Deerpark at Isipatana near Benāres, with which he set the wheel of the Law rolling.<sup>4</sup> Here we have the Four Noble Truths, of which the first three are the basis for the fourth, the Noble Eightfold Path, the position of which, at the forefront and again at the close of the Truths, emphasizes its supreme importance. Again, in the discourse to Subhadda,<sup>5</sup> the wandering Brāhman ascetic who was the Great Teacher's last convert, Gotama is represented as saying: 'In whatever doctrine and discipline the Noble Eightfold Path is not found, therein also is not found the pious devotee (samaṇo) of the first, second, third or fourth degree. . . . Now in this Doctrine and Discipline, O Subhadda, the Noble Eightfold Path is found. . . . Destitute of true devotees are all other creeds.' Here then in the Noble Eightfold Path is the centre of Gotama's teaching.<sup>6</sup> This position is fully brought out in the Mahā-Satipatṭhāna Sutta (Discourse on fixing the attention, or The Intent Contemplations) of the Dīgha Nikāya,<sup>7</sup> in which the Buddha is represented as saying that 'There is but one way open to mortals for the attainment of purity, for the overcoming of sorrow and lamentation, for the abolition of misery and grief, for the acquisition of the correct rule of conduct, for the realization of Nibbāna, and that is the Four Intent Contemplations'; whilst this Discourse on the Contemplations is nothing else than an expansion of the seventh section (on sammā-sati, right contemplation) of the Eightfold Path.

55. In all the great Conversion Sermons,<sup>8</sup> again, as in the First Sermon, delivered at Benāres, and the last, delivered to Subhadda by the dying Teacher, it is always the Truths and the Path that are dwelled upon,<sup>9</sup> the burning fires of personal desire, the peace ensuing on their extinction.<sup>1</sup> No other features will be found prominent in any of these crucial discourses. The discourse to the First Missioners,<sup>2</sup> also, delivered at Benāres after the conferences held there during the first Was, contains nothing more than these same points, strange as this fact seems to those who look for dogma and metaphysical subtleties in the teachings of the Founder of Buddhism, instead of the purest ethical doctrine, the doctrine of selfless activity, of complete but balanced and practical altruism.<sup>3</sup> The principle of Karma<sup>4</sup> so far as it figures here must necessarily conform to this altruistic basis of the Truths. Whatever conflicts with the Truths and the Way is likely to prove, on examination, to be of later date than the Teacher's doctrine, and to have been added by followers who failed to grasp firmly the essential truths of the doctrine.<sup>5</sup> These developments and subtleties we owe, not to Gotama, but to his successors, often, indeed, great Doctors of the Law,<sup>6</sup> but lesser Teachers.

And this it was—according to the Canonical legend, the great Apadāna—which first suggested to Gotama the ideal that lay in the "going forth", the pabbajjā, from the world to end sorrow:—"The excellence, namely, of righteous and peaceful conduct, of good and worthy action, of harming none, of compassion to creatures". <sup>6</sup> The Dhamma may be summed up as the law of altruism, based upon the fundamental divine unity, and fortified by the sanctions of the continuous consequences of actions (deeds, words, and thoughts); or more briefly the law of unity (Ch. 7 a § 20; Ap. F 1 b § 6; Ap. G 2 a), continuity (Ap. B b), and altruism (Int. § 3; Ap. D a). Cp. Ch. 6 a § 4 [6, dhamma-cakkhu]; Ap. G 2 a § 10.

<sup>8</sup> The foundation of the Canon consists of the amata, anattā, nibbāna (with the Noble Truths and Way), and mettā doctrines (cp. IN 5 b, Essentials; IN 9; and Ch. 10 a § 6 [4] n), together with the first Vinaya rules. Accretions to these are the theories of rebirth (IN 5), of heaven and hell (IN 2 a), of gods and spirits (IN 8 a), of the Tathāgatas (Ch. 5 b § 4 [17] n), of merit through the Saṃgha (Ap. H 1 § 6 n), of supernatural powers (Ap. I, Note, iddhi), of the unreality of life (Ap. D b, Māyā), of origination (Ap. B c), of trance (Ap. I a § 1 [175] n; to which must be added varied increments from the poetical histories (Ap. 2 a Note), the rearrangement of the Suttantas (Ch. 20, suttanta), and Commentarial additions to the Sutta-Piṭaka (Int. § 21) and to the Vinaya-Piṭaka (Ch. 4, iii, Mahā-vagga, and § 10 n). The mention of the Yonas (Greeks) with the Kambojans as bordering nations in Majjh. 93 (Ch. 14 a § 7 n) is more than conjecturally significant. On stages in the

The Council consisted of five hundred members of the Order, and met in the Satta-panṇi cave of the Vaihāra (Vebhāra) hill, in the immediate neighbourhood of Rājagaha, and under the patronage of King Ajātasattu. All the members recited the words attributed to the Teacher, Upāli leading during the recitation of the Rules<sup>1</sup> (Vinaya), and Ānanda during the recitation of the Law (Dhamma) contained in Gotama's Discourses (Suttas). A second Council was found to be necessary about a hundred years later and was held at Vesālī.<sup>2</sup> The decisions then reached did not settle the differences which had arisen in the Order, and the dissentients forthwith held another Council, which was much more numerously attended and was consequently called the Mahā-saṅgiti<sup>3</sup> or Great Council; and thus was created the first formal schism after the death of Gotama. Still another Council is said to have been held at Pāṭaliputta<sup>4</sup> during the reign of Asoka,<sup>5</sup> whose son Mahinda is said to have converted the inhabitants of Ceylon and carried with him the Sacred Canon still preserved there. Another Council was held, under the patronage of the Emperor Kanishka, in the first century A.D.<sup>6</sup>

We have first the period of the Buddha and his immediate successors, about whose views on philosophical questions little positive assertion can be made. Next comes the period of the earliest dogmatism represented by the greater part of the four Pāli Nikāyas, excluding the small amount of really early matter and those parts which belong to the next period. To the latter belongs the development of the Abhidharma, contained in the earlier books of the Pāli Abhidhamma and the Sarvāstivādin Jñānaprasthāna with its six feet, about which latter little is yet known. Finally there is the stage of the full-blown Abhidharma. ...' All these were held before the rise of the Northern Buddhist school known as the Mahā-yāna (Great Vehicle),<sup>1</sup> as distinguished from the Hīna-yāna (Little Vehicle) or old Indian, sometimes called Southern, school of Buddhism.<sup>2</sup>

57. A continual process of divergence from the original doctrines of the Teacher is thus evident.<sup>3</sup> It is noticeable that the Mahā-saṅgīti,<sup>4</sup> or Great Council of dissentients mentioned above, stigmatized by the Dīpavamsa (Bhānavāra) as 'heretics', not only passed resolutions relaxing the strict ascetic rules by means of 'indulgences', but rejected a large part of the Canon as now known, thus apparently resisting, though with imperfect success, the tendency to Hinduize<sup>5</sup> the practice, and to add to the number of the sacred books, of Buddhism. The tendency to add to the Canon is evident from Buddhaghosa's account of the first Council. Of this account T. W. Rhys Davids writes:

'In the Commentarial tradition of the procedure at the First Council, as told by Buddhaghosa (Sum. Vil., i. 15), in the Commentary on the Dīgha Nikāya [No. 33, the Saṅgīti Suttanta], it is related that whereas Ānanda was required to testify to the circumstances under which every Sutta in the Nikāya [Dīgha Nikāya] was uttered, the other three [early] Nikāyas were handed over to the disciples of (the late) Sāriputta, Mahā-Kassapa (the president) and Anuruddha respectively. Thus it was the Majjhima that fell to the school of Sāriputta.'<sup>6</sup>

58. Thus neither the fifth or Khuddaka Nikāya nor the Abhidhamma (the third, explanatory or metaphysical Piṭaka) receives mention in the earliest tradition of the first Council, and both consequently may be deemed as later and less authoritative additions, however ancient. Both the Abhidhamma and the fifth Nikāya indeed are mentioned in a later portion of Buddhaghosa's narrative (in § 41 and § 42 respectively), but that these did not form part of the original tradition is evidenced by the fact that reciters of the Vinaya or Rules (viz. Upāli) and first four Nikāyas (as above) are named, the Abhidhamma and

A careful investigation of the Sutta-piṭaka would lead to similar results. As in the case of the Vinaya, we should be able to distinguish various strata representing the literary activity of those different periods': H. Oldenberg, Vin. Piṭ., 1879, vol. i, p. xxiii.

From the confused manner in which Ānanda is sometimes said to have been the authority for every Sutta in the Nikāyas and sometimes the reciter of the first Nikāya only, one may perhaps gather that the other great disciples mentioned or their schools were authorized by the Council to form supplementary collections of Suttas. This would be the business-like thing to do, and these early Councils understood practical procedure and the nature of affairs.<sup>1</sup>

59. The controversy of Devadatta, Gotama's cousin, with the Buddha in the later years of the latter's mission throws much light upon the nature of Gotama's teaching and upon opposing tendencies within the Order. Gotama's aim was the extinction of egoism by means of the analysis contained in the Four Noble Truths and especially by the social activity of the Eightfold Path;<sup>4</sup> Devadatta aimed at transcending the ego by ascetic practices, similar to those of the orthodox Hindus,<sup>5</sup> so reverting to the position of Gotama before the Enlightenment.

60. The following account of the Schism is given by T. W. Rhys Davids<sup>6</sup> in his Buddhism (pp. 75-7) on the authority of the Vinaya Piṭaka (Culla-vagga, VII. iii. 14-17):

‘ . . . Gautama came to Rājagriha to spend the rainy season in the Veḷuvana Wihāra, and Devadatta still professing himself a Buddhist, asked permission to found a new Order under his own leadership, the rules of which should be much more stringent than those adopted by Gautama. The refusal of this is said to have determined him to break with Buddhism altogether, and to found a new religion of his own. . . . [He] formally called upon Gautama to insist on the stricter rules which he advocated. These were, that the mendicants should live in the open air, and not close to towns; should dress in cast-off rags; should always beg their food from door to door (that is never accept invitations, or food sent to the Wihāras); and should eat no meat; Gautama answered that his precepts could be kept in any place, and that he had no objection to such members of the Order as wished to do so keeping stricter rules, but that they were not necessary, and could not be kept at all by the young or delicate; as to food, the members of the Order might eat whatever was customary in the countries where they were, so long as they eat without indulgence of the appetite. It was possible to become holy at the foot of a tree, or in a house; in cast-off clothes, or in clothes given by laymen; whilst abstaining from flesh, or whilst using it. To establish one uniform law would be a hindrance in the way of those who were seeking Nirvāna; and it was to show men the way to Nirvāna<sup>1</sup> which was his sole aim. Devadatta upon this returned to his own Wihāra, and founded a new and stricter Order, which gradually grew in numbers. . . .'

Piṭ.* which are possibly of later date.

61. In refusing Devadatta's propositions Gotama once more emphasized his rejection of all isolation, ascetic self-seeking, and self-righteousness. The Samgha was a society for the teaching and service of others, not an isolated class of devotees straining towards ultimate emancipation.

62. It would appear that Devadatta and his followers, demanding the strictest asceticism, rejected Gotama, on account of the latter's persistent advocacy of the Middle Way,<sup>2</sup> and turned to the Tathāgatas, the previous Buddhas,<sup>3</sup> to whom Gotama possibly referred in general terms from time to time as teachers of the ancient doctrine of Selflessness, and to whom in course of time specific names were given. From Fa Hian<sup>4</sup> we learn that in the fifth century A.D. the followers of Devadatta, established near Srāvasti, rejected Gotama and revered the three previous Buddhas and especially Kāśyapa Buddha, who was declared to be the latest of the line.<sup>5</sup> Thus Devadatta evidently secured important and lasting support among the more conservative Buddhists, who still held to the Hindu ideal of the strictest asceticism as the true road to ultimate bliss, and turned their thoughts to the past, real or imaginary, and were perhaps largely responsible for the reintroduction of the sanctions of Samsāra and Rebirth,<sup>6</sup> that wonderful Indian system of reward and punishment leading the spirit of man onward by means of desire and fear, which to Gotama, with his non-personal ideal,<sup>7</sup> must have seemed selfish, but which certainly point to the path of virtue in every other respect.

63. It is noticeable that in the Ceylonese Kamma-vācā<sup>8</sup> the Four Reliances are so stated that the strict form, exactly as demanded by Devadatta,<sup>9</sup> appears first in each case, and the allowable 'exceptions', as in the Middle Way of Gotama, follow. The Kamma-vācā rules are very ancient and may have been drawn from India at the time of the conversion of Ceylon in the reign of Asoka. This suggests the wide

(a) The Return of the Gods; Spirits<sup>2</sup>

64. Gotama's own belief regarding the origin and government of the phenomenal world is indicated in the latter part of the Tevijja Sutta<sup>3</sup> in the Digha-Nikāya. There he states that in the practice of the four Brahma-vihārā or Divine Virtues, namely, universal love or charity (mettā), universal pity (karuṇā), universal sympathy with joy (muditā), and serenity (upekkhā),<sup>4</sup> will be found a means of union with the Highest. In the earlier part of the same Sutta he ridicules the notion of union with Brahmā, the chief deity of the Hindus, on the ground that none of the teachers who profess to be able to secure this union has any knowledge of, or any possibility of knowing, the god with whom union is to be secured. The Brahma-vihārā are all unifying qualities, in accord with a belief in a common divine impersonal origin as the Brahman of the Vedāntists,<sup>5</sup> the universal soul, Ātman or Param-ātman. In the exercise of these virtues the worshipper is bidden to fill all the six regions of the heavens (the four quarters, the zenith, and the nadir) with thoughts of them severally.

65. In the Singālovāda Sutta<sup>6</sup> the householder Singāla, who is found by Gotama near the ancient city of Rājagaha turning to the Hindu gods of the six regions of the heavens, is bidden by Buddha to cease from such practices and in the future to make offerings only of duty to his fellow men divided into six classes beginning with parents and teachers.

66. In the First Sermon<sup>7</sup> setting forth the Four Noble Truths, the fundamentals of the Dhamma, there is no mention whatsoever of gods <sup>1</sup> This point needs consideration apart from the question how far the Hindu doctrine of Karma was accepted (i) by Buddha himself, and (ii) by his later followers: IN 1-6; Int. §§ 22 n, 24, 28; Ch. 10 a § 6 [4] n; Ap. G 2 a, Note; also Ch. 8 h § 2 n, and Ap. I, Note (Sāṅkhya). The influencing forces are Vedānta (idealistic monism), Sāṅkhya (dualism), and Yoga (spirit-union), Jainism (personal salvation through rebirth), Bhakti (personal adoration), and an ever-recurring animism with corresponding charms and rites (Ap. G 2 c).

<sup>2</sup> IN 2 b; IN 6 (Canon) n; Int. §§ 35, 35 ii, n, 49, 88, 93, 118, 134, 176; Ch. 12 a § 10 [5]; Ch. 13 c § 17 n; Ch. 13 e § 2 [2] (Devadatta); Ch. 14 c § 12 [1] n; Ch. 14 f § 9 [401] n; Ch. 21 § 11 [12] n; Ch. 22 b §§ 9 [18] n, 28; Ch. 22 c §§ 3, 6; Ap. A 2 d; Ap. C a § 1 [94]; Ap. D b § 6 [1]; Ap. D c § 4 (Āsuras). Cp. Ap. G 2 a (Unity); Ap. G 2 b (Power); Ap. H 3 a § 2 (Brahmā). The first two subdivisions of the poetical Sagātha-vagga of the Saṃyutta-Nikāya are called Devatā-saṃyutta and Devaputta-saṃyutta. It is noticeable that there are no great female deities in the Hinayāna Canon. Excepting a few names in common, the mythology developed by the 'Western' Brāhmins and that adopted by the Hinayāna Buddhists of the Middleland are independent. The Gods of Northern Buddhism by Alice Getty (1914) should be consulted.

or spirits; but the last section of the Noble Eightfold Path, which is the Fourth Noble Truth, is Sammā-samādhi, right-rapture, ecstasy or meditation, which was afterwards developed, doubtless by the Buddha's later followers, into the four stages of Trance (Jhāna).<sup>1</sup> In these trances may be seen a return to the practice of Yoga,<sup>2</sup> associated with the beliefs of the Vedāntists, who apparently were Gotama's teachers.<sup>3</sup>

67. The Paṭicca-samuppāda or Process of Dependent Origination,<sup>4</sup> the course of reasoning which is supposed to have occurred to the Buddha at the time of his Enlightenment,<sup>5</sup> shows the automatic rise of the individual, or perhaps rather the sense of individuality, from the universal, followed by the reverse of the process.<sup>6</sup> This process in the form, or rather the two forms, in which it has come down to us is confused and doubtless differs considerably from that which originally occurred to Gotama, but in any case the Paṭicca-samuppāda<sup>7</sup> is necessarily opposed to belief in a personal deity or deities, as Creator of the Universe or as rulers of the world.<sup>8</sup>

68. Gotama rejected the personal deities of Hinduism, and to him, it would appear, the source and origin of things was the impersonal Brahman,<sup>9</sup> the Divine, the Eternal, the Breath, the Life, the Mysterious, the Uncomprehended, the One, All. To the minds of his later followers, however, the gods and spirits of India, Hindu or otherwise, once more appealed.

"Then [Mara] thinking, "I did not attain the Ten Perfections, the conditions precedent to the acquisition of the extraordinary knowledge of the objects of sense [indriya-paropariyāñña], and therefore I have not become like him", he drew the eleventh line. Then thinking, "I did not attain to the Ten Perfections, the conditions precedent to the acquisition of the extraordinary knowledge of inclinations and dispositions [āsayānusaya-ñña], of the attainment of compassion [mahā-karuṇāsamāpatti-ñña], of the double miracle [yamakapāṭihira-ñña], of the removal of hindrances [anāvarana-ñña], and of omniscience [sabbāññūta-ñña]; therefore I have not become like him", he drew the five other lines.<sup>5</sup> And so he sat on the highway, drawing sixteen lines for these sixteen thoughts.'

The temptation by Māra does not appear in the much older Maha-Vagga account<sup>6</sup> of the four-times seven<sup>7</sup> days following the Great Enlightenment. It is mentioned, however, briefly, and in another form, in the Book of the Great Decease<sup>8</sup> (ch. iii).

70. Towards the close of the famous narrative of the First Sermon called the Dhammacakkappavattana-Sutta it is narrated<sup>9</sup> that the first of the Buddha's First Five Disciples, Kondañña, on this account named Aññāta-Kondañña (Kondañña who realized), was convinced and converted. The Buddha's joy was naturally great. In the closing words of the narrative, moreover, the joy of all the heavens at this commencement of the course of the Wheel of the Law (Dhamma) is poetically described. The spirits (devā) of the earth<sup>10</sup> gave forth a shout which was taken up by those of the spirit-spheres above, up to the seventh sphere,<sup>11</sup> the world of Brahmā,<sup>12</sup> beginning with that of the four great kings<sup>1</sup> or guardians of the four quarters of the world, and including the Tāvātimsa<sup>2</sup> and Tusita heavens. The 'ten-thousand-world-system'<sup>3</sup> quaked, and a miraculous light shone. The names of the Four Great Kings are given in the Mahā-Govinda Suttanta:<sup>4</sup> 'At the four quarters of the firmament sat the Four Great Kings. There was Dhatarattha, king of the East . . . Virūlhaka, king of the South . . . Virūpakkha, king of the West . . . and Vessavaṇa, king of the North, seated facing the South, presiding over his host. . . .' These kings appear already in the sculptures on the Mauryan Stupa at Bharhut erected about the close of the third century B.C.<sup>5</sup>

71. In the earlier part of the Book of the Great Decease the Buddha is said to have passed through Pātaliḡāma<sup>6</sup> (Pāṭaliputta) on his last journey from Magadha northwards. At this time King Ajātāsattu's ministers were building a fort at this spot to safeguard the kingdom of Magadha against the Vajjians. The narrative records that thousands of earth-spirits (devatā) visited the Buddha in a vision and that he thereupon prophesied the future prosperity of the city.<sup>7</sup>

72. He proceeded to Vesāli, and at the termination of his visit he assembled in the 'Service Hall' all the brethren residing in the neighbourhood, and delivered to them a farewell address, bidding them abide by the Dhamma, which he had established for 'the good and the gain and the weal of Spirits (devatā) and men'. The phraseology here is similar to that used in the instructions to the First Missioners.<sup>8</sup> Thus the spirits in this address, as in the instructions to the Missioners, are placed in subordination to the Dhamma (Law) of the Buddha.

73. In the narrative of the Great Enlightenment given in the Pāli Introduction to the Ĵātaka (Nidāna Kathā)<sup>9</sup> the Buddha after attaining enlightenment is represented as hesitating before the stupendous task of attempting to convert the world, and all the orders of the heavenly spirits, headed by Brahmā Sahampati (All-Ruler), entreat him to undertake his divine mission. Thus here Brahmā and all the host of spirits are placed in subordination to the Buddha personally, and not only to the Law or Dhamma. In the earlier Mahā-Vagga (Vinaya Piṭaka) account Brahmā Sahampati appears alone.

74. In the address delivered in the Service Hall near Vesāli (recorded in the Book of the Great Decease), as in the instructions to the First Missioners the spirits are mentioned only generally. In the narratives of the enlightenment and death of Buddha they have been divided into orders and subordinated to named deities.<sup>1</sup> That Gotama did not believe in gods requiring worship seems sufficiently clear.<sup>2</sup> That he did not believe in beings superior to, and risen by means of rebirth from the state of, man seems also clear.<sup>3</sup> But whether he believed that animals and men exhausted the category of conscious beings is not so clear. The phrase 'spirits and men', which occurs in the texts of the address in the Service Hall and in the instructions to the First Missioners, recurs frequently in passages which seem in other respects characteristic of Gotama's own teaching. Through some such opening as this, possibly, left in the Teacher's creed, there entered later Māra, Brahmā Sahampati, Sakka, and the whole host of the Three and Thirty Heavens<sup>4</sup> and endless worlds. Gods and spirits, heavenly portents and miracles, figure largely in the account of the death of the great Teacher in the Book of the Great Decease,<sup>5</sup> greatly enhancing the strangeness, if not the real impressiveness, of this fundamentally beautiful narrative. In two poetic Suttantas of the Dīgha Nikāya, namely the Mahā Samaya Suttanta and the Ātānāṭiyā Suttanta, the gods and spirits supporting or opposed to the Buddha appear in vast hosts and are elaborately classified.<sup>6</sup>

75. In spite of the mention of gods, or rather spirits (devatā), in the Canonical Books, and the general belief in them in Gotama's time,<sup>7</sup> there is no proof that he himself accepted the existence of supernatural beings. Mention of them in the Canon appears to be by way of later ornamental addition to enhance the importance of various occasions. Gotama's teaching in no way relies upon a belief in such spirits. At most they may have appeared to him to be possibilities, quite unessential to his creed. Their influence and power, if any, were absolutely ignored by the doctrine.

(b) Miracles<sup>8</sup>

76. In the Culla Vagga<sup>9</sup> (Vinaya Piṭaka) there is a description of how Gotama's disciple Piṇḍola Bhāradvāja performed a miracle of a not very dignified kind. A fine begging-bowl had been placed on the top of a lofty bamboo structure by the Setṭhi of Rājagaha, and the religious teachers present were invited to remove it by supernatural means. Piṇḍola Bhāradvāja easily discomfited the teachers of the rival sects by floating through the air and appropriating the bowl.

Gotama, it is said, on hearing of this performance expressed strong disapproval, and forbade any such miraculous displays in the future. It may be gathered from this narrative that Gotama disliked pretensions to miraculous powers and that he attempted no such exhibitions himself. His later followers apparently, however, were sensitive regarding the absence of such displays by the great Teacher, and attributed it not to want of ability but to deliberate purpose as in the narrative above.

78. In the story of the conversion of Yasa and of his father, the merchant prince (setṭhi), at Benāres<sup>3</sup> the narrative states that on the approach of the merchant the Blessed One decided that this was an appropriate occasion for displaying his miraculous powers, and he therefore made Yasa though present invisible. And then deciding that the time to close the miracle had arrived, he made Yasa visible once more. The quiet beauty of the narrative and the loftiness of its ethical tone are somewhat disturbed by this interlude.

79. In the early part of the Book of the Great Decease, when Gotama had arrived at Pāṭaligāma, the future capital to be known as Pāṭaliputta, on his way to the territory of the Vajjians, on the northern bank of the Ganges, the narrative attributes to him a miraculous crossing of the river together with his immediate followers without the aid of boats. The occasion gives rise to some appropriate reflections in verse<sup>4</sup> on the crossing of the stream of worldly desires, or perhaps rather the incident was suggested by the verses, which figured in an older popular poetic narrative. At the close of the same book miraculous powers are attributed to the Teacher's dead body, which at first cannot be raised from the spot where it lies and which subsequently is consumed by divine fires, which are in turn extinguished by supernatural showers, which have been preceded by a knee-deep fall of heavenly Mandārava flowers<sup>5</sup>—miraculous incidents which show how deeply the narrator's feelings were moved.

80. The passages which narrate miracles performed by the Buddha, his followers, his opponents, and the gods, have been omitted from the texts given below, but have been placed in summary form in the footnotes and have been classified in Note 9. None of these marvels is an inherent part of the narrative; all are apparently accretions.

81. In the Nidāna-kathā, or Pāli Introduction to the Jātaka, it is stated that Gotama seeking for enlightenment, having reached Rājagaha, the capital of the Magadhan king Bimbisāra, left that city in search of spiritual teachers, and placed himself first under Ālāra Kālāma<sup>5</sup> and then under Uddaka,<sup>6</sup> the disciple of Rāma, and 'acquired from them the eight stages of meditation'.<sup>7</sup> The succeeding passages treating of Gotama's period of discipleship under these Hindu philosophers present somewhat obscurely the Vedānta doctrine of the Param-ātman (Universal Soul), and the need of the individual ego to attain re-absorption therein.<sup>8</sup> Though Gotama ultimately rejected the teachings of both these ascetic thinkers, the Brāhman doctrine of the Param-ātman evidently remained as the basis of his own doctrine of the impermanence of the individual.<sup>9</sup> It is evident that a close sympathy survived between the greater pupil and his Hindu teachers.<sup>10</sup> On his Enlightenment the Buddha's first feeling was that as Ālāra Kālāma and Uddaka had so nearly attained the truth it was to them that he should first carry the new Dhamma (doctrine, law).

82. Ālāra's doctrine,<sup>11</sup> we learn from the Majjhima-Nikāya, conducted to the 'realm of nothingness'; that of Uddaka to the 'realm of neither perception nor yet non-perception'. The six preceding steps mentioned, commencing from the first, are the four trances,<sup>12</sup> the 'realm of infinity of space', and the 'realm of infinity of consciousness'.<sup>13</sup> In this same text a final stage is mentioned, namely, 'the

'Perhaps it is in the later Upanishads that we find the conception of illusion most explicitly stated, e.g., in the Svetasvatara Upanishads, xx. i. 10. . . "though the word is found for the first time in the Svetasvatara, the idea may be traced to the later stage of the Vedic Civilisation, and, though not in a systematic and organic form, is already found in the Rig-Veda and the Upanishads": W. It is one of many instances (as has been pointed out by Father Dahlmann) where the same expressions, used in the Pīṭakas of the Arahāt, are used in the older or later priestly speculation of God.'

cessation of perception and sensation'.<sup>1</sup> This final stage, however, is not a ninth step but an escape from all these intricacies. One may detect that the doctrines of Ālāra Kālāma and Uddaka were Vedāntist and taught a form of pantheism (māyā, illusion or idealistic monism), which did not satisfy Gotama's ethical instinct and strong sense of personal responsibility,<sup>2</sup> which latter could never be silenced by his sense of the transience of the individual. The monism of Buddha's ultimate belief is clear enough; but so also is its realism.

83. In rejecting the doctrines of Ālāra and Uddaka Gotama is said to have stated that they did not lead to 'aversion [from passion], absence [of passion], cessation [of sorrow], quiescence, knowledge, supreme wisdom, and Nirvāna [extinction, peace]'.<sup>3</sup> His rejection of the doctrines of his teachers may be taken to imply his instinctive though still undefined feeling that Nirvāna (peace) is not to be found in a passive or unconscious state, but in a state of pragmatic activity, such as he found later in the Noble Eightfold Path. Both teachers apparently taught some form of the Vedāntist theory of Māyā. Perhaps one may detect the difference that Ālāra taught a discipline leading to the ideal of the extinction of the individual soul in nothingness by the removal of illusion; whereas Uddaka taught the reabsorption of the individual soul in the universal Soul (Ātman), so that its individual perception would be extinguished but not its perception as part of the universal Soul. Neither of these ideals could satisfy Buddha's ethical impulses, since each, while endeavouring to break down the barriers of the ego, is concerned with only the individual ego that seeks salvation, that is to say, is still egoistic. Buddha's compassion was too great for him to leave his fellow sufferers thus.<sup>4</sup> He found the solution not in passive selflessness, but in self-forgetful loving activity, the way of the Eightfold Path.

84. The Middle Way or Eightfold Path of Gotama is the path of duty to be pursued every day here and now.<sup>5</sup> It assumes unquestioningly the world which we see, and guides the action to be taken therein. The path of altruism seems to be necessarily realistic; the illusionist or idealistic view of life is that of a refined egoism searching for its own purification. The outlook of the first two Piṭakas is predominantly realistic; their world is that of the Middle Way of duty to all classes of society.<sup>6</sup> They set forth in picturesque narratives incidents of the life of the Buddha in this material world; the precepts of the Dhamma, of which the centre is the Middle Way of dutiful practice; and the establishment and elaborately practical organization of the Saṃgha or Society of mendicant priests, who under the direction of the powerful and statesmanlike<sup>1</sup> mind of Gotama spread the saving doctrines of the Dhamma over the wide realms of the Middle Land of India during the long years of his leadership. In the Suttas,<sup>2</sup> called after the names of Uttiya,<sup>3</sup> Māluṅkyāputta,<sup>4</sup> and Vaccha,<sup>5</sup> the Teacher steadily refuses to deal with the metaphysical problems which they laid before him. His business is not with such questions but with the practical subject of duty, the Eightfold Path.<sup>6</sup> This Way will lead to the destruction of desire and of sorrow. He offers them the cure for sorrow; it is for his questioners to decide whether they will take it and be free or whether they prefer first to know everything about the nature of the medicine and its origin, and of their sickness and its cause.

85. Realistic, however, as is the prevailing tone of the Vinaya Piṭaka, and at least the first four Nikāyas of the Sutta Piṭaka,<sup>7</sup> it is plain that there was a metaphysical background to the Buddha's doctrine. During the six long years of strenuous asceticism which followed the period of pupilage under Ālāra and Uddaka, he must have scrutinized deeply the Vedāntist and Monistic theories of the time.<sup>8</sup> In the Nidāna-kathā or Pāli Introduction to the Jātaka it is stated that after the delivery of the famous First Sermon at Isipatana near Benāres, setting forth the Four Noble Truths, he delivered a second Sermon called the Anattalakkhaṇa Suttanta, or Discourse on the Non-existence of Individuality,<sup>9</sup> a discourse which was apparently intended to explain to the First Five Disciples the fundamental monistic principles on which he based the main contention of the Truths, namely that individual desire is the cause of sorrow and can and must be uprooted.

86. In the Mahā-vagga (Vinaya Piṭaka) it is stated that at the time of the Great Enlightenment the future Buddha discovered the Paticca-samuppāda, or Process of Dependent Origination,<sup>10</sup> and here evidently again we have an attempt to explain the metaphysical background of Gotama's Dhamma. The Process is described in more than one place in the Canon, and somewhat differently in the different books.<sup>1</sup> It sometimes appears as a process of twelve steps and is sometimes abbreviated to nine. In the former case the beginning is Ignorance (avijjā), implying misapprehension and delusion, from which desire, individuality, and ultimately birth, sickness, old age, death, and sorrows of all kinds proceed. In the forms in which it has come down to us the process is admittedly confused, but it seems possible to perceive in it a substructure of realism overlaid by a later structure of illusionism. The Buddha taught that out of desire and an exaggerated sense of individuality<sup>2</sup> arose the sorrows which accompany man from birth to death, and that the exaggerated sense of individuality arose from delusion. It is not difficult to see how so simply realistic a view of life might be converted to the uses of those of his later followers who inclined towards the ancient Hindu doctrine of Illusion or Māyā.

<sup>10</sup> 'When the Buddha had taken possession of the seat of full enlightenment he evolved from within two formulas, ever since revealed by him to all beings, and represented as the fundamental truths of his teaching. These formulas are the four Āryasatyāni and the twelvefold Pratītyasamutpāda' (KM, p. 46). With these two formulas should be taken the verses beginning Ye dhammā-hetuppabhavā (what things spring from a cause), which repeated by the fifth disciple Assaji, are said to have converted the two famous disciples Sāriputta and Moggallāna. Int. §§ 67, 98 n.

87. The growth of the theory of Illusion among the sects of the later Buddhists of the Hina-yāna, or old Indian school, is described in A. Berriedale Keith's learned Buddhist Philosophy,<sup>3</sup> as also the development of purely idealistic sects of the Mahā-yāna school,<sup>4</sup> from about the commencement of the first century of the Christian era.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Cp. Pilgrimage of Buddhism, pp. 621-2, on the prominent Mahāyānist sect of Tendai in Japan: 'The Tendai universe may be called a divine universe with no "God" in it. The Tendai teaches incarnation, many incarnations, without any deity becoming incarnate. For it, incarnation means not the descent of deity into human flesh, but the ascent of the individual to deity by becoming his true self, which is selfless. "Become what thou art" is its most fundamental command, a command which underlies and transcends all the laws of morality. Many individuals, so Buddhism teaches, have risen from the common level, perhaps an infinite number, to this higher plane of realization and divinization: not in the sense of achieving something essentially new, but by realizing the Buddha nature which was always theirs and which lies, frequently unguessed, in all beings. To know Reality is to be it. To this realization one attains chiefly through cultivation of the two great Buddhist virtues of insight and compassion. These mean much more than mere morality. They include it, but they include metaphysical comprehension and mystical experience as well. When these qualities of soul are fully attained, when self is completely forgotten in love for others and the illusion of separateness, both in theory and in inner feeling, is overcome, one enters into the Buddhahood. This must mean, it would seem, that comparison and insight, in some high sense, constitute the ultimate nature of reality.' Cp. Int. §§ 3, 37.

88. In the following pages taken from the Canon and kindred Pāli books, setting forth the life and doctrines of the Buddha, all passages mentioning gods and particularized spirits<sup>2</sup> have been relegated to footnotes, as also all passages setting forth miraculous events<sup>3</sup> attributed to gods or spirits, to Gotama and his disciples, or to their opponents, also passages treating of supernatural knowledge or prophecies, and similarly all passages and phrases dealing with the Indian doctrine of Rebirth,<sup>4</sup> or based upon the illusionist theory<sup>5</sup> of phenomena. In this way, it is believed, the text proper will not only represent the facts of the life of Gotama more truly, but also will discriminate between the doctrines and opinions of the Buddha himself and those of his later followers, whose opinions and teachings gradually resumed the animistic and popular characteristics from which Buddhism originally diverged. This arrangement at the same time allows the reader to see and to weigh for himself all the matter contained in the relevant portions of the Pāli books.

89. Writing of the Nidāna-kathā or Pāli Introduction to the Jātaka T. W. Rhys Davids observes: "The light it throws on the other [later] accounts [of Buddha's life] is often exceedingly interesting and instructive, especially as showing the gradual growth of the supernatural parts of the biography."<sup>6</sup> With the still more exaggerated wonders and miracles of the Sanskrit Lalitā Vistara<sup>7</sup> and the other Northern biographies of the Buddha the present work is not concerned. It may be questioned whether they can add anything to our knowledge of the life of Gotama. Such facts as they contain are included in the Life of Buddha given in the Jātaka Introduction (Nidāna-kathā), which is based upon the Canonical Books, and includes many marvels in a somewhat less incredible form than that which they assume in the Northern accounts.<sup>8</sup> The same may be said of the Southern narratives (Ceylonese, Burmese,<sup>9</sup> and Siamese), later than the Nidāna-kathā upon which they are based, and to which they add nothing except wonders and ever-increasing numerical figures. The main points, as they emerge from the Canonical Books,<sup>1</sup> present little room for scepticism. Gotama was a Rājput or member of the martial caste, born in the Sakyan clan, was educated and married, became a recluse and searcher after truth, founded a creed, gathered together certain disciples, organized an order of preachers, travelled long through the various States of the Middle-land, preaching and establishing branches of his Order, met certain kings, ministers, and religious teachers, and died in old age, still preaching and striving for the enlightenment of others. These main facts are as well established as any others in history. Further details might be welcome, but are not essential. The only essentials that are doubtful are the exact form of the creed which he himself held and taught to others with so much labour and devotion, and the precise religious and philosophical beliefs of his contemporaries.

90. Respect for the faithfully memorized text is characteristic of the East. It is evident, indeed, that much has been added to the original Canon—doubtless in good faith, in each age, by way of illustration and exegesis—but it is probable that whatever was once enshrined in the text remained unaltered, save by such addition.<sup>2</sup> The search must be made under the several layers of such additions for Gotama's original creed.

91. If the theories of Rebirth and illusion were essentially Buddhist and not Hindu in origin, it follows that medieval and modern Hinduism, of which they are characteristic tenets, must be in essential points Buddhist also: a proposition which cannot be seriously maintained. Whether these theories were developed by Hinduism prior to, or after, the time of Gotama<sup>3</sup> does not affect the argument that they are Hindu theories which were intruded into Buddhism, and not Buddhist theories adopted by Hinduism.<sup>4</sup> Similarly the belief in spirits (animism) is characteristic of primitive tribes, and was imported by them into the doctrines of their Hindu and Buddhist converters, just as many heathen ideas and customs were introduced into Christianity. It was the adoption of these theories that finally merged Buddhism into Hinduism in India. It was the absence of these theories (whatever the stage of development which they had reached) that discriminated the creed of Gotama from that of the Brāhmins of his time, and not merely his rejecting, or rather ignoring, the Vedas,<sup>5</sup> Brāhmanical ritual, and caste, and his insistence upon the selfless activity of the Eightfold Path.

PARALLELISM OF THE DHAMMA AND STOICISM;<sup>1</sup>
TWO EARLY SYSTEMS OF SELF-CONTROL AND MUTUAL SERVICE, BASED UPON RATIONALISM<sup>2</sup>
AND NATURAL LAW

97. The first of Gotama's sermons is known as the Dhammacakka-ppavattana-Sutta (the discourse setting the Wheel of the Dhamma or Law in motion).<sup>3</sup> The word Dhamma (Sanskrit, Dharma)<sup>4</sup> means originally the natural condition of things or beings, and so the law of their existence. The original meaning is brought out clearly in compound words, as in vaya-dhammā saṃkhārā (perishable-by-nature are compounds, i.e. individuals),<sup>5</sup> in the last utterance of Gotama.<sup>6</sup> It is notable that as Gotama called his doctrine (Dhamma) after the Nature of things or Natural Law, the Stoics similarly based their teaching upon Phusis or Nature, insisting as they did upon the need of living 'according to nature'—kata phusin.<sup>7</sup> Man is by nature and its law (nomos), according to the Stoics, a social animal (koinōnikos),<sup>8</sup> just as according to Aristotle he is a political animal; and they found their ethical ideal in his fulfilment of his social nature. At the basis of Gotama's Dhamma was the doctrine of Non-Ego;<sup>9</sup> and, since the world was to him, though in one sense illusory, yet real, not ideal as to the Vedāntists,<sup>10</sup> and activity in it was imperative, it followed that the Law to the Buddha was altruistic,<sup>1</sup> as to the Stoics the law of nature was social.

G 2 c, Note, Vaiśeshika), and sceptics (Ap. G 2 c § 3 (i) [32]); even its cynics (Ch. 13 d § 5). In the beautiful Tevijja Sutta (Int. § 35, i) Gotama displays the intellectual characteristics of a Socrates, a Plato, and an Aristotle, refuting by question, answer, and definition the claims of the Brāhmins to a knowledge of the Gods, then soaring upon a flight of survey through all worlds, and returning to classify the divine virtues which harmonize all things. In the Singālovāda-Sutta (Ch. 9 b) again he shows the mental qualities of a Zeno or a Confucius, surveying in one view the world of daily duties. In the Vinaya Rules (Ap. H 3, Note) organizing the Saṃgha the founder displays an Aristotelian grasp of detail and power of systematization extending to secular affairs.' Cp. Ch. 7 c, final note (genius).

98. The famous verses (Ye dhammā hetu-ppabhavā)<sup>2</sup> which are said to have converted the chief disciples Sāriputta<sup>3</sup> and Moggallāna may be rendered as follows: 'All natures (dhammā) springing from a cause (hetu-ppabhavā) arise and dissolve: 'tis this the Mighty Monk proclaims.'<sup>4</sup> From this summary statement the two gifted Brāhman students, already disciples of the philosophic teacher, Sañjaya, are said to have deduced immediately the main doctrines of the Buddha, that is the teaching centred in the Four Noble Truths, including the Eightfold Path.<sup>5</sup> To be thus fruitful the verses above must have conveyed something more than the merely negative idea of transience. They must have implied to the two young Brāhmins not only the transience of all created things but the permanence of the uncreated;<sup>6</sup> the transience of the many, the permanence of the One. From this positive idea of the unity and eternity of the Whole (Ātman) would flow the ideas of the common origin and bond uniting all individuals, and of a durability in which generation after generation of transient individuals share. These are the ideas conveyed by the first three Noble Truths, which state that all sorrows arise from individualist desires, and the fourth Truth which points out the way of self-forgetful activity, serving the purposes not of the individual but of the whole.

99. Such views would unite them with the Stoics, who found a divine principle in the One,<sup>7</sup> and not with the Epicureans to whom the universe and its processes were mechanical, so that to the former fraternal love and social duty seemed natural and imperative,<sup>8</sup> while the philosophy of the latter school culminated in enlightened egotism.<sup>9</sup>

'Tis this the Mighty Monk proclaims.

These verses must be read in close connexion with the Process of Dependent Origination (Paticca-samuppāda, IN 8 c; Int. § 86), which is said to have been discovered by the Bodhisatta immediately before the Enlightenment, and with the An-attalakkhaṇa Suttanta (Int. § 85), which the Buddha delivered immediately after the First Sermon.

The relief and peace of mind which the great Epicurean poet Lucretius found in the phrase 'Nothing arises from nothing'<sup>1</sup> (the doctrine of the material nature of the universe, based upon the atomic theory of Democritus), resemble at first sight the enthusiasm with which Gotama's followers received the news that 'all compounds pass away'. In the mechanical or physical theory of cosmogony the arbitrary and dubious gods of the classical world faded away. To the Epicurean this brought the opportunity for unhampered self-development and wisest self-interest; to the Stoic of the best type it brought a sense of natural unity, of community of interests, and the impulse of social service, self-culture being for a common end and not for any individual purpose.<sup>2</sup> Here the resemblance between the teaching of Gotama, based upon the doctrine of the transience of the Ego, and that of the Stoics who did not allow self-culture to obscure the more radical duty of service to the community,<sup>3</sup> is evident once more.<sup>4</sup>

100. Perhaps the most striking resemblance of the teaching of Buddha to that of the Stoics is to be found in the dialogues of Gotama with Uttiya<sup>5</sup> and with Māluṅkyāputta.<sup>6</sup> In declaring that questions as to whether the world is eternal or not eternal, finite or infinite and so on, did not concern him or touch the essential point,<sup>7</sup> which is the eradication of egotism and so of sorrow by means of the Eightfold Path, Gotama practically takes the same point of view as that taken, some seven centuries later, by the Stoic Emperor, who insisted that whether the soul be mortal or immortal, whether there be God or gods or only atoms,<sup>8</sup> the duty of man remains clear, namely to fulfil his social, that is his unselfish, nature, and do good without thought of reward. This is the modern doctrine of Social Service,<sup>1</sup> which also may be said to be the ethical foundation of all the great religions.

101. The most characteristic of Stoic virtues is apatheia, 'apathy' (tranquillity), or ataraxia (unperturbedness).<sup>2</sup> This virtue is the fourth and last of the Brahma-vihārā (divine attitudes)<sup>3</sup> enumerated in the famous Tevijja Sutta, namely, upekkhā (serenity), and is also the last of the Ten Perfections<sup>4</sup> requisite for a Bodhisatta (future Buddha). This tranquillity or serenity is the frame of mind which in its perfection characterizes the blissful state of Nibbāna.<sup>5</sup> The ideal of Nibbāna, or the extinction of the self in this life, as taught by Buddha, is not a merely negative and passive state of extinction, but a positive and active condition implying love, pity, and sympathy, as well as the final virtue of serenity. Its object is neither repose nor heaven,<sup>6</sup> but universal charity or love.<sup>7</sup> In other words it is not egoistic or individualistic, but altruistic or social. It aims not at ascetic purity and isolation from the world,<sup>8</sup> but at social service.<sup>9</sup>

102. There are other striking parallelisms between the ethical teaching of the Buddha and the reflections of the noblest of Roman Stoic writers, that great and self-forgetful servant of the public, the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. Just as wisdom (paññā)<sup>10</sup> is placed among the essential virtues by Buddhism, and the Great Teacher is named the Enlightened (Buddha),<sup>11</sup> so Knowledge is the foundation of the Stoic virtues,<sup>12</sup> and the Wise Man<sup>13</sup> is made the model and ideal of the Stoic writers. In the Process of Dependent Origination (Paticca samuppāda)<sup>14</sup> the first step in the series which culminates in birth, sickness, old age, death, and all the sorrows is ignorance (a-vijjā), and it is only by the abolition of ignorance that sorrows and apparent evils can be brought to an end. So ignorance is insisted upon by the Stoic philosophers as the origin of error<sup>15</sup> and all apparent ills;<sup>16</sup> and the chain of causation figures in the Roman Emperor's Meditations as the

103. The similarity between the classes of duties, insisted on in the Singālovāda Sutta and in the Edicts of Asoka, and the Relationships (scheseis) of Stoic Ethics, has been pointed out already.<sup>4</sup>

104. The well-known Stoic precept 'Bear and forbear' (anechou kai apechou)<sup>5</sup> accords with the spirit of the second and third Noble Truths<sup>6</sup> which find in personal desire and its uprooting the origin and end of all sorrow, and with the beautiful charity of the famous Dhammapada verse:<sup>7</sup>

Not indeed by hatred does hate cease at any time;

Hatred is brought to an end by love: this is an eternal law.

105. What is commonly and, from the individualistic point of view, naturally regarded as the pessimism<sup>8</sup> of the two philosophies finds expression in their condemnation of the desire for pleasure,<sup>9</sup> the desire for approbation and reward,<sup>10</sup> the desire for future life,<sup>11</sup> and in their depreciation of the human body and all that appertains to it.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>8</sup> It is a self-flattering mistake of individualism to suppose that the altruistic or social nature is soft and pessimistic. On the contrary the most altruistic spirits, such as St. Francis of Assisi, to mention no higher example, have constantly proved the most fiery and unconquerable. It was the social impulse that caused Marcus Aurelius to consider himself born to stand before Rome as the bull before the herd (see Meditations, bk. xi, ch. 18), and upon his broad forehead, on the distant confines of the Empire, the 'blond beasts' of the north flung themselves repeatedly and in vain. Hercules, the type of strength and energy, and Diogenes, the type of rugged freedom, are in the forefront of Stoic ideals of conduct (see Arnold, R. Stoicism, pp. 169, 296). In our own times the 'unknown warrior', though perhaps among the humblest, is assuredly not least among the heroes. The absence of self-seeking and hatred is not a diminution, but an added element, of strength. There can be no question as to which is the more virile figure, the Stoic or the Epicurean, the man of duty or the intelligent seeker after self-interest. The famous Stoic apatheia is not the modern apathy, but a valiant state of mastery over suffering (Int. § 101). Finally the untiring and hopeful energy of the Buddha, labouring to spread enlightenment, fighting down pain by will (Ch. 21 § 7 [23]) until his course was run, is as typical of him as are his mildness and unshaken calm.—For a markedly predatory view, rather 'pack'-like than individualistic see chapter x on 'Buddhism, Stoicism, Socialism' in Spengler's Decline of the West (London, 1926).

all things that are not of the soul are indifferent;<sup>1</sup> and though both systems inculcate the training of the self,<sup>2</sup> this self-culture is evidently not for egotistical, but for social or altruistic, purposes.<sup>3</sup>

107. On the physical side also the similarity of the philosophies is emphasized by the Stoic belief in the end and recommencement of the ordered universe in a periodic general conflagration (ekpurosis),<sup>4</sup> which markedly resembles the Indian belief, not less Hindu than Buddhist, in the sequence of cycles or aeons, proceeding in eternal succession, each cycle (kappa, Sanskrit kalpa)<sup>5</sup> closely resembling its predecessor.

108. Respect for women, for all castes and classes, and for all nationalities<sup>6</sup> naturally arises from the monistic principles of Buddhism, as from those of Stoicism. Tenderness for animals, however, which also follows logically and is eminently a Hindu and Buddhist ideal (a-himsā, unhurtfulness),<sup>7</sup> does not find a place in the Stoic theory.<sup>8</sup>

109. The similarities, general or specific, of the two systems may be utilized to throw light on both. They may be supplemented by other more incidental resemblances. The Stoic paradox that the sage can be happy even when in pain<sup>9</sup> may be paralleled by the Buddhist contention that one may be wretched of body but not wretched of mind.<sup>10</sup>

115. One of the most marked and characteristic features of Buddhism, the third 'Refuge',<sup>6</sup> namely the Saṃgha (community) or Order of preaching Mendicants, has no equivalent in the Stoic system. It was through this organization of preachers that the doctrines of Gotama were spread throughout the numerous states of the Middleland during his lifetime, and far beyond the boundaries of India after his death.

116. A link between the Ionian Greeks and the India of the period closely succeeding the age of Buddha might be found in the highly organized Persian Empire, which in its decay was taken over by the Macedonian conqueror, somewhat after the period of the great speculative Asiatic Greek physicists, Heraclitus and Democritus, and before the maturity of the Cyprian Zeno, the founder of the Stoic philosophy, who was studying at Athens at the time. But even if the affiliation of Stoicism to Buddhism were established, there would still remain to be explained the resemblance of Buddhism and the great philosophical religion of Confucius,<sup>7</sup> Gotama's somewhat older contemporary in China. It does not seem impossible that a monistic and altruistic or social philosophy should arise among different races independently.

117. The remarkable resemblances between Buddhism and Stoicism seem due to similarity of initial premises<sup>8</sup> rather than to affiliation after the development of the Eastern creed. If the oneness of the universe, and at the same time its reality, be granted, then not only the transience but the divineness of life, the kinship of all beings, and the natural impulse<sup>9</sup> to self-forgetful love and active social service for their own sake and not for reward, follow, as also the influence of every action, thought, and word upon the whole.<sup>10</sup> The ethics are not only those of Buddhism and of Stoicism but, despite the difference of premises, those of Christ also, who however added, what the heart of man for the most part needs, worship, a belief in the consoling presence of a personal God, and the hope of immortal life. To the philosophic Hindu thinkers of Buddha's day the oneness of the universe was clear, but with this sense of unity there came to the best of them a sense of the illusion (māyā)<sup>11</sup> of this world and individual existences, and to the less elevated spirits a keen desire to escape from the coils of this life. It was left to Gotama to synthesize the essential

118. Though there doubtless is a superstructure of fictitious localities, claims and incidents, set down among the Suttas—as for example in the strange interviews recorded as taking place between Gotama and gods, or spirits,<sup>3</sup> and demons (yakkhā)—yet the geographical and topographical details of the first four or early Nikāyas of the Sutta (2nd) Piṭaka, as well as in the Vinaya (1st) Piṭaka, stand comparison on the whole with known facts and bear with them a conviction of the general truth of the narrative. The Ceylon<sup>4</sup> monks—from whom we have the sacred books of the Hīna-yāna (Little Vehicle) Canon, and who claim that they have them by direct tradition from Prince Mahinda,<sup>5</sup> the missionary son of the Emperor Asoka, though they may have drawn them from a more recent origin—cannot possibly have invented the itineraries of the Nikāyas as a whole, any more than they can have invented an ancient canonical language, corresponding fundamentally with that of the Asokan inscriptions, and etymologically with the Sanskrit language, differing from though resembling their own Southern speech; or the Jātaka stories corresponding with the carvings on the railings of the Mauryan Topes at Bharhut and Sāñchī;<sup>6</sup> or the main facts of the life of Buddha, which are found equally in the Mahā-yāna (Great Vehicle) tradition of Northern countries to which the influence of Ceylon never reached.<sup>7</sup> Nor can they have elaborated these itineraries from merely vague geographical information such as is conveyed by travellers' tales; they must at least have based them upon a precise and detailed tradition of Gotama's journeyings, itself founded on topographical, as well as historical, knowledge. The fundamental tradition and the language must have been derived direct from the Middle-land of India, whether in Asoka's time or later. The Indian tradition itself, doubtless—whether corresponding closely or not with the Ceylon Canon in its present form—must have been compounded of matter of varying authenticity,<sup>8</sup> and it is perhaps now impossible first to sift out, and then in turn to sift, the Indian

These settings are doubtless sometimes commentarial and without original authority, but they fit readily into a topographical system. Further reference may be made to the indexes of place-names in vols. ii and v in Oldenberg's edition of the Vinaya Piṭaka, where the area is somewhat enlarged and the commentarial hand seems more evident.

119. It is remarkable that so little is recorded of Benāres and Gayā after the great events of the Enlightenment and the First Sermon, in the first four or early Nikāyas of the Sutta Piṭaka. From these it would appear that Gotama visited Benāres<sup>2</sup> seldom thereafter, and Gayā<sup>3</sup> perhaps only once.

120. One may gather that he was not actuated by the sentimental feelings of his later followers for the scenes of those truly remarkable events, but as a great administrator he went where his presence was practically most useful, namely to the capital cities of the four chief states of the Middle Country—Rājagaha, Vesālī, Sāvattthi, and Kosambi—following the beaten routes between those cities, and taking his own native town of Kapilavattthu on the way between Vesālī and Sāvattthi, not only because he had there a large following of his own clansmen, but because it lay in the line of march.

121. His usual route seems to have been in the order above mentioned,<sup>4</sup> and the reverse,<sup>5</sup> and not between Kosambi and Rājagaha, which latter would have led him through Benāres and Gayā. No villages apparently are mentioned as halting-places of the Buddha between Benāres and Gayā, though many are named on the long routes between the four capitals mentioned above.<sup>6</sup> It may be surmised also that the Ganges river route,<sup>7</sup> which was the usual route between Kosambi and Benāres and what was later Pāṭaliputta, was not convenient for a party of begging and preaching friars, which was doubtless considerable in numbers, even though it may have been less than the conventional 'five hundred'<sup>8</sup> elders and friars (therā bhikkhū) of the Nikāyas. If this is correct, one may gather that the number of his followers in these two towns was not large, despite the first success in Benāres, which was then, as now, a stronghold of Brāhmanism. It is noticeable that no other spot in or near Benāres besides the Isipatana deer-park is mentioned in the first four Nikāyas, except once the Khemiyambavana (mango-grove) where Udena stayed.<sup>1</sup> No conversions in the town of Gayā itself are recorded in the Nikāyas, though Gotama stayed for a while on the Gayā-Head,<sup>2</sup> a hill overlooking the town, and converted there a thousand fire-worshippers, the followers of Kassapa, on his way from Benāres to Rājagaha after the first vas. Uruvelā, the scene of his enlightenment, was a lonely spot on the banks of the river Nerañjarā some miles east of Gayā, and though he must have passed through that town on his original journey to Benāres he did not preach there, whether because it was then a small place or because he was too full of thoughts not yet finally arranged and was instinctively bent on speaking first to the already partially prepared minds of his five former followers and friends.

A shorter route between Sāvattthi and Kusinārā via Ātumā is indicated (Ch. 13 a § 7 [1] n).

<sup>7</sup> In the Vinaya Piṭaka (Culla-vagga, xi. i. 12; Ch. 15 b § 15 [12]) it is stated that after the Buddha's death Ānanda with five hundred followers went by boat upstream (presumably from the neighbourhood of Pāṭaliputta) to Kosambi, where he saw King Udena and the recalcitrant monk Channa. In the same Piṭaka (MV, vi. xvii. 8) we read also that a party of monks, who had passed the rainy season (vas) among the Kāsis (Ch. 15 a), journey (apparently on foot) to Rājagaha to visit the Buddha. For the river Ganges see Ch. 8 d § 8; Ch. 12 e § 11 [1]; Ch. 14 c § 15 [2] n; Ch. 15 a § 12 (ii); Ch. 16 d § 7 [1] n; Ch. 19 a § 2; Ch. 20 § 11 [32]; also Ch. 3 § 5 [167] n; Ch. 11 c § 6 [263] n; Ch. 13 a § 8 [1] n; Ch. 13 c § 9 (529); Ch. 14 c § 17 [11] n; Ch. 14 e § 8; Ch. 15 b § 7.

122. That he occasionally diverged from the great routes is probable enough, but most of the places visited by him were apparently, like Nālandā and Pāvā, on the direct way. The authenticity of the claims of other places to the honour of having been visited by him is difficult to establish. An early follower, living in one of these places and speaking of some great discourse heard from the lips of the Teacher, might unwittingly originate a tradition that the Teacher himself stayed and spoke in that place.

123. In the Madhurattha-Vilāsini, a Pāli Commentary on the Buddha-vamsa, there appears a summary account of the Buddha's movements during the twenty years intervening between the time of his establishment of his first head-quarters at Rājagaha, the capital of the kingdom of Magadha,<sup>3</sup> and the date of his finally establishing his head-quarters at Sāvattthi, the capital of the rival kingdom of Kosala. 'The Blessed One for twenty years after his enlightenment being without a fixed dwelling', runs the Commentary, 'went and stayed where-soever he listed. . . . But from that point he stayed regularly at Sāvattthi, either in the great Jetavana monastery or in the Eastern monastery (Pubbārāma), living on alms.'<sup>4</sup> For reasons not clearly stated, but possibly political, he left Sāvattthi some twenty-four years later, about a year before his death, and spent the rainy season again in Rājagaha, from which place he started northwards upon the journey which ended with his death. The basis for this summary account was doubtless ancient tradition, which may be accepted as sufficient authority. Mention is made of those places at which Gotama spent each vas or period of residence during the rainy season, and intermediary halting-places are not named. The Teacher's long and constant journeys, during all seasons except the rains,<sup>1</sup> must have been performed mainly on foot, with occasional stages on horseback<sup>2</sup> and doubtless some in wagons drawn by slow but efficient Indian bullocks,<sup>3</sup> in a manner not very unlike that of the long cold-weather camping tours of Indian officials before motor transport curtailed that leisurely procedure. In place of tents there would be the village assembly-hall<sup>4</sup> or monastery,<sup>5</sup> which the Teacher and his followers would reach before the heat of the day, after a long slow march in the early morning or at times by night, through country often beautiful and always interesting, by roads worn with traffic, or tracks less easy to find, leading to fords sometimes dangerous to negotiate, winding through growing crops or silent jungle, or mounting gradually through forests on the hill-sides to the north and south of the great Gangetic plain,<sup>6</sup> with halts by the wayside to preach to whosoever would listen. The official march in India used to be about sixteen miles, or eight kos, but this was often for convenience reduced to half, and such a half-march<sup>7</sup> may well have suited Gotama and his many followers. There is evidence that he was sensitive to the great beauty through which he passed on his journeys between busy towns.<sup>8</sup>

124. The distances between the ancient capital cities were very great. In the narrative of the Bodhisatta's journey when he first left Kapilavasthu on his search for enlightenment the Jātaka Introduction states<sup>9</sup> that having ridden thirty leagues (yojanas) he halted at the river Anomā, and went thence to Rājagaha, a distance of thirty leagues, on foot. On this Rhys Davids remarks:<sup>10</sup>

'The thirty yojanas here mentioned, together with the thirty from Kapilavastu to the river Anomā, make together sixty, or four hundred and eighty miles from Kapilavastu to Rājagaha, which is far too much for the direct distance. There is here, I think, an undesigned coincidence between Northern and Southern accounts, for the Lalita Vistara (chap. xvi, at the commencement) makes the Bodhisat go to Rājagaha viā Vesāli, and this would make the total distance exactly sixty yojanas.'

at the former city, the ġātaka Introduction<sup>1</sup> states that "The Blessed One, . . . started from Rājagaha, and travelled a league a day; going slowly with the intention of reaching Kapilavatthu, sixty leagues from Rājagaha, in two months."<sup>2</sup> In a later passage in the same narrative<sup>3</sup> Anātha-piṇḍika, the merchant prince of Sāvatti, after his conversion by the Buddha during a visit to Rājagaha, is said to have built resting-places (vihāre)<sup>4</sup> 'along the road to Sāvatti, forty-five leagues in length', as well as buying the famous Jetavana Grove in Sāvatti as a gift for the Buddha. It is perhaps meant that the merchant built rest-houses along a more direct and shorter route which lay within the kingdom of Kosala, of which Sāvatti was the capital.

(b) Topography of the chief cities

certain Hindu wandering philosophers (paribbājaka)<sup>1</sup> were staying at the Peacocks' Feeding-ground (Mora-nivāpe),<sup>2</sup> which was apparently at no great distance. It is possible that the two large gardens with their respective rest-houses were called after the squirrels and peacocks which frequented the two spots. The word Bamboo-grove is not distinctive alone, and possibly the name Squirrels' Feeding-ground was added in apposition to distinguish this bamboo-grove from others. In the Nikāyas the two words generally appear together, but the Veḷuvana is sometimes mentioned alone.<sup>3</sup> Frequent references occur in the Nikāyas to the large grove or garden, near the city, set apart for Hindu wandering preachers (paribbājaka), and sometimes to Queen Udumbarikā's Garden for the Wanderers,<sup>4</sup> which possibly may have been identical with the Peacocks' Feeding-ground (Mora-nivāpa) mentioned above.<sup>5</sup> Such gardens<sup>6</sup> with rest-houses for wandering religious and philosophical teachers (paribbājaka) of all sects were not uncommon in the neighbourhood of Indian cities of the time. The Seers' or Rishis' Retreat (Isi-patana)<sup>7</sup> near Benāres, where Gotama preached the First Sermon, was such an institution; the Gabled-roof (Kūt-āgāra) Hall,<sup>8</sup> in the Great Wood (Mahā-vana) near Vesālī, was another; the Hall in Queen Mallikā's park<sup>9</sup> at Sāvattthi was another. Even after the Saṃgha received the gift of the Veḷuvana from King Bimbisāra the Buddha occasionally stayed in the Wanderers' Garden at the Peacocks' Feeding-ground.<sup>10</sup> It would appear that Gotama availed himself of this rest-house on the same footing as any other wandering preacher (paribbājaka), and that the house and garden were not assigned to any particular sect.

127. The buildings, such as they were, at the Veḷuvana were naturally at first by no means commodious,<sup>11</sup> and we read that while the Buddha stayed there the Elder Sāriputta and other followers lodged elsewhere on the Vulture-Peak Hill (Gijjha-kūṭe pabbate).<sup>12</sup> It is evident that Gotama and his chief disciples did not habitually, at any rate at first, lodge together, though their lodgings may have been near one another. The idea of large monasteries, built at great cost, came later, possibly after Gotama's death.

128. The ancient city was situated in a valley encircled and defended by high hills, the northern gate<sup>1</sup> being close to an opening in the hills, through which a small stream passes on its way towards the river Ganges. A later city was built by King Bimbisāra,<sup>2</sup> Gotama's contemporary, in the plain immediately to the north of this opening. Of the peaks near the ancient city the most famous was the Vulture-Peak (Gijjha-kūṭa)<sup>3</sup> on which the Veḷuvana was situated. Four other peaks named in the first four Nikāyas are the Seers'-mountain (Isigilī passa, or Isigiri),<sup>4</sup> Mount Vebhāra,<sup>5</sup> Indra's Peak (Inda-kūṭa pabbata),<sup>6</sup> and Mount Vipula or Vepulla, formerly called East Ridge (Pācena vamsa).<sup>7</sup> In the fifth Nikāya another peak, the Pandava Hill,<sup>8</sup> is mentioned. To these must be added Dakkhinā-giri,<sup>9</sup> the long 'southern range', which forms the southern boundary of the valley and is an outcrop of the great Central Indian table-land.

The new Rājagaha (King's Home) was perhaps originally a fortified palace suburb. The Nikāyas do not seem to imply that the ancient city was deserted (Ch. 11 c § 13). The Magadha kingdom was established about the middle of the seventh century B.C. by Sisunāga, a Kāśi chief, who made the ancient city of Giribbaja his capital. The fifth king of the Saisunāga dynasty was Bimbisāra, who is said to have moved out of the old capital in Rājagaha. This move can scarcely have taken place later than this date, since the next king Ajātasattu removed the capital northward to Pāṭaliputta on the Ganges; Ch. 20 § 11 [26]. He, however, strengthened the fortifications of Rājagaha; Ch. 23 a [7].

The hills surrounding the ancient city of Rājagaha form a northern spur of the mountain range now known as Chota Nagpur, the Southern mountain-land (Dakkhinā-giri)<sup>10</sup> mentioned occasionally in the Canon as being visited by the Buddha or his chief disciples, situated at the eastern extremity of the great Vindhyan range, which constitutes the southern boundary of the Gangetic plain and the foremost barrier of Southern India not then penetrated by the Āryan tribes.

133. Topographical details regarding (2) VESĀLI,<sup>11</sup> the capital city of the Licchavis, the leading members of the Vajjian Confederacy,<sup>12</sup> are also supplied by the Canonical Books, though less profusely than in the case of Rājagaha. The Vajjian country was situated on the northern side of the Ganges opposite the kingdom of Magadha, and Vesāli lay on the line of march northward from Rājagaha to Gotama's birthplace, Kapilavatthu. Between the former city and the distant Himālaya mountains stretched the Great Forest (Mahā-vana).<sup>13</sup> On the outskirts of the town and within the Great Forest the citizens had built their famous Gabled-roof Hall (Kūṭ-āgāra-sālā),<sup>14</sup> provided either for the Buddha or for the use of wandering religious teachers (paribbājakā).<sup>15</sup> This was possibly a public hall for discussions of a religious or philosophical kind open to all sects. The Buddha is constantly stated in the Canon to have stayed here, and there were doubtless rest-houses<sup>16</sup> in the grounds or garden surrounding the hall.

Besides this hall there was a garden called Ekapuṇḍarika,<sup>1</sup> provided as a lodging-place for the wandering teachers. The head-quarters of the Buddhist Order in Vesālī were ultimately fixed in Ambapālī's Grove (Ambapālī-vana),<sup>2</sup> a spot which is said to have been presented to the Buddha by Ambapālī, a rich courtesan.<sup>3</sup> Mention is also made of the Avarapura Grove (Avarapura-vana-sanda),<sup>4</sup> outside the city, and of Beluva or Beluva-gāmaka,<sup>5</sup> a village where the Buddha sometimes stopped, near Vesālī, within an easy walking distance of that city.<sup>6</sup>

134. The list of 'pleasant spots' in or near Vesālī, said in the Mahā-Parinibbāna Sutta<sup>7</sup> to have been mentioned to Ānanda by the Buddha on his last journey, comprises six Cetiya<sup>8</sup> or shrines—the Cāpāla Cetiya, which was evidently an easy walk<sup>9</sup> from the village of Beluva, and the Udena, Gotamaka,<sup>10</sup> Sattambaka or Sattamba, Bahu-putta, and Sārandada<sup>11</sup> Cetiya. The Pāli Commentary, Sumaṅgala Vilāsinī, explains that the Vajjian shrines here enumerated were vihāras erected on the sites of former temples of Yakkhas<sup>12</sup> (demons) after whom they were named. That Gotama should select Buddhist vihāras for praise as 'pleasant spots' is likely enough; that he should call such vihāras shrines or temples seems more than unlikely, and that he should designate them by the names of spirits<sup>13</sup> or demons hostile to mortals altogether improbable.<sup>14</sup> One of the seven conditions of welfare for the Vajjians supposed to be laid down by Gotama in the opening passage of the Mahā-Parinibbāna Sutta<sup>15</sup> was reverence for and support of the Vajjian shrines in town or country, though all external worship was condemned by Gotama. Spirit-worship was characteristic of contemporary Hinduism and became later a great feature of Buddhism. It would appear that these passages were introduced into the narrative later in its interest; but the shrines may have existed in Gotama's time, and it is possible that he may have commended to the Vajjians the preservation of monuments erected to ancestral leaders<sup>16</sup> or teachers of the clan, as well as the preservation of their ancient and well-tried political institutions, which is the first of the conditions<sup>17</sup> said to have been laid down by the Buddha for the welfare of the Confederacy.

135. Far distant to the north-west of Vesālī, within the boundaries of what is now Nepāl, lay (3) KAPILAVATTHU,<sup>1</sup> which was the capital of the small oligarchic republic<sup>2</sup> of the Sakyans and was Gotama's native town. Where the road between Vesālī and Kapilavatthu passes from the plain into the foot-hills of the Himālayas the Buddhist Emperor Asoka placed pillars, of which four are now known,<sup>3</sup> to mark the route followed by the great Teacher some 250 years previously and the spot where the Bodhisatta was born. Not far from the Sakyan capital lay Devadaha,<sup>4</sup> the chief town of the Koliyans, a clan closely related to the Sakyans. Suddhodana the Sakyan was married to Māyā, the daughter of a member of one of the ruling families of the Koliyans, and Māyā, it is said, when her child was about to be born was permitted to return to her birthplace. Midway between the two towns, in the Lumbini Grove (Lumbini-vana),<sup>5</sup> Siddhattha Gotama, afterwards to become the Buddha, was born. Topographical details regarding Kapilavatthu are to be found in the Canonical Books.

136. Kapilavatthu, apparently, was a fortified town, as the Bodhisatta is said to have passed the closed gates<sup>6</sup> when he set forth on his great journey seeking enlightenment. The little capital of the neighbouring Mallan clan, Kusinārā<sup>7</sup> (Kuṣinagarā), the scene of the Buddha's death, was similarly fortified. On a much larger scale the ancient capital of Magadha was a fortified city<sup>8</sup> with stone walls, traces of which are still to be found, and later the city of Pāṭaliputta was fortified with a vast wooden palisade, of which some portions have recently been discovered.<sup>9</sup> The three houses<sup>10</sup> said to have been allotted to the young Siddhattha by his father for the different seasons of the year may be only conventional parts of the tradition, but doubtless then, as at the present day, it was usual for a wealthy Indian family to possess, besides a gardenless quadrangular mansion in the city, a smaller house or pavilion in a garden<sup>11</sup> on the outskirts. The Nigrodha-tree<sup>12</sup> Garden (Nigrodh-ārāma),<sup>13</sup> in which Gotama and his followers stayed on many occasions, belonged not to any private family but to the townsmen. stretched the Great Forest (Mahā-vana or Mahā-sālā).<sup>1</sup> Through the fields of the town flowed the Rohini river (or Kohāna).<sup>2</sup>

138. Westward of Kapilavatthu, and equally among the foot-hills of the Himālayas, within the boundaries of what is now Nepāl, lay (4) the city of SĀVATTHI,<sup>8</sup> the capital of the kingdom of Kosala, which was an older power than, and still the equal of, the rising Magadhan kingdom. The road from Kapilavatthu apparently entered Sāvatti by the north gate.<sup>9</sup> In the third year of the Buddha's ministry Anāthapiṇḍika,<sup>10</sup> the famous merchant-prince of Sāvatti, whilst on a business visit to Rājagaha, made the acquaintance of the Teacher and was converted by him. Shortly after his return to Sāvatti he purchased from Prince Jeta, a member of King Pasenadi's family, the famous Jeta Grove (Ĵeta-vana),<sup>11</sup> and built therein a rest-house (vihāra), which from the twentieth year<sup>12</sup> of the Buddha's ministry became the most important head-quarters of the Saṃgha. Topographical details of the city and its environs are found in some fullness in the Canonical Books.

<sup>7</sup> Int. § 190 (education). T. W. Rhys Davids calls this institution a 'Technical College'. It was apparently a school in which the boys of the ruling families learnt such part of the arts (sippāmi) required by their position as could not be learnt at home (Ch. 18, sippam). These arts doubtless included horse-mastership and the use of arms, and something of engineering and agriculture (Ch. 1 § 7) and sometimes the art of statesmanship (Int. § 172, ministers), with rhetoric and philosophy (cp. Int. § 133, paribbājakā), and occasionally perhaps reading and writing (see RDBI, pp. 107-20). The most famous of such institutions was that of Takkaṣilā (the Greek Taxila; see RDBI, pp. 8, 203) at which according to the Ĵātakas (see Ĵāt. 151, Rājevāda-Ĵātaka; Ĵāt. 411, Susīma-Ĵātaka) it was customary for the princes of the day to be educated. How ancient this school at Taxila may have been is not known, but Gotama's contemporary Pasenadi, King of Kosala, is said on Commentarial authority, but not in the Canon, to have been educated there (see Sam. Nik. iii, Kosala-Samyutta, Ch. 17 e [5] n), as also the famous physician Jivaka (Ch. 8 j § 1 n).

139. The most frequently mentioned of the sites in Sāvattthi was the Jeta Grove in which was situated Anāthapiṇḍika's vihāra. The Jetavana site lay outside the city near the south gate<sup>1</sup> and comprised extensive grounds, in which were placed the vihāra, of which the chief room was the perfumed chamber (gandhākuti), and numerous separate buildings for the Elders, with assembly-halls, terraces or platforms for walking, and ponds or tanks for bathing.<sup>2</sup> The entrance to the garden was through a gateway, over which was built a large room.<sup>3</sup>

140. Outside the city near the east gate<sup>4</sup> lay the Eastern Garden (Pubb-ārāma).<sup>5</sup> This was given to the Order by Visākha,<sup>6</sup> a rich benefactress, considerably after Anāthapiṇḍika's great donation, and became the Buddha's alternative head-quarters in Sāvattthi. The principal building in the garden was a structure of more than one story, termed a pāsāda,<sup>7</sup> such as was usually surmounted by a flat roof used for taking the air in the evening and at night. The Eastern Garden (Pubb-ārāma) was not, as may at first appear, the same as the Eastern Enclosure<sup>8</sup> (Pubba-koṭṭhaka), though it may have included it; the whole garden was doubtless an enclosure surrounded by a protective wall.<sup>9</sup> From the description given in Sutta 26 of the Majjhima Nikāya it would appear that at first the storied house within the enclosure was not a monastery, since the Buddha when resting there delivered no discourse, but proceeded to the neighbouring hall of Rammaka<sup>10</sup> the Brāhman to address the mendicant brethren.

141. Near the garden was the Eastern bathing-place,<sup>11</sup> whether within or outside the precincts, and hard by was the hall of Rammaka the Brāhman, which was a Buddhist institution, as is shown by the nature of the discussions held therein by its inmates.<sup>12</sup>

142. Mention is also made of Queen Mallikā's Garden, in which there was a great hall for public discussions.<sup>13</sup> In the neighbourhood were the Royal Garden,<sup>14</sup> the wood called Andhavana,<sup>15</sup> and the stream called Sutanu.<sup>16</sup>

KOSAMBI,<sup>1</sup> which became during Gotama's lifetime notorious through the dissensions<sup>2</sup> of the numerous Buddhist monks established there. The city was situated at no great distance westward of the junction of the Ganges and its great affluent the river Jumna.<sup>3</sup> It was the capital of what had been formerly a considerable independent kingdom lying immediately to the west of the ancient kingdom of Kāsi,<sup>4</sup> which latter had become subordinate to its greater northern neighbour Kosala. The city lay on the north bank of the Jumna. In the Samyutta Nikāya<sup>5</sup> it is said to have been situated on the banks of the Ganges (Gangāya nadiyā tīre), but either this is a mistake or the name Kosambi has been brought into the text here by error for some other place.<sup>6</sup>

144. Some topographical details are to be found in the Canonical Books. Mention is made there of Ghosita's Garden (Ghosit-ārāma),<sup>7</sup> the Badarika Garden<sup>8</sup> (called by Mrs. Rhys Davids<sup>9</sup> the Jujube Tree Park),<sup>10</sup> and the Simsapa-tree Grove (Simsapa-vana),<sup>11</sup> and also of the Pilakkha Cave (Pilakkhaguhā),<sup>12</sup> which was frequented by wandering teachers (paribbājakā)<sup>13</sup> of all sects. Of the Buddhist establishments here Rhys Davids writes:<sup>14</sup> 'In the Buddha's time there were already four distinct establishments of his Order in the suburbs of Kosambi—the Badarika, Kukkuta, and Ghosita Parks, and the Mango Grove of Pāvāriya (Vin. 4. 16; Sum. 319).' Of the four places thus referred to only the first and third are mentioned in the Vinaya; the remaining two appear in the commentaries but are additional to those mentioned in the first four Nikāyas and the Vinaya. Rāja Udena's park near the river at Kosambi is also mentioned.<sup>15</sup>

he is said to have visited the following places besides Rājagaha:<sup>1</sup> Uruvelā,<sup>2</sup> on the bank of the river Nerañjarā, where Gotama attained enlightenment, and, not far distant, Gayā-Head (Gayā-sisa) overlooking the town of Gayā,<sup>3</sup> the Southern Mountain region<sup>4</sup> lying south of the capital, in which region the Brāhman village of Ekanālā receives specific mention; Ambalalaṭṭikā,<sup>5</sup> Ambasaṇḍā,<sup>6</sup> Andhakavinda,<sup>7</sup> Khānumata,<sup>8</sup> Mātulā,<sup>9</sup> Nālaka,<sup>10</sup> Nālandā,<sup>11</sup> Pañcasālā,<sup>12</sup> and Pātaligāma, which afterwards became the famous city of Pātaliputta.<sup>13</sup> Mention is also made of Kallavālamutta-village,<sup>14</sup> where, however, Buddha merely appeared in a vision.

146. In the Aṅga<sup>15</sup> country, which was a subordinate kingdom lying to the eastward of Magadha along the course of the Ganges, and which had recently come under the overlordship<sup>16</sup> of that kingdom, the following places are mentioned as being honoured by a visit from the Buddha: Campā,<sup>17</sup> the capital city, with the villages of Assapura<sup>18</sup> and Āpana,<sup>19</sup> and also the city of Bhaddiya.<sup>20</sup> The city of Campā lay on the east bank of the river of the same name,<sup>21</sup> which formed the eastern boundary of Magadha. It was close to the modern Bhāgūlpur.<sup>22</sup> The tradition that Gotama visited Campā and the villages of the Aṅga country south of the Ganges and east of Magadha proper is supported by scattered references in all four early Nikāyas. Campā is further mentioned in the Mahā-Parinibbāna Sutta<sup>23</sup> as one of the great cities more suitable to be the scene of the death of the Blessed One than the small town of Kusinagara. The city of Bhaddiya was the native place of the lady Visākhā,<sup>24</sup> the great benefactress of the Buddhist Order, and is said in Buddhaghosha's Commentary on the preached therein. The references are too numerous to record here in full. As regards other localities, whose claims are less clearly proven, it is believed that all the references in the first four Nikāyas to the actual presence of the Master there are given in the several chapters or sections devoted to the subject in the present work.

Dhammapada to have been in Bengal,<sup>1</sup> which lay still farther eastward than the Aṅgan country; but in the Mahā-vagga<sup>2</sup> of the Vinaya Piṭaka, the Magadhan king Bimbisāra<sup>3</sup> speaks of 'that city of Bhaddiya which is our territory', and it was therefore probably annexed to the Aṅgan country. The Mahā-vagga also records a visit of the Buddha to Bhaddiya, where he is said to have stayed in the Jātiya Grove.<sup>4</sup>

148. In the lands of the small sub-Himalayan tribal republics, which came under the influence either of the Vajjian Confederacy or the Kosalan monarchy, the Canonical Books mention:

- (i) 'Among the Mallas':<sup>17</sup> the chief town of the clan, Pāvā,<sup>18</sup> and Anupiyā,<sup>19</sup> Kusinārā<sup>20</sup> the scene of the Buddha's death, and Uruvelakappa.<sup>21</sup>

- (iv) 'Among the Bhaggans'<sup>8</sup> the Buddha and the Elders stayed from time to time on the Sumsumāra Peak (Sumsumāra-gire).<sup>9</sup> This is stated<sup>10</sup> to have been near Kapilavatthu, but may have been considerably to the south of the Sakyan territories since Buddha is said in the Culla-vagga<sup>11</sup> to have proceeded from Vesālī to Sumsumāragiri in the Bhagga country and to have gone thence direct to Sāvatti.

- (v) In the Himālayan<sup>12</sup> country (Himavanta-padese), north of Kosala and westward of the Sakkans, on the slopes of the mountains (Himavanta-passe), numerous Buddhist devotees settled, and the Buddha is said to have visited them.

150. In the Vamśa<sup>18</sup> kingdom of Kosambi,<sup>19</sup> lying south-west of Kosala and north of the Jamna, besides the capital city of the same name, few if any places are mentioned. After the dissensions which broke out among the members of the Order at Kosambi at a later date during Gotama's residence in that city, the Teacher finding it impossible to placate their quarrels departed to await the return of a spirit of moderation to both parties, and on his route northward passed through Bālakaloṇakāra-gāma (Bālaka the salt-maker's village),<sup>20</sup> and after halting there reached Pācīna-vamśa-daya (Eastern Bamboo Park),<sup>21</sup> whence he proceeded to Pārileyyaka.<sup>22</sup> It is not clear whether this last place lay in the Vamśa territory or in Kosala.

151. In the sub-kingdom of Kāsi (Benāres),<sup>23</sup> the eastern neighbour of Kosambi, few places<sup>24</sup> are mentioned in the Canon other than the city and immediate environs of Benāres.

152. In the lands of the Kuru clan<sup>25</sup> neighbouring on Kosambi on the north-west side, and situated between the Jamna on the west and Kosala on the east, the township of Kammāssadhamma<sup>26</sup> and Thul-lakoṭṭhita<sup>27</sup> are said in the Canonical Books to have been visited by the Buddha.

153. The Buddha is also said in the Samyutta Nikāya to have stayed among the Sumbhans<sup>28</sup> (Sumbhesu), in a town called Śetaka or Sedaka.

<sup>28</sup> Ch. 16 d § 3. The position of this clan is not clear, but it was apparently settled in the lands west of Kosala.

156. Westward and southward of the Jamna lay the great western kingdom of Avanti,<sup>13</sup> of which the capital was Ujjeni.<sup>14</sup> It would not appear to be authenticated that the Teacher himself journeyed to the regions on this side of the Jamna. It is noticeable that in the first four Nikāyas Avanti is only five times made the scene of a Discourse (Sutta), and on each of these occasions the preacher is the venerable Mahā-Kaccāna.<sup>15</sup> The scenes of these Discourses are Kuraraghara<sup>16</sup>

<sup>4</sup> 'The Cetis . . . had two distinct settlements. One, probably the older, was in the mountains, in what is now called Nepal [Jat. v. 514, 518]. The other, probably a later colony, was near Kosambi to the east and has been even confused with the land of the Vamśa [Kosambi]: Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 26.

<sup>5</sup> In the Mahā-vagga, Kh. vii. i. 1 (Ch. 8 j § 5), it is stated that a party of Pātheyyaka (western) Bhikkhus (friars) on their way to Sāvatti were delayed during the rainy season at Sāketa. On the word Pātheyyaka Rhys Davids (SBE, xvii, pp. 146-7) has the following note: ' . . . Pātheyya, with Pācina, Avanti, and Dakkhinā-patha, is one of the principal divisions into which India, as then known, was divided; and that it includes most, if not all, of the great westerly kingdoms of Kura, Pancāla, etc., which are the last eight of the 16 kingdoms in the stock list [see IN 12 below] . . . Probably the literal meaning of Pātheyya is "western" (Sams. pratyāñk). . . ' Int. § 159.

<sup>6</sup> The rivers which figure in the Vinaya Piṭaka and in the first four Nikāyas of the Sutta Piṭaka are those of the Gangetic plain, from the river Jamna eastward. See Ap. H 4 d, Culla-vagga, Kh. ix. i. 4: ' . . . the great rivers—that is to say, the Gangā, the Yamunā, the Aciravati [Int. § 149], the Sarabhū and the Mahi—when they have fallen into the great ocean, renounce their name and lineage and are thenceforth reckoned as the great ocean.' and Makarakata.<sup>1</sup> Varanā (or Viranā) mentioned in the Anguttara Nikāya, i, p. 65, was probably a township of the Avantis, but is not described thus definitely. If Gotama did not visit Avanti this was probably for sound administrative reasons and it may be hazarded that these were connected with linguistic difficulties, the language or languages of the inhabitants of the western kingdom differing markedly at that period from the group of kindred tongues of the dominant peoples of the Middle-land, though whether the former were connected with those of the north-west or south of India does not appear.

157. Certain places are said in the Nikāyas and elsewhere to have been visited by the Buddha or his followers without any specification being given of the clan, province, or kingdom to which they belonged. Under this head come Ālavi,<sup>2</sup> Kajangalā<sup>3</sup> which is described as an eastern border township, Kimbilā<sup>4</sup> which was on the bank of the river Ganges, and Verañjā<sup>5</sup> which apparently was between the Ganges and the river Jamna; also Ātimā<sup>6</sup> which was between Kusinārā and Sāvatti, and the Mankula<sup>7</sup> and Cāliya<sup>8</sup> hills. Macchikāsaṇḍa<sup>9</sup> is alternatively placed among the Kāsis and Sāvatti; it is not claimed that the Teacher himself went there. Setakaṇṇika and Thūna are barely mentioned as remote places on the southern and western borders of the Middle-land.<sup>10</sup>

POLITICAL BACKGROUND<sup>11</sup> OF GOTAMA'S TIMES

It is noticeable that the order in which the clans are placed in these lists is from the east to the west.<sup>12</sup> The shorter list observes the same order as the longer, but omits at the beginning the two easternmost clans, namely, Aṅgas and Magadhas, and at the end the four westernmost (west and north-west) clans, and thus includes only the clans occupying the Middle-land (Madhyadesha),<sup>13</sup> which lies between the river Gandak on the east and the Jamna on the west, and which is the central region of northern Indian history. The Suttas contained in the first four Nikāyas were gathered from persons who had heard them in places scattered over all the regions visited by the Buddha, and were collected at the great Councils<sup>14</sup> from the mouths of representatives of the several states or provinces. It would seem that the longer list of states was developed in imperial Magadha, and the shorter list found in Dīgha 18 was formulated north of the Ganges under the influence of either Sāvatti or Vesālī.

159. It may be conjectured that the ten clans above mentioned formed the inner circle of Kshatriya or Rājput<sup>15</sup> tribes ruling the Middle-land at this period, having issued from the mid-Himālayan region and spread eastward and westward.<sup>16</sup> Gotama's tribe, the 160. That these tribes imposed their rule on a people of mixed blood, speaking an Aryan language, brought thither by invaders from the north-west, seems likely. The people of Magadha were not, apparently, of the inner circle of tribes, but their royal house was closely allied in blood to the Vajjian aristocracy<sup>2</sup> and to the Kosalan royal house,<sup>3</sup> and doubtless the landed and martial classes generally were related to the clansmen north of the Ganges.

<sup>16</sup> For the early Prākṛit legendary history of the Middle-land see F. E. Pargiter; Purāṇa Text of the Kāli Age (1913). In the confused Purāṇa annals most of the sixteen tribes are mentioned but not those of the North-west; Ikshvāku, the legendary ancestor of the Sakyas, appears repeatedly (Ch. 13 c § 10 [15] n). For the distinction between the eastern and western Aryan tribes occupying northern India cp. Oldenberg, Buddha (Stuttgart, 1923), pp. 10, 73, 174, 191. See also Int. § 155 n; Ch. 17 c [36] n. It was the north-western clans that Alexander met and overcame some two hundred years after Gotama's death. A branch of the Sixteen Clans, Sakyans, was not of sufficient importance for separate mention in such a list.<sup>1</sup>

161. The easternmost clan of the shorter list above, the Vajjians,<sup>4</sup> were organized in a Confederacy, which at the time of Buddha's death constituted an independent and vigorous republican state.<sup>5</sup> Of this Confederacy the Licchavis,<sup>6</sup> whose head-quarters were at Vesālī, were the most important member, and they were still powerful in the fourth century A.D., when the fifth Gupta monarch married a Licchavi princess.<sup>7</sup> The non-Brāhman inhabitants of Tīrḥūt, or the north-west part of modern Bihār, are doubtless largely descended from the Vajjians and kindred clans and are a remarkably robust and virile stock with marked characteristics of their own.

162. The 'stock list' of chief clans in Dīgha 18<sup>8</sup> represents a tradition doubtless older than the Buddha's time,<sup>9</sup> and still adequately represents the condition of affairs prevailing in Gotama's lifetime, as is shown by the details given of the Teacher's journeyings from tribe to tribe.<sup>10</sup> The Magadhas, however, under King Bimbisāra,<sup>11</sup> shortly before the Buddha's ministry established an overlordship over their eastern neighbours the Āṅgas;<sup>12</sup> and the Kosalas by this time under Gotama's contemporary, King Pasenadi, had imposed their overlordship upon their southern neighbours the Kāśīs,<sup>13</sup> and upon the famous and ancient city of Benāres. The monarchical system of government<sup>14</sup>

having reached the western coast, seems to have set forth by sea at a very early date to Ceylon (Int. § 21 n) and to have established a kingdom there, whence they maintained a connexion with northern India (cp. Eliot, H. and B., vol. iii, p. 12). They may thus have pointed the way to the countries now known as Indo-China. The two great Indian epics seem to be based originally on Kosalan legends of a war between the eastern and western clans and an invasion of Ceylon by the former. It may not be fanciful to see in the martial and puritanical Sikhs or Singhs of the Panjāb the descendants, lineal or spiritual, of those eastern clansmen who carried the Mauryan Empire into the countries westward of the Middle-land and who filled the valleys of Afghanistan and Kashmir with Buddhist monasteries.

was firmly established among the Magadhas and Kosalas, and westward of these the Vāṃsas<sup>1</sup> occupying the strip of territory between the Ganges and the Jamna, near the junction of those rivers, were also under the monarchical form of government. This form of government also prevailed among the Avantis<sup>2</sup> in the great kingdom stretching south-westward from the Jamna to Ujjeni,<sup>3</sup> the capital city. North-westward of Avanti and westward of the river Jamna the Sūrasena clan was also under monarchical rule, the royal house being related by marriage<sup>4</sup> to that of Avanti.

163. There is no mention of monarchical institutions at this date among the clans lying to the north and north-west of these kingdoms and westward of the Kosalan kingdom, of which latter the river Ganges was apparently the western boundary.

164. Eastward of the Kosalan kingdom and northward of the Vajjian Confederacy lay the territories of a number of minor clans, of which only the Mallas find place in the 'stock list', but which include Gotama's own clan, the Sakyas,<sup>5</sup> besides the less known Kolis<sup>6</sup> and Bhaggas.<sup>7</sup> The system of government prevailing among the Sakyas and the small neighbouring clans, as well as among the Mallas<sup>8</sup> and the more powerful Vajjian Confederacy,<sup>9</sup> was evidently republican.<sup>10</sup>

165. The Introduction to the Jātaka Commentary represents Sudhodana, Gotama's father, as a Mahārāja or great king,<sup>11</sup> but it is apparent from the same narrative that the Sakyas were a comparatively small agricultural community,<sup>12</sup> and the Vinaya Piṭaka<sup>13</sup> accounts show that the head of the government was temporary and elective, though frequently, but perhaps not necessarily always, chosen from the family to which Gotama belonged.<sup>14</sup> Siddhodana's eldest son Siddhattha, who afterwards became the Buddha, and Siddhattha's only son Rāhula retired from the world, as did afterwards their cousin Bhaddiya<sup>1</sup> during the period when he was actually head of the government, besides Nanda<sup>2</sup> who was the Teacher's half-brother, and Ānanda his cousin and numerous other close relations, without apparently any disturbance of the course of affairs in the little state.

166. On the death of the Buddha in the small town of Kusinārā in the territory of the Mallas it fell to the Mallas of Kusinārā<sup>3</sup> to distribute the Teacher's remains after the cremation. The Mahā-Parinibbāna Sutta<sup>4</sup> account states that the remains were distributed by them to (1) the King of Magadha, Ajātasattu,<sup>5</sup> the son of the queen<sup>6</sup> of the Videha<sup>7</sup> clan, (2) the Licchavis of Vesālī, (3) the Sakyas of Kapilavatthu,<sup>8</sup> (4) the Bulis of Allakappa, (5) the Koliyas of Rāmagāma,<sup>9</sup> (6) the Brāhman of Vethadīpa, (7) the Mallas of Pāvā,<sup>10</sup> besides (8) their own share; whilst other relics were given by them to (9) Doṇa the Brāhman,<sup>11</sup> and (10) the Moriyas of Pippilivana. Thus the Mallas of Kusinārā are said, not without verisimilitude, to have distributed, besides their own portion, remains or other relics to the King of Magadha; to the Licchavis of Vesālī, who were the most powerful of their nearer neighbours; to their own kinsmen the Mallas of Pāvā; to the Sakyas and Koliyas, who were close kinsmen of Gotama; to the Bulis of Allakappa, and the Moriyas<sup>12</sup> of Pippilivana, who were neighbours,<sup>13</sup> and possibly kinsmen, either of the Mallas or of the Sakyas; and, further, to two Brāhmans,<sup>14</sup> Vethadīpa and Doṇa, the former being apparently an important spiritual personage of the neighbourhood, and the latter a prominent figure of the town. It is observable that this list, whilst including the powers of Vesālī and Magadha, makes no mention of the King of Kosala, who at this time was the overlord<sup>15</sup> of Gotama's clan, the Sakyas, and who had lately invaded and sacked<sup>16</sup> Gotama's birthplace, Kapilavatthu. It may perhaps be concluded that though the Sakyas were under the Kosalan king, their neighbours the Mallas and some of the kindred clans were drawn within the influence of, if not subjected to, the more easterly power, the Vajjians, who in turn came, through marriage alliances, within the sphere of influence of Magadha.

167. In the narrative of the Buddha's last journey<sup>1</sup> it is stated that when the Teacher lay sick unto death in the Mallan town of Kusinārā his cousin and disciple, Ānanda, begged him not to die in 'this little wattle and daub town', but in one of the 'great cities, such as Campā,<sup>2</sup> Rājagaha,<sup>3</sup> Sāvattthi,<sup>4</sup> Sāketa,<sup>5</sup> Kosambi,<sup>6</sup> and Benāres',<sup>7</sup> where due honour could be paid to his remains. This list of towns including Campā (Bhāgalpūr) and Sāketa, besides four of the scenes of the Teacher's greatest activity, but excluding Vesālī,<sup>8</sup> is interesting. Ānanda, who had recently with Gotama departed from the last-named city, would scarcely have omitted it. One may perhaps conclude that the list was made after the subjection of the Vajjians to Magadha<sup>9</sup> under King Ajātasattu.<sup>10</sup> The omission of Kapilavatthu<sup>11</sup> is equally interesting. From this omission it may be gathered that the Sakyan capital was only a small provincial town. From the circumstance that Ānanda, himself a Sakyan, is traditionally supposed to have deplored that Gotama, his cousin, should not die in an important city such as, among others, Sāvattthi, the Kosalan capital, one may guess that the memory of the recent attack of the Kosalan king, Vidūdabha,<sup>12</sup> upon Kapilavatthu roused no great resentment among the Sakyan Rājputs, and therefore that the accounts of the destruction of the town found in the Commentaries are exaggerated.

168. When Gotama made the Great Renunciation and left his native town to seek that Enlightenment which should illumine and save the world, he turned his steps southwards towards the famous city of Rājagaha and the kingdom of Magadha. There doubtless he looked forward to meeting the spiritual teachers<sup>13</sup> attracted to the neighbourhood of the capital city of that powerful kingdom. At that time the King of the Magadhas was Bimbisāra,<sup>14</sup> who is said to have received the Bodhisatta with respect and kindness, and who six years later after the Great Enlightenment accepted the teaching of the Buddha on his return to the neighbourhood of the great city<sup>15</sup> and richly endowed the Order (Samgha). Bimbisāra was married to the sister<sup>16</sup> of Pasenadi, King of Kosala, and the bride received as her dowry the revenue<sup>17</sup> of a village in the ancient kingdom of Kāśi, now subjected to Kosala. Bimbisāra also married a lady of the Videha clan,<sup>1</sup> intending apparently thus to cement an alliance with the important Vajjian Confederacy, whose territories lay on the northern bank of the Ganges opposite Magadha. Mention is made of Udumbarikā<sup>2</sup> and Kshemā<sup>3</sup> as Magadhan queen-consorts, and the Canonical Books mention Abhaya<sup>4</sup> and Jayasena<sup>5</sup> as princes of the royal house of Magadha. It does not appear whether either of these was the same as Ajātasattu,<sup>6</sup> the son of the Videhan consort of Bimbisāra. This prince succeeded to the throne,<sup>7</sup> which, it is said, he occupied before the death of his father, whom he subsequently murdered.<sup>8</sup>

169. (i) In the Kosalan kingdom during the greater part of the Buddha's ministry the throne was occupied by Pasenadi,<sup>9</sup> of whom frequent mention is made in the Canonical Books, a whole section of the Samyutta Nikāya being called 'The Kosalan' after him. The king became a devoted follower of the Buddha.<sup>10</sup> (ii) His policy was evidently one of peaceful alliance with the kingdom of Magadha, as is evidenced by the marriage of his sister to King Bimbisāra and of his daughter<sup>11</sup> to Ajātasattu. (iii) Pasenadi was married to the daughter of Mahānāma,<sup>12</sup> who was for the time ruler of the Sakyan clan. Tradition or commentarial imagination relates that the Sakyan Council played a trick upon their Kosalan neighbour and dominant ally and sent him as his bride an illegitimate daughter of their chief by a slave-girl. The offspring of this marriage was Vidūdabha,<sup>13</sup> who near the close of the Buddha's life successfully rebelled against his father, who died whilst fleeing towards Magadha. After Vidūdabha's accession, it is said, he invaded<sup>14</sup> and subjugated the Sakyans in revenge, having learnt the true origin of his mother.

170. Thus when the reign of King Pasenadi was drawing to a close the understanding between the kingdoms of Magadha and Kosala was broken, and Ajātasattu<sup>1</sup> invaded Kosala, but after some preliminary successes was defeated, and a peace was patched up<sup>2</sup> which postponed the ultimate struggle between the two kingdoms for mastery over the Middle-land. Ajātasattu favoured the Buddha's dissentient cousin Devadatta,<sup>3</sup> who after accepting the teaching of Gotama subsequently found the Middle Way too easy for salvation and returned to the stricter path of an asceticism which did not differ greatly from that of the Hindus. The king, however, was afterwards induced to visit the Buddha and nominally at least accepted his teaching.<sup>4</sup> When maturing his schemes for the conquest of his mother's kinsmen, the Vajjians, he sent his Brāhman minister to question the Buddha, with a view to finding out the weak points of the Vajjian Confederacy.<sup>5</sup> The Buddha is sometimes reproached by historians for having replied to such questioning, but the Canon only records that the Buddha, when interviewed by the minister, addressed his own followers and said that as long as the Vajjians faithfully observed their own well-tried institutions they would flourish and be strong. The king is said to have proceeded to undermine these institutions, but for that the Teacher cannot be held responsible; nor can any great teacher be fairly reproached for the fact that he does not shun the company of publicans and sinners. On the last journey, when Gotama reached Pāṭaligāma on the south bank of the river Ganges, near the junction with the river Sōn,<sup>6</sup> he found the two chief ministers<sup>7</sup> of Ajātasattu fortifying that strong position, nominally against the attacks of the Vajjians. On the death of the Buddha not long afterwards the king claimed from the Mallas a share of the relics of the Blessed One.

171. Frequent mention is made in the Canonical Books of the councils of the republican clans occupying the north-easterly part of the Middle-land, and council-chambers<sup>8</sup> are mentioned both at the head-quarters of a clan and in minor towns, and in the case of the Vajjians a great Confederacy was formed uniting a number of minor clans and yet apparently leaving to each a measure of self-government.<sup>9</sup>

172. From time to time mention is made of chief and other ministers<sup>1</sup> employed by the kings of those clans which had come under the monarchical form of government. The kings necessarily were acquainted with the institutions of their republican neighbours, and it may be concluded that their methods of government though not constitutional were by no means unsystematic.

173. Some two hundred years later, near the close of the fourth century B.C., Seleukos Nikator,<sup>2</sup> after the death of Alexander the Great, succeeded in establishing his claim to the most easterly part of the Macedonian conqueror's newly formed empire, including Persia and the north-west portion of India. In pursuance of his claims in India Seleukos encountered and was defeated by the consolidated clans of the Middle-land, who had found union and strength under Chandragupta<sup>3</sup> (Greek Sandrakottos), the first sovereign of the great Mauryan line. A treaty was made by which Seleukos gave up to Chandragupta his Indian provinces, including the modern Afghanistan and Baluchistan, and the Mauryan Empire thus included all the eastern and western clans of northern India and the north-west frontier.<sup>4</sup> As a result of the treaty Seleukos sent Megasthenes as ambassador to the court of Chandragupta at Pataliputta (Greek Palimbothra). Megasthenes' account<sup>5</sup> of the government centralized at the head-quarters of Chandragupta's empire shows a highly elaborated and regularized system, sufficiently practical to maintain Chandragupta's large empire in a condition of remarkable strength and prosperity.

RELIGIOUS AND PHILOSOPHICAL BACKGROUND<sup>7</sup>

176. Glimpses of the ancient Indian religious beliefs contemporary with and earlier than Buddhism are given from time to time in the Canonical Books. The hierarchy of Hindu gods headed by Brahmā<sup>8</sup> appears not infrequently in the background, as it were, but much changed and diminished in power and altogether subordinate to the Buddha. Mention is made of the Vedas,<sup>9</sup> the ancient collections of hymns addressed to the gods ruling over the forces of nature by the Rishis or Seers of the Aryan tribes, which entered the plains of India through the north-western passes, but in each case it is the 'three vedas' that are mentioned, the fourth or Atharva Veda<sup>10</sup> being evidently a later addition.<sup>11</sup>

177. The great ethical doctrine of karma,<sup>12</sup> i.e. the continuous consequences of actions upon the individual in a long series of re-births, was widely spread before the time of the Buddha, and was accepted by him, but was necessarily greatly modified<sup>13</sup> in his teaching by his doctrine of the non-existence of a permanent self. The endeavour to escape from karma and the chain of existences encouraged then, as now among Hindu devotees, practices of extreme asceticism.<sup>14</sup>

178. Behind the gods and behind the whole phenomenal world the Indian philosophic mind perceives the unconditioned origin of all, the One, Brahman.<sup>15</sup> The doctrine of māyā,<sup>16</sup> or the illusory nature of all phenomena, was taught by thinkers of the Vedāntist<sup>1</sup> school, and it would appear that Gotama's teachers<sup>2</sup> Ālāra Kālāma<sup>3</sup> and Uddaka<sup>4</sup> the disciple<sup>5</sup> of Rāma imparted to him this philosophy. Though Gotama was not satisfied with their doctrines and with their efforts to transcend the ego,<sup>6</sup> yet even after his Enlightenment he considered that they were not far from the truth. In the famous Tevijja Suttanta<sup>7</sup> the two young Brāhman interlocutors of the Buddha question him regarding the respective merits of the methods of Pokkarasāti and Tārukka, each of whom taught a method of attaining union with Brahmā. These teachers evidently were orthodox Hindu exponents of yoga<sup>8</sup> (union with the deity), and probably differed only as to method and imparted a doctrine similar to that inculcated by Gotama's own teachers.

179. Important Hindu teachers contemporary with Gotama are mentioned frequently in the Canon, and their activities in opposition to the Buddha are strictured. Their teachings, like those of Gotama, were not confined to the ancient ways. Like the Buddha they wandered<sup>9</sup> from place to place in the Middle-land spreading their doctrines by discussion. Six<sup>10</sup> of these leaders are specially censured, namely, Pūrana Kassapa,<sup>11</sup> Makkhali Gosāla,<sup>12</sup> Ajita Kesakambalin,<sup>13</sup>

180. Except in the case of Nātaputta, who was the founder of the Jain sect, the tenets of these philosophers are now known only through the reports of their confirmed opponents, and therefore any definition of the exact boundaries of their several philosophies can only be tentative. At the same time, the subject is one of real importance, since it is evident that the Buddha found himself in strong opposition to, and strongly opposed by, all of them, and from this opposition it should be possible to obtain important indications regarding the nature of Gotama's original doctrines.

181. Though it may be hazardous to define the boundaries between these hostile philosophies, it yet seems safe to say that each of them exhibited one or more of the following characteristics, all of which were repugnant to Gotama, namely, a radical scepticism<sup>4</sup> questioning all things and sapping all decision and all action; a radical materialism<sup>5</sup> denying all things spiritual and involving a determinism which denied all freedom of the will; a materialism combined with a radical indeterminism, which left all things to chance, and equally eliminated the freedom of the will, the distinction between good and evil, and all moral responsibility; and an individualism which, while seeking to transcend the boundaries or material limitations of the ego and thus to merge itself in the Universal, yet concentrated its efforts solely upon its own salvation, through a series of rebirths or directly, and found in passivism or quietism the way of escape from the earthly coil.<sup>6</sup> All these tenets were in exact opposition to the teachings of the Dhamma of Gotama, who, whatever may have been the doctrines of the later Buddhism preached by his followers, himself taught a realism which accepted the phenomenal world as we see it, and insisted upon the freedom of the will and moral responsibility, upon the insignificance of the individual as individual, though equally insistent upon the importance of all actions of the individual in relation to their consequences upon others, and turned away resolutely from the quest after self-salvation through self-concentration and quietism to find the blessing of Nibbāna<sup>1</sup> (self-extinction) in selfless and tireless activity.<sup>2</sup>

182. Of the six leaders mentioned above, Sañjaya,<sup>3</sup> the subtle-minded sceptic or agnostic, was the teacher of the youthful Sāriputta and Moggallāna, who became the two chief disciples of Gotama. His agnosticism was as radical as that of the Athenian Sceptics who troubled the philosophic schools of Greece not long afterwards.

183. Makkhali Gosāla,<sup>4</sup> the head of the Ājīvaka<sup>5</sup> sect, was a thorough materialist, who attributed all phenomena to chance, found no difference between right and wrong, and consequently denied all moral responsibility. He apparently believed in an almost endless series of re-births, but not in any moral progress during the process. His teachings called forth the special censure<sup>6</sup> of the Buddha.

184. Nātaputta, the most famous of the six tittiya leaders, was the founder of the Nigaṇṭha sect, whose doctrines have been identified with Jainism,<sup>7</sup> and outside the Buddhist texts is generally known as Mahāvīra. He was a Licchavi of high family and was apparently somewhat older than Gotama, whom he predeceased by a brief time.<sup>8</sup> Though the tenets of Jainism and Buddhism have often been confounded, there must have been originally a strong contrast between the two faiths. According to the Buddhist tradition the followers of Nātaputta brought about the death of Moggallāna<sup>9</sup> shortly before the death of the Buddha. The opposition between the two leaders was great and constant, and in the case of two such men cannot be attributed to personal rivalry. Their doctrines doubtless had a common starting-point in Vedāntic Hinduism, but they differed radically in their views on the nature of the soul, the older leader teaching a theory of karma<sup>10</sup> conducting the individual soul through endless rebirths to ultimate salvation in the liberation of the ego from matter, and the other teaching the mortality of the soul, and the unimportance of the ego except in the sphere of duty and moral responsibility, of which the effects are without end.<sup>1</sup> For Jainism matter and the individual soul<sup>2</sup> are indestructible, and the supreme aim is the liberation of the latter from the former. Matter is pervaded by countless individual souls, and their liberation, which is the supreme end, is attainable by asceticism, passivism, and harmlessness (ahimsā).<sup>3</sup>

185. All the six leaders<sup>4</sup> ignored, as did Gotama, the Vedic rites and the claims of the Brāhman<sup>5</sup> to religious dominance. None of them belonged to the Brāhman caste, and two at least of the seven, Nātaputta and Gotama, were members of the Kshatriya<sup>6</sup> or martial caste. All the six are occasionally in the Nikāyas termed Brāhman, but only in the sense of holy or religious men or ascetics.<sup>7</sup> The Nikāyas and the Vinaya in specifying the four great castes<sup>8</sup>—or sometimes three,<sup>9</sup> including the Vaisyas and omitting the Sūdra<sup>10</sup> (Pāli Sudda) caste which is non-Aryan—place the Kshatriya (Pāli Khattiya) or martial caste first and the Brāhman only second. The name Brāhman is used respectfully throughout the Canon, but in many passages means, as above, 'a holy man', and is by no means limited to the Brāhman caste. In the life of the householder an occasional part only is played by the Brāhman ritual.<sup>11</sup>

time of his conversion was a fire-worshipper, and it may be gathered that this sect at that time numbered a great many adherents. The object of their worship doubtless represented the fundamental principle of ethereal fire from which all things created were said to arise. The worship was doubtless connected with the Vedic god Agni,<sup>1</sup> and perhaps with the fire-worship of the Iranian section of the Aryans. The sect was Brāhmanical, and its members were called Jāṭilas<sup>2</sup> (matted-haired). It was to them that the Buddha preached the beautiful Fire-sermon.<sup>3</sup> It is notable that in the rules of ordination contained in the Vinaya Piṭaka the probationary period imposed upon novices was excused in the case of former fire-worshippers.<sup>4</sup> The ground for this exemption is stated in the Vinaya to be their belief in the doctrine that actions have results, in other words the doctrine of moral responsibility. They thus evidently accepted the doctrine of karma in some sense.<sup>5</sup> It would seem, moreover, that the Buddha recognized an affinity between the worship of a divine ethereal creative fire<sup>6</sup> and the cosmogonic basis<sup>7</sup> of his own creed.

187. Mendicancy<sup>8</sup> was an accepted feature of the religious life in India then as now. It was the natural duty of the householder to supply the few needs of the ascetics<sup>9</sup> and wanderers,<sup>10</sup> devoted to holy life and high thinking. It seems to have been expected that from among these there would arise from time to time divinely enlightened teachers or Buddhas,<sup>11</sup> and that their enlightenment would be the outcome of a long series of previous births.<sup>12</sup>

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL BACKGROUND<sup>3</sup>

189. Many features of Indian life, besides the political and religious, are illustrated by the texts selected. The picture of course is a compounded one and exactly the same reliance cannot be placed on every part. Light is thrown upon the revenues,<sup>4</sup> trade, and occupations<sup>5</sup> and economic life of the day, its manufactures,<sup>6</sup> its money,<sup>7</sup> its merchant princes or Seṭṭhis,<sup>8</sup> travel by sea<sup>9</sup> and by land, transport and caravans,<sup>10</sup> and behind these the farmers on the land,<sup>11</sup> and incidental famines,<sup>12</sup> earthquakes,<sup>13</sup> and robber bands.<sup>14</sup>

191. It is in a varied scene amidst an ancient civilization, probably established by earlier races before the advent of his own clan into India, that the grave figure of the Sakyan Sage, the Enlightened, the Selfless, moves upon his ceaseless mission. Those who desire to study more fully the political, social, and economic life, and the religious beliefs, Brāhmanic and animistic, of India in the time of Gotama must turn to the late T. W. Rhys Davids's Buddhist India, where the necessary references to the Pāli texts are collected and analysed. It is not practicable to give here more than glimpses at the complex background of the Buddha's life.

THE BUDDHA<sup>2</sup> AND THE DHAMMA<sup>3</sup>

RENUNCIATION, ENLIGHTENMENT, THE FIRST CONVERTS, AND THE FOUNDATION OF THE SAṂGHA

<sup>1</sup> The following passages are as far as possible literal translations from the Pāli originals (Int. § 21). All omissions are indicated by dots. Summaries of the longer passages omitted are given in footnotes, and reasons where necessary are given for their omission. Many of these omitted passages are descriptive of supernatural or marvellous events. Single words or phrases have occasionally been omitted from the main text in accordance with the present editor's belief that the Buddha taught a doctrine of pure altruism, and that egoistic or individualistic phrases and passages in the text are of later origin (Int. § 3). In all these cases the omitted words have been given in the footnotes so that readers may judge for themselves.

<sup>2</sup> The Enlightened One, or the Awakened; literally, Understanding, Knowing (Int. §§ 1, 187; Ch. 6 b § 2 [4]). For titles applied to Buddha see Ch. 4 § 9; Ch. 7 a § 8; Ch. 9 b § 1 [2]; Ch. 10 a §§ 2, 6 [2]; Ch. 11 e § 1 [2]; Ch. 12 e § 3 [3]; Ch. 13 c § 9 (534) n; Ch. 22 b § 27; Ch. 22 c § 10; Ap. A 2 c; Ap. E b § 2; Ap. H 1 § 5.

<sup>3</sup> Int. § 13; IN 5 b; Ap. E c i § 8 [19]; Ap. F 1 b § 4 [5]; Ap. G and G 1 b § 4. The qualities of the Dhamma are variously stated: Ch. 5 a § 2 [2]; Ch. 8 h § 1 [14]; Ch. 16 c § 3 [1]; Ch. 21 § 7 [25]; Ap. E c ii § 1; Ap. G 1 a § 5 (1), lead; Ap. H 1 § 5. Dhamma in this connexion has been rendered in this book almost uniformly as 'Law'. The word has many shades of meaning. Its general force may be rendered by the word 'system', a word which implies both regularity and complexity, and is applicable to concrete and to abstract things (Ch. 3 § 5 [163]; Ch. 14 a § 7; Ap. E c i § 1 n). For varied meanings cp. Ch. 4 §§ 10 [3], 13 [ii, 3]; Ch. 7 a § 5 [3]; Ch. 8 b § 6 [a]; Ch. 9 a § 1 [1]; Ch. 12 c § 6; Ch. 12 d § 5 [2]; Ch. 14 c § 3; Ch. 19 c § 2 [99]; Ap. C b § 4; Ap. F 1 c [161]; Ap. H 1 § 6 [9]. Perhaps 'idea' or 'ideal' comes as near as possible to the common purport of these varied meanings. Taken in the widest sense dhamma means the truth (the system or nature of things): Ch. 22 b § 13 [23] and Ch. 14 c § 5 [189].

KAPILAVATTHU: BIRTH, YOUTH, AND EARLY DOUBTS

(i) BIRTH AND EARLY YOUTH

<sup>3</sup> The Avidūre-nidāna (Events of the Less-distant Past, or the period nearing the Buddhahood) is the second part of the Nidāna-kathā or Introduction to the Jātaka Commentary; avi-dūre means 'not far off' (Ch. 21 § 10 [6]). The first part, or Dūre-nidāna (Events of the Far Past), is concerned only with the previous births of Gotama as a Bodhisatta (future Buddha; Int. § 92; Ap. A 2 a, Note) during the lives of the twenty-four previous Buddhas (Ap. A 2 c), first as the Brāhman Sumedha and ultimately as Vessantara, after which preparatory existence on earth he proceeded to the Tusita heaven (Tusita-bhavane nibbatti, or Tusita-pure nibbatti; Int. § 93, vi), from which he descended in due course to earth as Siddhattha Gotama. The third part, or Santike-nidāna (Near Events), deals with Gotama's life subsequent to the Great Enlightenment (Ch. 4 §§ 4 n, 5; Ch. 10 d § 3). For the meaning of Nidāna cp. Ch. 8 a [4]; Ch. 8 b § 5; Ch. 12 d § 4; Ch. 23 b § 8; Ap. B c § 2 (2).

<sup>4</sup> The Jātaka-Nidānakathā narrative of Gotama's birth is based on the Acchariya-bhūtaḍḍhamma-S., Majjh. 123; and the account of his youth is founded upon the legend of Vipassin Buddha attributed to Gotama in the Mahāpadāna-S., Dīgha 14 (Ap. G 1 b § 2; Ap. I b § 3 n).

<sup>5</sup> Omitting the three Premonitory Uproars, during the first of which a hundred thousand years before the birth of the Buddha the Spirits cry aloud for 'Friendliness, compassion, sympathy with joy, serenity, reverence for mothers, reverence for fathers and respect for elders'. Of these virtues, thus placed in the very forefront of the Law, the first four are the Divine Qualities (Brahma-vihāra) of the Tevijja-Sutta (Int. § 37; Ap. F 2 b) and the last three summarize the social duties of laymen emphasized in the Sigālobāda-Sutta (Ch. 8 l) and in the Edicts of Asoka (Int. 53). Omitting also: 'When the length of human life is more than a hundred thousand years, the time [for the birth of a Buddha] has not come. Why not?' The words are attributed to the Spirit of Wisdom (the Bodhisatta) destined to become the Buddha. Cp. Ch. 11 c § 26 [4]; Ch. 12 e § 12 n.

<sup>9</sup> Int. § 3; Ch. 4 § 18. These are the famous Three Characteristics, and summarize the basis of the Buddhist philosophy. On their right interpretation depends the proper understanding of the Buddhist creed. They declare in summary form the futility of individual desire or egoism. For the completion of the Buddhist doctrine, however, the Noble Eightfold Path must be added. The Characteristics correspond as a whole with the first three of the Four Noble Truths (Ch. 5). They are philosophical and contemplative and viewed alone passive; but the fourth Truth (the Eightfold Path) inculcates an intense activity such as the Teacher's own life displays.

§ 4. The Four Great Kings (cattāro mahā-rājāno)<sup>9</sup> having raised her and her couch carried her to Himavanta,<sup>10</sup> and having placed her upon the Manosilā tableland, sixty leagues in extent, under a great Sāl-tree, seven leagues in height, they stood [respectfully] aside. Then their consorts came and led her to the Anotatta lake, and having caused her to bathe in order to remove all human taint they dressed her in divine attire and anointed her with perfumes and decked her with divine flowers. Not far thence was the Silver Hill (Rajata-pabbato), in which there was a golden palace. There they prepared a divine couch facing the east<sup>11</sup> and laid her upon it. Then the Bodhisatta having assumed the form of a noble white elephant<sup>12</sup> and having gone to the Golden Hill (Suvanna-pabbato) not far from there, descended thence and ascended the Silver Hill. Approaching from the north side he took a white lotus in his silver-coloured trunk, and having trumpeted he entered the golden palace, and, having moved thrice round his mother's couch keeping his right side<sup>13</sup> towards her he touched her right side and, as it were, entered her womb. Thus he had his conception at the end of the Midsummer-full-moon-

<sup>8</sup> Int. § 95; Ch. 3 § 7 n; Ap. A 2 a (6); cp. Ap. A 2 d. The signs are described in the Mahāpadāna-sutta (Ap. G 1 b § 2), in the Lakkhaṇa-sutta (Ch. 14 c § 3), and in Majjh. 91 (Ch. 12 e § 13). In the Sela-sutta of the Sutta-Nipāta the Brāhman states that 'In our Mantras are handed down the thirty-two signs of a great man'.

<sup>10</sup> Omitting the account of the eight Brāhmins who recognized the marvellous signs on the child. The youngest of these eight was Kondañña, who foresaw that the infant would become a Buddha, whilst the other seven Brāhmins foretold that he would be either a universal king or a Buddha.

Now one day<sup>7</sup> the Rāja celebrated what is called the Sowing Festival<sup>8</sup> (vappamangalam nāma). On that day they used to adorn the city like a palace of the gods. All the slaves<sup>9</sup> and labourers (sabbe dāsa-kammakārādayo), in new clothes and wearing perfumed garlands, used to assemble at the Rāja's house. . . <sup>10</sup> The plough for the Rāja's use was adorned with red gold; also the horns of the oxen, the reins, and the goads. The Rāja with a large retinue left his house taking his son with him.<sup>11</sup> In the field there was a rose-apple tree (jambu-rukkho) with full foliage giving a deep shade. Under it the Rāja caused the babe's (kumarassa) couch to be laid, and over the couch he caused a canopy to be spread. . . <sup>12</sup> Leaving guardians there, the Rāja, in splendid robes, with the councillors, went to the ploughing. On these occasions the Rāja takes a golden plough, the councillors take one hundred and eight silver ploughs less one, and the farmers (kassakā) take the remaining ploughs. Grasping them they plough up and down. The Rāja ploughs from one side of the field to the other and back again. On this occasion the Rāja ploughed with great success.

<sup>4</sup> See § 4 n above. "But what shall be her span of life?" thought the Mahā-satta; and he perceived that it was to be ten months and seven days' (Jātaka, Fausböll, i, p. 49). Her sister Mahā-Pajāpati, who was also married to the Rāja Suddhodana, brought up the child (Ch. 12 b § 2 [3] and Int. § 190, wives; cp. OB, p. 112 n). Pajāpati became the mother of Nanda (Ch. 7 b § 3); cp. E. J. Thomas, Life of Buddha, 1927, p. 26.

<sup>5</sup> Known as Yasodharā, Bhaddā, Subhaddakā, Bimbā, and by other names, and also simply as Rāhula's Mother. Her real name is a matter of uncertainty (OB, p. 119; ThB, pp. 48-50). Ch. 2 § 1; Ch. 7 b § 4; Ch. 10 c (22); Ch. 12 b § 2 [2] n; Ch. 13 c § 14 [91] n; Ap. A 2 b, Note.

<sup>6</sup> Literally, first wife (Ch. 2 § 1; cp. Ch. 15 a § 2 [3] n). There is no record of the Bodhisatta's having had any other wife, though the profusion of names supplied by the commentators has led some of these to believe that they belonged to different persons.

<sup>7</sup> Int. § 171; Ch. 10 b § 3 [3] (office); Ch. 13 c § 13 [3]; Ap. H 3 a.

<sup>12</sup> There is no necessary connexion between the Four Signs and the birth of Rāhula, or between the latter event and Gotama's renunciation of the world. An artificial connexion is found in the supposed meaning of the name of Rāhula (i.e. fetter), but this meaning has been shown to be erroneous (ThB, p. 53 n). The tradition may have compressed the time of the events in order to increase the dramatic effect (Ch. 2 § 1).

<sup>13</sup> Ch. 10 b § 3 [4]. This was a pleasure-ground (uyyāna) or large garden outside the city, possibly with a house inside the enclosure: Int. §§ 136, 190; Ch. 7 a § 7, § 10; Ch. 8 j § 10; Ch. 10 a § 10 [9]; Ch. 14 e § 4 [3]; Ch. 15 b § 15 [12]. Such garden-houses are still valued possessions of wealthy Indians dwelling in towns. Another name for uyyāna was ārāma (Ch. 7 a § 10, ārāma). Cp. Ch. 11 d § 8 [2]; Ch. 16 a § 6 [56] n; Ch. 20 § 9 [14].

(uyyāna-bhūmiṃ) informed his driver and said 'Make ready the chariot'<sup>1</sup> . . . <sup>2</sup> [JN, p. 59.] The gods<sup>3</sup> (devatā) . . . <sup>4</sup> showed him a decrepit old man wasted by age, broken-toothed, grey-haired, bowed and bent-bodied, holding a staff and trembling. . . <sup>5</sup> 'Fie on earthly existence (jatīva)',<sup>6</sup> he cried, 'in which to him who is born decay will be known!' Then with agitated heart he turned back and re-entered his mansion (pāsādam). . . <sup>7</sup> Again one day the Bodhisatta going in the same way towards his garden-house saw a diseased man . . . <sup>8</sup> and with agitated heart he turned back and re-entered the mansion. . . Further, one day the Bodhisatta going towards his garden-house saw a dead man . . . and deeply moved he turned back and re-entered the mansion. . . Again on another day going towards his garden-house he saw one who had retired (pabbajitam)<sup>9</sup> [from worldly life], duly robed and covered. . . <sup>10</sup> That day the Bodhisatta taking pleasure in [the thought of] retirement (pabbajāya) from the worldly life went on to the garden-house. . . <sup>11</sup> The reciters of the Dīgha<sup>12</sup> (Dīgha bhāṇakā), however, state that he saw the Four Omens<sup>13</sup> on the same day, as he was going [to the garden].<sup>14</sup>

<sup>9</sup> In the text this is a Pabbajita, a Buddhist monk, an anticipation of the future Order, and this is commented upon as miraculous. The word, however, means originally one who goes forth and renounces the ordinary life of the world, and may be applied to a Hindu ascetic. Begging ascetics were common among the Hindu sects of the period (Int. § 187). That many Hindu youths of good family retired from the world, 'deserting the household life for the homeless one', in search of 'the highest good', in Gotama's time in India, as in all periods of the history of that spiritually inclined country, he himself testifies (Ch. 5 a § 10 [172]). See Ch. 8 h § 2 (10); Ch. 11 c § 10; Ch. 15 b § 1 [1]; Ch. 17 d § 1 [15]; Ch. 18 d § 2 [197]; Ch. 22 a § 6 [26]; Ap. G 1 b § 2 [14]. Cp. Ch. 3 § 5 [167].

<sup>10</sup> Omitting 'sent by the gods'; also the Bodhisatta's inquiry and the charioteer's inspired reply describing monks and their advantages, although 'he understood neither what a monk was nor what were his distinguishing virtues (guṇe)'.

<sup>13</sup> Nimitte; Ap. A 2 d [21]; cp. Ch. 21 § 7 [25]. In the Ang. Nik. (i. 138) old age, sickness, and death are called messages of the gods or of Yama Rāja (King Death; Int. § 35, § 70 n, devatā; Ap. G 2 b).

<sup>14</sup> If the miraculous portions of the narrative be omitted, we have here a series of events and reflections such as the Buddha may well have narrated to his disciples later (see extracts immediately below from the Ang. Nik. and Majjh. Nik. Cp. Ch. 5 b § 5). Gotama indeed must necessarily have seen and reflected upon old age, sickness, and death. There was no need for special messengers or miracles; they add no dignity to the Buddha. The reflections of Sumedha may be attributed to Gotama on this occasion (Ap. A 2 a).

<sup>12</sup> Omitting 'while yet a Bodhisatta'. The word Bodhisatta (wisdom-being) means one who is about to be fully enlightened. Gotama in conversation may well have spoken of the period before he received enlightenment without conferring upon himself either the title of Buddha or that of Bodhisatta (Ap. A 2 a). Cp. Ch. 13 c § 14 [92].

<sup>13</sup> Or, being born. On jāti see Ch. 4 §§ 16, 17; Ch. 5 b § 5; Ch. 5 c § 6; Ch. 9 a § 10; Ch. 13 c § 29 [4]; Ap. A 2 a (8), (13); Ap. B c §§ 2 (2), 6; Ap. F 1 c [161]; Ap. G 1 a § 3 (5). The word jāti here rendered 'earthly-existence' might perhaps be translated more accurately as 'mortal existence' or 'life'. It means literally 'birth' and is sometimes translated as 're-birth', but the latter idea is not necessarily involved: Ch. 13 c §§ 10 [ii, 1], 15 [19]; Ch. 14 b § 3 [5]; Ch. 16 a § 4 [9] n, [10]. Cp. Ch. 13 c § 21 [7] (mortal); Ap. B a; also Ch. 5 c § 7 [29] (origin), and Ap. E a (Samkhārā). In Ch. 18 b § 6 [4] the word jīvita (life) replaces jāti.

disease<sup>1</sup> . . . death<sup>2</sup> . . . (maranadhammo) . . . grief<sup>3</sup> . . . (and) defilement,<sup>4</sup> sought what was subjected to (earthly-existence . . . decay . . . disease . . . death . . . grief . . .) defilement. Then there came to me this thought:<sup>5</sup> 'Why do I being myself subjected to earthly-existence . . . to decay . . . disease . . . death . . . grief . . . defilement . . . seek what is subjected to earthly-existence . . . decay . . . disease . . . death . . . grief . . . defilement? What if now perceiving the wretchedness of what is subjected to earthly-existence, I were to seek the supreme<sup>6</sup> peace of union (yoga-kkhemam),<sup>7</sup> Nirvāna (nibbānam)<sup>8</sup> which is not subjected<sup>9</sup> to earthly-existence (a-jātaṃ)<sup>10</sup> . . . perceiving the wretchedness of what is subjected to decay . . . disease . . . death . . . grief . . . (and) defilement I were to seek the supreme peace of union, Nirvāna (nibbānam), which is not subjected to<sup>11</sup> (decay . . . disease . . . death<sup>12</sup> . . . grief . . .<sup>13</sup> and) defilement?'<sup>14</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Or, being defiled; Pāli saṅkilesa-dhamma. Ap. F 1 c [161]. Cp. Ch. 2 § 2 (kilesa); Ch. 9 b § 2 [3]; Ch. 12 c § 5 [3]; Ch. 13 c § 14 [91]; Ch. 20 § 10 [17]; Ap. D a § 7 (āsava), and Ap. F 2 c § 3 (defilement).

<sup>7</sup> Or, harmonious calm. Int. § 178; Ch. 11 d § 2 [10]; Ap. C b § 11 [23]; and Ch. 11 c § 17 [3] n. Cp. Ch. 9 b § 4 (khema); further Ch. 15 b § 15 (fulfilment); Ch. 16 a § 2 [265] (unperturbedness); Ch. 16 d § 7 [2] n; Ch. 18 f § 2 [13] (Brahma-bhūta); Ch. 22 b § 26 [9] n; Ap. This search for harmony with the fundamental unity is the basis of Vedāntist and of Buddhist thought.

<sup>8</sup> Nibbāna means 'extinction' (Ch. 22 b § 27) and may be rendered as 'emancipation' or 'release' (cp. mutti, Ap. D a § 6). As Gotama was not yet enlightened the Buddhist Nibbāna cannot as yet have been known, and that which he sought must have been some form or other of the Hindu Nirvāna taught by his contemporaries. E a, Note (amata).

(i) RENUNCIATION

Jātaka Commentary, Introduction (Nidāna-kathā), JN, 60 ff.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1. [JN, p. 60.] At that time Suddhodana the Mahārāja<sup>3</sup> received the news that [his son's wife] the mother of Rāhula (Rāhula-mātā)<sup>4</sup> had borne a son; and thereupon issued the order, 'Make known the glad news to my son'. The future Buddha (Bodhisatta) on hearing the news said '[As] a fetter (rāhulo)<sup>5</sup> has [he] been born, [as] a bond has [he] been born'. The Rāja having asked 'What did my son say?' and hearing of his remark said 'Henceforth let the name of my grandson indeed be Rāhula-kumāra'.<sup>6</sup> Meanwhile the future Buddha (Bodhisatta) mounted his chariot and . . .<sup>7</sup> entered the city.

'At peace (nibbutā)<sup>13</sup> indeed is his mother; at peace (nibbuto) indeed is his father;

<sup>6</sup> That is Prince Fetter. Kumāra is the title of a rāja's son. The Buddhavamsa (xxvi. 15; Ap. A 2 b, Note), which calls Gotama's wife Bhaddakaccā, mentions also Rāhula, and is proof of the antiquity of the tradition which makes Rāhula the son of Gotama. The tradition has no secure foundation in the first four Nikāyas (ThB, p. 59), but is supported by the Vinaya (Ch. 7 b § 7 n). Rāhula as a disciple might have claimed sonship (Ch. 3 § 5 [165]; Ch. 17 b § 2 [84]; see Ap. E c i § 7 [2] n).

<sup>10</sup> The word used is pāsāda; Int. § 190 (architecture); Ch. 11 c § 23 [1]; Ch. 11 e § 1 [3]; Ch. 12 c § 1 [1]; Ch. 13 c § 24 [1]; Ch. 14 c § 18 [1]; Ch. 14 f § 7; Ch. 18 b § 3 [1]. The mansion was apparently on or near the city wall.

<sup>13</sup> Nibbutā (happy, tranquil) and nibbāyati (3rd sing. pr. ind. of v. 'to be extinguished, i.e. with passions and sorrows extinguished') are strictly from different roots, but the former is used as perfect participle of the latter. In translation it is necessary to find some suggestive word on which the Bodhisatta's mind may play. Ch. 10 a § 6 [4]; Ch. 18 f § 2 [13]; Ch. 22 a § 9 [43]; Ap. C b §§ 2, 11 (89); Ap. F 2 c § 1 (414); Ap. H 4 c § 2 (1). Cp. Ch. 1 § 11 (Nibbāna); Ap. E a ii § 4 (4).

Overhearing her the Bodhisatta thought: 'Thus she says: "On their seeing such an one, the heart of his mother feels peace (nibbāyati),<sup>1</sup> the heart of his father feels peace, the heart of his wife feels peace!"' But what must be pacified (nibbuta) if the heart is to be truly at peace (nibbutam)? Then this [thought] arose in his mind, which was now without trace of the defiling passions (kilesesu):<sup>2</sup> 'When the fire of desire<sup>3</sup> is extinguished (nibbuta), then [the heart] is indeed at peace (nibbutam); when the fires of hatred<sup>4</sup> and delusion<sup>5</sup> are extinguished, when the false views of pride and such conceits, when all the pains of passion, have been extinguished, then it is at peace. This maiden has taught me a fair lesson. Peace (nibbānam)<sup>6</sup> is indeed that for which I go seeking. This day, renouncing house and home, going forth, retiring [from the world] (pabbajitvā)<sup>7</sup> I must set forth to seek for Peace (nibbānam). And saying 'Let this be payment to her as my teacher', he took from his neck a string of pearls . . .<sup>8</sup> and sent it to Kisā-Gotamī . . .<sup>9</sup>

<sup>9</sup> Omitting Kisā-Gotamī's delight. The nucleus of truth in this famous story is doubtless to be found in the Bodhisatta's declaration that happiness is to be gained only by renunciation of desire, a statement which might safely be attributed to all Hindu ascetics. Further steps were necessary for the attainment of enlightenment, namely, the perception that the search for the peace of desirelessness might itself turn into an egoistic desire (Ch. 3 § 2 [66]; Ap. D a, Taṇhā), and the discovery that right desire is selfless (Ch. 5 b § 7; Ap. F 2, iv, Eightfold Path).

<sup>12</sup> 'Literally, "the three Bhavas seemed like houses on fire". The three Bhavas are Existence in the Kāma-loka, the Rūpa-loka and the Arūpa-loka respectively. That is existence in the worlds whose inhabitants are subject to passion, have material forms, and have immaterial forms respectively', BBS, i, p. 81 n (cp. Ch. 3 § 5 n; Ap. I a 1, realm). The Bhavas are modes of individual existence. Ch. 5 b § 6; Ap. B a § 6 (7); Ap. B c § 4 [5]; Ap. C b, Note; Ap. D a § 1; Ap. D a § 8 (ii, a-rūpa-rāga).

'This very day must I go forth, making the great renunciation (mahā-bhi-nikkhamanam)', he arose from his couch. . . .<sup>1</sup>

§ 4. [JN, p. 62.] Thinking 'I will see the child meanwhile' he rose from his seat and went to the apartment of the mother of Rāhula and opened the inner door. At that time a lamp of perfumed oil was burning in the inner chamber (anto-gabbhe).<sup>2</sup> The mother of Rāhula was sleeping on a couch strewn with . . .<sup>3</sup> flowers with her hand placed on the head of the child. The Bodhisatta, having put his foot on the threshold, stood gazing and thought: 'If I move her hand and take my child, my wife (devī)<sup>4</sup> will awake and that will be a hindrance to my going. When I return after gaining enlightenment (Buddho hutvā)<sup>5</sup> I will see him.' So thinking he went down and left the mansion. Now that which is said in the Jātaka Commentary (Jātaka-atṭha-kathāya),<sup>6</sup> namely, 'Rāhula then was seven days old',<sup>7</sup> is not stated in the other commentaries (ses-atṭhakathāsu); and therefore the account above is to be accepted. Then leaving the mansion the Bodhisatta went to his horse.<sup>8</sup> . . .<sup>9</sup>

<sup>5</sup> This is usually translated as 'When I have become a Buddha', but the literal meaning of the phrase, namely 'having become enlightened', has more verisimilitude.

<sup>6</sup> The reference doubtless is to the introductory portion of the ancient Sinhalese Commentary on which the extant Pāli Commentary was founded, and which has since disappeared. Int. § 21; BBS, i, p. 82 n; ThB, p. 54 n. Cp. Sir C. Eliot, Hinduism and Buddhism, 1921, vol. iii, p. 30.

<sup>7</sup> The commentarial accounts, which make the child seven days or only one day old when the future Buddha retired from the world, appear to be more dramatic than authoritative. In the Vinaya Piṭaka (Ap. H 2 b § 4 [6]) it is stated that the Buddha emphatically forbade his followers to confer full ordination upon youths less than twenty years old, on the ground that younger persons were unfit to endure the rigours of a monkish life. The Vinaya account (Ch. 7 b § 8) of Rāhula's admission as a novice makes no mention of his age, though it implies that he was young, since after admitting him the Buddha promised to admit no more youths without the consent of their fathers. The whole of the Vinaya shows the practical sagacity and administrative capacity of the founder of the Order, and there is an inherent improbability in the commentarial account, which makes Rāhula only seven years old at the time of his admission (Ch. 7 b § 5). It seems much more likely that the child was born within the first few years of the marriage, and that he was some ten or twelve years old at the time of Gotama's retirement, and was of an age to understand his father's teaching when he was admitted to the Order. <sup>8</sup> Int. § 123.

(daharo),<sup>1</sup> with glossy black hair, in vigorous youth and in my prime,<sup>2</sup> though my mother<sup>3</sup> and my father were unwilling and tears poured from their eyes, I caused my hair and beard to be cut off,<sup>4</sup> and I assumed the yellow robes,<sup>5</sup> and went forth from the household to the homeless life.<sup>6</sup> And having thus gone forth [from the world], pursuing the good,<sup>7</sup> seeking the supreme path of tranquillity (santi-vara-padam)<sup>8</sup> I drew near to where Ālāra Kālāma was.<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER 3

RĀJAGAHA AND URUVELĀ: STRIVING TOWARDS THE LIGHT

(i) RĀJAGAHA

Jātaka Commentary, Introduction (Nidāna-kathā), JN, 66.

§ 1. [JN, p. 66.] Having entered Rājagaha<sup>1</sup> he begged food [from house to house] continuously.<sup>2</sup> . . .<sup>3</sup> Then the officers of the king<sup>4</sup> went to the palace and described him, saying: 'Lord<sup>5</sup> (deva), a being of such and such appearance is begging food in the city. We do not know whether he is a divine-spirit (devo),<sup>6</sup> a man (manusso), a snake-demon (nāgo),<sup>7</sup> or a bird-spirit (supaṇṇo).'<sup>8</sup> Then the king (rājā),<sup>9</sup> standing on the palace-roof<sup>10</sup> and seeing the Great One (Mahā-purisaṃ), wondered and commanded his officers, saying: 'Go, sirs (bhāṇe),<sup>11</sup> and observe. If this person is non-human (a-manusso), he will vanish when he leaves the city—that is, if a spirit (devatā)<sup>12</sup> he will disappear through the air, and if a snake-demon he will sink into the earth, but if a man he will eat the food which he has obtained.'

§ 2. [JN, p. 66 cd.] Meanwhile the Great One collected alms of mingled food, and when he saw that there was sufficient for his support he left the city by the gate<sup>13</sup> through which he had entered.

Sitting down with his face towards the east,<sup>1</sup> in the shadow of the Paṇḍava hill (Paṇḍava-pabbata chāyāya),<sup>2</sup> he began to eat the food. . . .<sup>3</sup> The royal officers returned and told the king what they had seen. On hearing the words of his messengers the king in haste went forth from the city, and drew near to the Bodhisatta. . . .<sup>4</sup> The Bodhisatta said: 'Great King (mahārāja),<sup>5</sup> for me there is nothing in wealth or in sense-pleasures, which defile (kilesa-kāmehi).<sup>6</sup> I have retired from the world seeking complete enlightenment (paramābhisambodhiṃ paṭṭhayaṃ).'<sup>7</sup> 'Truly', said the king, 'thou wilt become enlightened (Buddho bhaviṣṣasi).'<sup>8</sup> After attaining enlightenment (Buddha-bhūtena paṇa te) come first to my kingdom.'

(ii) SEEKING THE GOOD

<sup>12</sup> The state or realm of nothingness may be supposed to lie beyond the three bhavas or states of existence (Ch. 2 § 3). It corresponds with the seventh of the eight stages of ecstatic meditation (IN 8 c, teachers, n), through which Buddha is said to have passed immediately before his death (Ch. 22 b § 26 [8]). Ālāra Kālāma's doctrine conducted to the 'realm of nothingness'; that of Uddaka (see below) to the 'realm of neither consciousness nor yet non-consciousness'; which is the eighth of the above stages. Ch. 16 a § 2 [265]; see § 4 [66] above; also IN 8 c (teachers); Ch. 21 § 11 [33] (4); Ap. G 2 a, Note. Cp. Ap. G 1 a § 8 [14]; Ap. G 2 c §§ 1 (ii), 2 (i).

teach this system.” “Friend, I also have learnt this system for myself. . . .” “It is an advantage<sup>1</sup> to us, friend, it is a gain to us, who find such a venerable companion in holy-living. . . . [p. 165.] Thou art as I, I am as thou. Come, friend, let us together lead this company<sup>2</sup> (gaṇaṃ).” Thus Ālāra Kālāma, my teacher, set up me, his pupil, as completely equal to himself, and honoured me with great honour. And then I thought: “This system conducting to the realm of nothingness does not lead to . . .<sup>3</sup> tranquillity, highest knowledge, full enlightenment, Peace<sup>4</sup> (nibbānāya).” Then, mendicant brothers, finding that system insufficient and becoming indifferent (nibbija) to it, I departed.<sup>5</sup>

“And pursuing the good, seeking the supreme path of tranquillity, I drew near to where Uddaka<sup>6</sup> the disciple<sup>7</sup> of Rāma was. . . .<sup>8</sup> Then I said to Uddaka the disciple of Rāma: “How far dost thou . . . declare this system [to proceed]?” Thereupon Uddaka declared that it proceeded to the state of neither perception nor non-perception<sup>9</sup> (nevasaññānāsaññāyatana). . . . [p. 166.] Then quickly I in no long time learnt for myself, realized and having attained abode in that system.<sup>10</sup> Then I drew near to Uddaka and . . . addressed him thus: “Friend, is this as far as thou . . . teachest this system?” “Friend, this is as far as I . . . teach this system.” “Friend, I also have learnt this system for myself. . . .” “It is an advantage to us, friend, it is a gain to us, who find such a venerable companion in holy-living. . . . Thou art as Rāma, Rāma was as thou. Come, friend, lead this company.” Thus Uddaka, my companion in holy-living, set me up in the place of his teacher. And then I thought: “This system does not lead to . . . Peace (nibbānāya).” . . . Then I departed.

<sup>9</sup> Ch. 16 a § 2 [265]; Ch. 22 b § 26; Ap. I a § 1 [175]; also Ch. 14 c § 10 [6] (perception). This corresponds with the eighth stage of later Buddhist ecstatic meditation. Uddaka’s practice of trance evidently differed from Ālāra’s (see above), but did not necessarily go beyond it. Gotama’s subsequent dissatisfaction perhaps indicates that the practice, far from bringing peace, induced intense striving to gain for the individual the re-union of the ego with the supreme Soul. Perhaps the ultimate difference (which later he himself felt to be in one sense not great) between the outlook of Gotama’s teachers and his own may be said concisely to have been that, whereas they taught ways by which the individual Self (ātman) might find refuge in its original Source (Param-ātman), his ideal was the way in which the transient self (Int. § 38) might act in accord with the fundamental Unity, selflessly, that is divinely, as an Arahāt (Ap. D c). Cp. Ap. D b, Note; Ap. G 2 a, Note and § 9 n.

<sup>6</sup> Buddha and his followers constantly showed a very human delight in natural beauty, very far from the indifference of self-centred asceticism. <sup>16</sup> 'The Great Struggle played a great part in the Buddhist system of moral training; it was the wrestling with the flesh by which a true Buddhist overcame delusion and sin, and attained to Nirvāṇa. It is best explained by its fourfold division into 1. Mastery over the passions. 2. Suppression of sinful thoughts. 3. Meditation on the seven kinds of wisdom (Bodhi-angā, see Buddhism, p. 173); and 4. Fixed attention, the power of preventing the mind from wandering. . . . The system was, of course, not worked out at the time here referred to; but throughout the chronicle the biographer ascribes to Gotama, from the beginning, a knowledge of the whole Buddhist theory as afterwards elaborated' (BBS, i, p. 89). [JN, p. 67 cd.] Then those five recluses<sup>1</sup> (pañca pabbajitā), headed by Koṇḍañña, begging alms of food through villages, towns, and royal cities (gāma-nigama-rājadhānisu), met the Bodhisatta there. And during six years, while he undertook the Great Effort, they remained with him doing him all manner of services,<sup>2</sup> sweeping out the hermitage and so on, [all the while] thinking 'Now he will become enlightened (idāni buddho bhavissati), now he will become enlightened!' And the Bodhisatta, thinking 'I will perform the uttermost austerities (dukkara-kārikam)',<sup>3</sup> lived upon single grains of sesamum or rice<sup>4</sup> or such and even practised complete abstention from food. . . .<sup>5</sup> By this fasting he became utterly emaciated; his golden-coloured body became dark. . . .<sup>6</sup> One day at the edge of his place of exercise<sup>7</sup> (caṅka-manakoṭṭiyam) during a trance of suppressed breathing<sup>8</sup> (appaṇakam jhānam jhayanto) he was overcome by violent pain and fell unconscious. . . .<sup>9</sup> Then the Bodhisatta recovered consciousness and raised himself. . . .<sup>10</sup> And the Great One's austerity for these six years was like time spent in making a knot<sup>11</sup> in the air (ākāse gaṇṭhi-karanakālo vīya); and thinking 'Truly this austerity is not the way<sup>12</sup> to enlightenment (ayaṃ dukkarakārikā nāma bodhāya maggo na hoti ti),<sup>13</sup> he went through the

In JN, p. 56 it is stated that Kondañña was the youngest of the eight Brāhman fortune-tellers or astrologers who were present at the naming ceremony of Siddhattha, and that the remaining four disciples were the sons of four of the other seven Brāhmanas. It is thus assumed that these five were a party of Brāhman ascetics, connected with the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu. The Five appear in the two Suttas of the Majjhima Nikāya giving the Canonical account of the Great Effort (Ch. 4 § 17; Ch. 5 a § 9). See Ch. 15 a § 5.

It would appear that he found the same cause for dissatisfaction with this austerity as he did with the teachings of his masters, namely an inherent egotism, an insistent individualistic striving for one small self and its particular salvation (Ap. D a, (moha); Ap. F 1 b). The objection at this stage would be instinctive rather than defined. It would appear that Gotama henceforth abandoned trances and depended solely on meditation. His later followers developed an elaborate system of trances (Ap. I, Note; Ap. I a), but this was only a part of the general gradual Hinduization of Buddhism (Int. § 57). Cp. Ch. 5 b § 4; Ap. [JN, p. 68.] How is it possible for him to do so now that he goes through the villages begging and taking ordinary food? He is defeated in the Effort; for us to look for benefit from him is as if one should think to wash one's head in a dew-drop. What is he to us (kiṃ no iminā ti)?' ## CHAPTER 4

URUVELĀ: THE GREAT ENLIGHTENMENT

(i) LEGEND

a golden bowl . . .<sup>1</sup> raised the cooking-vessel and poured out the milk-rice. The milk-rice rolled from the vessel as water from a lotus-leaf, and filled the bowl exactly. Having placed over the bowl another dish, also of gold, and wrapped a cloth round them, she put on all her ornaments, and carrying the bowl upon her head, proceeded to the foot of the banyan-tree. Seeing the future Buddha she was delighted, thinking him to be the tree-spirit (rukṣha-devatā ti),<sup>2</sup> and as she advanced she made obeisance. . . .<sup>3</sup> Sujātā then placed the bowl of milk-rice in the hand of the Great One (Mahā-purissassa),<sup>4</sup> and the Great One looked at Sujātā. Then realizing his condition she made obeisance, and said: 'Sir (ayya),<sup>5</sup> accept my offering to thee, and go whithersoever thou desirest. May thy wish prosper as mine has done!' So saying she departed. . . .<sup>6</sup>

<sup>9</sup> Omitting the statement that many thousands of previous Bodhisattas had so acted. Ap. A 2 c, Note; Ch. 5 a § 1 n. The belief in innumerable Buddhas apparently originated in a theory of unnumbered Kalpas (Int. § 107), in which severally the world, reconstituted, expresses the divine fundamental unity (Ap. G 2 a) afresh in the development of intelligent social beings and in their ultimate clear perception of the Law of unity (IN, 5 b).

<sup>14</sup> Omitting a statement that the future Buddha then fasted for forty-nine days; also the miracle of the golden bowl and the incident of Kāla the snake-king. Int. § 93 (vii).

(ii) THE ENLIGHTENMENT: COMMENTARIAL ACCOUNT OF THE FIRST DAYS OF BUDDHAHOOD

<sup>3</sup> Omitting the attack by Māra (Int. § 35, ii) and his army, and the defence of the Bodhisatta by Sakka, Brahmā, Mahā-Kālanāga-rāja, king of snakes, and others (Int. §§ 35, ii, 69, 93, i). Māra is the Evil One, the Tempter, god of desire; rather the spirit of selfishness and personal indulgence than the Devil. As a personified power he probably arose from Buddha's denunciation of taṇhā (thirst) and rāga (lust). (Int. § 93, iv; Ap. C b § 11, 370; Ap. G 2 b. Cp. KM, p. 20; OB, pp. 101-5.)

<sup>6</sup> Omitting the famous passage in which the Earth bears witness to the great alms given by the Buddha in previous existences as follows: [JN, p. 74.] 'Then the Tempter addressed the Great Being, and said, "Siddhattha! who is witness that thou hast given alms?" And the Great Being answered, "Thou hast living [animate] witnesses that thou hast given alms: and I have in this place no living [animate] witness at all. But not counting the alms I have given in other births, let this great and solid earth, unconscious though it be, be witness of the seven hundredfold great alms I gave when I was born as Wessantara [Vessantara, Ap. A 2 a, n]!" And withdrawing his right hand from beneath his robe, he stretched it forth towards the earth [Ap. D a, Note; cp. Pratt, Pilgrimage of Buddhism, 1928, pp. 294-5, on the Mudrās (Pāli muddā) or attitudes of Buddhist statues], and said "Are you or are you not witness of the seven hundredfold great gift I gave in my birth as Wessantara [Vessantara]?" And the Great Earth (Mahā-pathavī) uttered a voice, saying, "I am witness to thee of that!" overwhelming as it were the hosts of the Evil One as with the shouts of hundreds of thousands of foes. Then the mighty elephant "Girded-with-mountains", [on which Māra was seated,] as he realized what the generosity of Wessantara had been, fell down on his knees before the Great Being. And the army of Māra fled'. BBS, i, p. 101.

the Blessed One sat cross-legged continuously for seven days and experienced the bliss of liberation (vimutti-sukha-paṭisaṃvedī)<sup>1</sup> . . .<sup>2</sup>

§ 6. [JN, p. 78.] Then, having spent four weeks near the Bo-tree, he proceeded in the fifth week to the Goatherds' banyan-tree (yena Ajapāla-nigrodho)<sup>3</sup> and sat there meditating on the Law (dhammaṃ)<sup>4</sup> and experiencing the bliss of liberation. . . .<sup>5</sup>

§ 7. [JN, p. 80.] When he had spent a week [the fifth] at that spot, he proceeded to the Mucalinda [tree] (Mucalindaṃ agamāsi), and there he passed a week. . . .<sup>6</sup>

§ 8. [JN, p. 80 cd.] Thence he went on to the Rājāyatana<sup>7</sup> [tree] (rājāyatanaṃ upasaṃkami), and there also he sat [during the seventh week] experiencing the bliss of liberation. Thus seven weeks passed. . . .<sup>8</sup> Then the Supremely Enlightened rose and returned thence to the Goatherds' banyan-tree. . . .<sup>9</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Omitting the doubts of the spirits (devatā), dispelled by a miracle (Int. § 94, i). Omitting also the seven days spent by the Buddha in gazing at the seat where he had attained enlightenment; and the seven days spent in walking in the jewelled cloister between the seat and the spot from which he had gazed; and a fourth week spent in a house of gems thinking out the Abhidhamma Piṭaka, book by book (Ap. A 1 a, and Int. § 22). The remark which follows is very suggestive of the growth of the tradition (IN 6; § 6 n below), and runs: 'The Abhidhammikas say that House of Gems here means either a mansion built of the seven kinds of jewels, or the place where the seven books were thought out: and as they give these two explanations of the passage both should be accepted as correct' (BBS, i, p. 105). That Gotama pondered long near the Bo-tree upon his new-found system is doubtless the fact and the nucleus from which the rest of this part of the tradition grew.

<sup>8</sup> Omitting the ministrations of Sakka, king of the gods (Int. § 93, i), on the last day of the seven weeks' fast. Omitting also the account of the conversion of the two merchants Tapassu and Bhalluka (see § 15 n below), said to have been travelling with five hundred carts (Ch. 10 a § 1; and Int. §§ 121, 189) from Ukkala (Orissa) to Middle India (majjhima-desam, Int. § 158), which can hardly be reconciled with the MV accounts and was perhaps added to the tradition later in the interests of Ceylon and Orissa, to which latter the two converts are said to have carried certain hair-relics, afterwards removed to Ceylon (cp. Ch. 22 c § 12 n). They are said to have taken refuge in the Buddha and the Law (i.e. the dyad, cp. Ap. H 1 c; Ap. H 2, Note, Refuges). Their names appear in a list of early converts mentioned in the Anguttara Nikāya; PTS, i, p. 26 (Ch. 10 c, 61), out of which the story may have grown, though it is not quite consistent with details therein.

(iii) VINAYA ACCOUNT

<sup>2</sup> From the complete confusion of the two differing accounts of the Great Enlightenment given in the Jātaka Introduction and in the Introductory portion of the Mahā-vagga it may be gathered that when these accounts were compiled the real nature of the Enlightenment had been forgotten. The Canonical accounts in the Majjhima Nikāya (§§ 16 and 17 below) are comparatively simple and straightforward, and show an appreciation of the central fact of the Enlightenment, the perception of the wretchedness and futility of egoism (cp. many characteristic definitions of the Buddhist Nibbāna, Ap. C b; and Int. § 10; also § 14 below). The first twenty-four chapters of Khandhaka I of the Mahā-vagga appear to be a commentarial introduction to the Mahā-vagga proper (Int. § 1; Ch. 5 c § 8 n; Ch. 7 c § 2 n; Ap. H 3, Note). They contain an account of events from immediately after the Enlightenment up to the conversion of the great disciples Sāriputta and Moggallāna, and the regular establishment of the Saṃgha in Rājagaha, the account being pieced together partly from the first four Nikāyas and partly from ancient traditional accounts in prose and in verse (IN 6, Canon; Ap. A 2 a, Note). The date of this introductory matter can scarcely be determined, but the narrative is old enough to ignore the poetical Sutta Nipāta legend of Māra the Tempter (see § 6 n above), and to be included in the scope of the Commentary (the Samanta-pāsādikā, Eliot, H. and B., 1921, iii, p. 30; SBE, xiii, p. 79) by Buddhaghosha, who wrote in the 5th century A.D. (Int. § 21). The nucleus of this introductory narrative, which is now included in the Canon, may perhaps have been found in the ancient Sinhalese commentaries (Int. § 21) utilized by Buddhaghosha.

<sup>6</sup> Int. § 67. It is noticeable that in the Mahā-vagga account the three watches succeed the Enlightenment, and thus make the discovery of the chain of causation an effect, not the cause, of enlightenment. Cp. Ap. B c § 1 (1), (watches of the night).

<sup>7, 8</sup> As in Ap. B c § 2. In the legend of Vipassin (Ap. G 1 b § 2) the enlightenment of that Buddha is attributed to the discovery of the Causative Process; here in the Mahā-vagga Introduction, as in the JN (see § 4 above), Gotama's enlightenment is associated with the same discovery.

'When (separate-)natures (dhammā)<sup>1</sup> truly are manifested (pātu-bhavanti)<sup>2</sup> to the strenuous contemplative holy-man (brāhmaṇ-assa),<sup>3</sup>

Then all his doubts vanish, because he understands nature that has a cause (sa-hetu-dhammaṃ).<sup>4</sup>

§ 11. [i. 4.] Then again the Blessed One during the Middle watch of the night thought over the causative process. . . .<sup>5</sup> [i. 5.] Then indeed the Blessed One . . . breathed forth this cry:

'When (separate-)natures truly are manifested to the strenuous contemplative holy-man,

Then all his doubts vanish, because he has known the destruction of the bases (khayaṃ paccāyaṃ).<sup>6</sup>

§ 12 [i. 6.] Then indeed the Blessed One during the third watch of the night thought over the causative process. . . .<sup>7</sup> [i. 7.] Then indeed the Blessed One . . . breathed forth this cry:

'When (separate-)natures truly are manifested to the strenuous contemplative holy-man,

He stands and scatters the army of Māra [the Tempter]<sup>8</sup> even as the sun lighting the heavens.'

§ 13. [ii. 1.] Then the Blessed One at the end of seven days rose from that contemplation (samādhimhā),<sup>9</sup> and went from the foot of the tree of Enlightenment towards the Goatherds' banyan-tree,<sup>10</sup> and having reached it he sat cross-legged at the foot of the Goatherds' edification of the people (Ap. A 2 a, Note). The prose of the Mahā-vagga Introduction adds to and greatly exaggerates the narrative supplied by the verses and by portions of the Suttas, and the introduction to the Jātaka, supported by the poetical Sutta Nipata, does so still more. The 'Northern' legends complete the process of exaggeration (Int. § 3; IN 6). The third Book in the fifth Nikāya (Ap. A 1 a, Khudda-Nikāya) is called Udāna and comprises a collection of such lyrics with explanatory narratives.

<sup>2</sup> Extinction (of the ego); peace. A distinction must be drawn between the metaphysical extinction of the ego (Ap. D b; Ap. I a) and the ethical extinction of selfishness (Ap. D a; Ap. G 1). Seeking for the former, Gotama reached the latter (Int. § 10; Ap. C). The Nirvāna to which he attained, and which he taught, was an escape from the doctrine of Samsāra or endless transmigration (Ap. B) so overwhelming in Hindu eyes. It brought the sense of the transience and unreality of individuality (Ch. 5 c, Second Sermon), and so brought rest to those who laboured under the burden of the doctrine of the ceaseless migration of the individual soul. The oppression of an aeonian personal struggle gave way to the peace and security of selflessness and active unselfish well-doing (Ap. F 1) without thought of personal reward. The close of the present passage is not necessarily discordant with this interpretation.

<sup>13</sup> Or, individuality. Cp. § 17 below; Ch. 5 b § 9; Ch. 5 c § 5; Ch. 14 c § 7 [9]. This term does not necessarily imply acceptance of the doctrine of re-birth. The theories of previous and future re-births are inconsistent with the Buddha's an-atta doctrine (Ap. E c). He, however, seems to have accepted the theories of the succession of Kalpas (Int. 107), of the Paramātman (Ap. G 2 a (Unity)), and of the Khandhas (Ap. E a ii), and these imply the building up of the constituents of the individual through the course of long ages. But the theory of the Khandhas and the an-atta doctrine imply the dissolution of the individual at death, though under the Law of Karma (Ap. B b) the consequences of the actions of the individual continue through the ages (cp. Ch. 22, Buddha's last words; Ap. G 2 a (Karma)).

I knew verily: “These are the taints (āsavā)” ... “This is the origination of the taints” ... “This is the cessation of the taints” ... “This is the path leading to the cessation of the taints.”

<sup>2</sup> Omitting an account of the four trances (Ap. I a) which followed Gotama’s first meal after the great austerities, described in much detail (cp. § 16 above; Ch. 12 c § 10 [68] n); and also a description of the first two watches of the night (Ap. B c § 1 [1]), in the first of which he turned his mind to ‘the remembrance of his former existences’, and in the second to ‘the passing away and re-birth of beings’ (Int. § 92). This part of the narrative occurs also in Majjh. 4 (SBB, v, pp. 14–17) and Majjh. 100 (Ch. 14 f § 1 [210] n). See § 9 n above; Ch. 3 §§ 5 n, 7; Ch. 9 c § 3 [1] (tevijja). Contrast Ap. G 2 c § 2 (ii) [1, 30].

<sup>4</sup> Ch. 5 b § 10; Ch. 6 a § 4 [6]; Ch. 12 c § 11 [1]. We have here the central fact of Gotama’s Enlightenment (Ap. G 1 a §§ 1, 2, 3 (7); Ap. G 1 b), to which the three watches, the three knowledges, the four trees, the four trances, and the four or seven weeks, evidently are imaginative additions (IN 6, Canon).

Cp. § 16 above (survival), and § 18 [1] below; Ap. B c §§ 3 [19], 4 [21]. The meaning is disputed. The whole phrase is the subject of a dialogue between Buddha and Sunakkhatta (Ch. 12 c § 10 [68]) in Majjh. 105 (PTS, ii, pp. 252-61). In the second Sutta of Digha Nikāya this phrase, translated in SBB (ii, p. 93) as 'After this present life there will be no beyond', follows immediately after an account of the power to perceive the past and future births of beings and is affected by this context. The context in Ch. 14 f § 9 [411] and [413] seems decisive.

<sup>3</sup> Ap. E, Note. Cp. Ch. 4 § 11; Ch. 5 c § 7 (cessation). This passage sets forth the Three Characteristics of Life, which it declares to be transitory, sorrowful, and without any permanent or individual self. But the joy and happiness of Nibbāna (peace in this life, Ap. C b) and of Mettā (love, Ap. F 1 a) are equally insisted upon in Buddha's teaching. The reconciliation of these two mental attitudes must be sought. It is to be found in Buddha's characteristic teaching of Selflessness (Ap. D). Transitory all individual existence must be; and also sorrowful, so long as it dwells upon its own individuality; but when it realizes its relationship to the whole, sharing in the welfare of the whole, then, with the loss of its dominant sense of selfhood, there comes peace, and also active joy in well-doing. This is the attitude of the Stoic school of thought represented by Marcus Aurelius Antoninus (IN 10). The passage is in full accord with the Four Truths of the First Sermon (Ch. 5 b § 10). The Three Characteristics are the negative side of Buddha's doctrine, and correspond generally with the first three Truths, and arise as a corollary to the third of these. The positive side is found in the fourth Truth, the Eightfold Path, necessitating activity.

CHAPTER 5

URUVELĀ AND ISIPATANA: THE STARTING OF THE WHEEL

a. THE BUDDHA'S HESITATION AND DECISION; THE JOURNEY TO BENĀRES

(i) Commentarial account

Jātaka Commentary, Introduction (Nidāna-kathā), JN, p. 81<sup>1</sup>

§ 1. [JN, p. 81.] Then the Supremely Enlightened rose and returned<sup>2</sup> to the Goatherds' banyan-tree<sup>3</sup> and sat at the foot of the tree. And [at first] as he was seated there, viewing the profundity of the Law (dharmassa) to which he had attained, there rose in his mind a doubt . . .<sup>4</sup> whether he could show to others<sup>5</sup> the Law. . . .<sup>6</sup> Then he considered to whom he should first reveal the Law. And first he thought of Ālāra.<sup>7</sup> . . . Then he thought of Uddaka<sup>8</sup> the disciple of Rāma. . . . Then he thought of the five mendicants.<sup>9</sup> . . . And he remained there for a few days and begged for alms of food near the Bodhi-tree,<sup>10</sup> intending to go to Benāres<sup>11</sup> on the full-moon day of Āsālhi (Āsālhi-puṇṇa-māsiyam).<sup>12</sup> . . .<sup>13</sup>

What if I should first declare the Law to the Five Mendicants?'<sup>15</sup> [vi. 6.] . . .<sup>16</sup> Then the Blessed One went on his way towards Benāres.<sup>17</sup>

§ 4. [vi. 7.] As the Blessed One was proceeding along the road<sup>18</sup> from the Bodhi-tree to Gayā,<sup>19</sup> Upaka the Ājīvaka<sup>20</sup> saw him and said to the Blessed One: ' . . . Who is thy teacher? Whose Law dost thou profess?' [vi. 8.] When Upaka the Ājīvaka had thus spoken, the Blessed One replied . . .<sup>21</sup> 'Having by myself gained knowledge, to whom should I pay regard? . . .'<sup>22</sup>

(iii) Nikāya account

Sutta-Piṭaka, Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 26 (Ariya-pariyesana Sutta)<sup>23</sup>

§ 5. [PTS, i, p. 167.] 'Then, mendicant brothers, this thought came<sup>24</sup> to me: "I have attained to this Law, difficult to see and under-

“With great toil have I attained [the Law]. Let me not now announce it.

By those given over to lust and hate<sup>5</sup> hardly will this Law be understood.

What is toilsome, abstruse, deep, difficult to see, subtle,

They will not see, given over to desire, encircled by thick darkness.”

‘Among the Magadhas (Int. § 158) there has been manifest till now

A law (dharmo), impure, conceived with many blemishes.

Open thou the door of the Deathless (amatassa; see below, and Ap. A 2 a Buddha-vaṃsa II, sloka (15) n; Ap. C b 2; Ap. E a, Note);

Let them hear the Law revealed unblemished.’

In the Mahā-vagga account, as in the legend of Vipassin Buddha, the Buddha repeats his doubts to Brahmā Sahampati and the latter makes his request three times before succeeding.

<sup>8</sup> Ch. 8 l § 3; Ch. 9 a § 10; Ch. 16 d § 8 [4]; Ap. G 1 a § 4 [2]; Ap. G 2 a § 9. Cp. Ch. 6 b § 1 [1] (world).

<sup>11</sup> This apparently is said rather of hell and heaven than of Saṃsāra and Karma (Ap. B a). Para-loka is the world beyond. Ch. 7 b § 2; Ch. 18 a § 2 [261]; Ap. G 2 c § 3 (i) [23]; Ap. H 4 a § 2 n.

§ 7. 'Then this thought came to me: "To whom first shall I declare the Law? Who will comprehend the Law quickly?" And the thought came to me: "There is Ālāra Kālāma,<sup>4</sup> wise, intelligent and learned; his nature has long been scarcely tainted. What if I should first declare the Law to him? He will quickly comprehend it." . . .<sup>5</sup> And the knowledge clearly (dassanam) came to me: "Ālāra Kālāma died seven days ago." Then, mendicant brothers, this thought came to me: "Nobly-born (mah'-ājāniyo) was Ālāra Kālāma. If he had heard the Law he would quickly have comprehended it."

§ 8. . . . 'Then the thought came to me: "There is Uddaka<sup>6</sup> the disciple of Rāma, wise, intelligent and learned; his nature has long been scarcely tainted." . . .<sup>7</sup> And the knowledge clearly came to me: "Uddaka the disciple of Rāma died yesterday evening." Then, mendicant brothers, this thought came to me: "Nobly-born was Uddaka the disciple of Rāma. If he had heard the Law he would quickly have comprehended it."

§ 9. . . . 'Then this thought came to me: "Of great service to me were the Five Mendicants<sup>8</sup> who attended on me whilst I undertook the Effort (padhāna-pahitattam). What if I should first declare the Law to the Five Mendicants?" . . .<sup>9</sup> Then having stayed as long as I required at Uruvelā I went on my way to Benāres. . . .<sup>10</sup> [p. 171.] And journeying from place to place,<sup>11</sup> I came to Benāres, to Isipatana<sup>12</sup> the

This just and beautiful comparison will carry back the mind of anyone who has travelled in the country parts of India to many a lovely pool or 'tank' such as Gotama must often have gazed upon. Cp. Ch. 8 f § 2; Ap. I, Note; and Ch. 15 b § 2 (pool).

<sup>5</sup> Omitting the announcement of Ālāra's death by a deity or spirit. Int. § 93 (vi). A similar incident is given in the legend of Vipassin Buddha (Ap. G 1 b § 2), but without the angelic intervention.

He should not be saluted, nor should we rise,<sup>5</sup> nor take his bowl and robe;<sup>6</sup> but we should prepare a place<sup>7</sup> (āsanam), and if he wishes he will sit down." But as I drew near to them the Five Mendicants could not abide by their agreement; and one among them coming to meet me took my bowl and robe, another assigned a place, another brought water for my feet (pad-odakam).<sup>8</sup> Then they addressed me by name and saying "friend (āvuso)". Thereupon I said to the Five Mendicants: ". . .<sup>9</sup> [p. 172.] Hearken, mendicants, the Immortal (amataṃ)<sup>10</sup> has been gained (adhigataṃ). Isipatana is usually regarded as the name of the whole deer-park or forest, but may have been the name of the spot now called Sārnāth (cp. Ch. 22 b § 1, grove; also Ch. 16 d § 5 [1] n). For deer-parks or forests (miga-dāyā) see Ch. 11 c § 24 (11); Ch. 13 b § 2 [91]; Ch. 14 e § 4 [1]; Ch. 14 f § 12; Ap. E c i § 8 n; also Ch. 16 a § 6 [56] n. Cp. <sup>9</sup> Omitting an admonition by the Teacher to the Five not to address him by name or with the appellation 'friend'; Ch. 3 § 5 (āvuso); and Int. § 190 (address); see Ch. 5 b § 1 n; cp. Ch. 5 c § 8; Ch. 11 e § 1 [3] n. Omitting also the following phrase: 'The Tathāgata (Ap. A 2 c), O mendicants, is a Saint (araham) and supremely Enlightened (sammā-sambuddho)'. Both of these suggest a zealous narrator, and are discordant with the plain tone attributed to the Master in his decisions prevailing in the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga; cp. Ch. 8 h § 1 [14] n, and Ch. 12 e § 3 [3] n. It may be observed that the Five in their next speech repeat the phrase 'friend Gotama'; cp. Ch. 13 a § 6.

<sup>10</sup> The Eternal, i.e. the Universal (Ap. G 2 a), the Self-same (Ch. 5 c § 3 [45] n); or the transcendence of the mortal self (Ap. F 2 d, sammā-samādhī). See § 6 n above; Ch. 12 e § 9 [2]; Ch. 14 c § 18 [2] n; Ap. A 2 a (15); Ap. C b §§ 2, 11 (374); Ap. G 2 a § 6.

<sup>14</sup> Gotama constantly declares that his doctrine is not difficult to learn, and that it must be mastered by the learner himself, not merely accepted. Int. §§ 10, 44; Ch. 3 § 5; Ch. 5 c § 8; Ch. 6 a § 4 [6]; Ap. B c § 5; Ap. E c ii § 1; Ap. G 1 a (iv).

When I had thus spoken the Five Mendicants said to me: "By those [ascetic] practices, friend Gotama, by those exercises and austerities, thou didst not attain to powers beyond human [nature],<sup>6</sup> to pre-eminence in truly noble knowledge and vision (alam-ariya-nāna-dassana-visesam).<sup>7</sup> Now that thou livest in plenty, having given up effort and turned back to the life of plenty, how shouldst thou attain . . . insight?" . . .<sup>8</sup> When they had thus spoken I said to the Five Mendicants: "Are you conscious, mendicants, that I have not spoken to you in this manner before?" "Not in this manner, revered Sir (bhante)."<sup>9</sup> . . .<sup>10</sup> [p. 173.] And then I was able to make the Five Mendicants understand.<sup>11</sup> . . .<sup>12</sup>

‘These two extremes,<sup>4</sup> mendicant brothers, are not to be approached by him who has withdrawn<sup>5</sup> [from the world]. Which two? On the one hand that which is linked and connected with lust through sensuous pleasures (kāmesu),<sup>6</sup> and is low (hino), ignorant, vulgar, ignoble (an-ariyo),<sup>7</sup> and profitless (an-attha-samhito);<sup>8</sup> and on the other hand that which is connected with self-mortification,<sup>9</sup> and is painful (dukkho), ignoble and profitless. Avoiding both these extremes, mendicant brothers, the middle road (majjhimā paṭipadā)<sup>10</sup> . . .<sup>11</sup> bringing insight,<sup>12</sup> bringing knowledge, leads to tranquillity (upasamāya),<sup>13</sup> to highest knowledge (abhiññāya),<sup>14</sup> to full enlightenment (sambodhāya),<sup>15</sup> to Peace (nibbānāya).<sup>16</sup> [18.] And, mendicant brothers, what middle road . . .<sup>17</sup> leads to Peace? It is indeed this Noble Eightfold Path (ariyo)<sup>18</sup>

<sup>3</sup> What follows is plainly a summarized form, not the whole, of the First Sermon. It appears in several places in the Canon (see § 10 n below), and there seems to be no sufficient reason to doubt its substantial accuracy. Gotama had several weeks in which to prepare and fix the outline of his first discourse, and this he would naturally use on many occasions, and it would eventually be repeated by his hearers, though the simple Assaji was unable to repeat it to Sāriputta (Ch. 7 a § 18 [4]).

This is the truth that 'all individuality (samkhārā) is sorrowful' (Ap. E, Note) unless transcended. The just translation of dukkhaṃ here is rather 'sorrow' than 'pain'. Gotama did not teach that pain can be eliminated from life, but that the sting of it, sorrow, can be cancelled through self-forgetfulness and the selfless activity of the Path.

<sup>13</sup> Perhaps, craving for higher-existence. 'Craving for success (in this present life)', SBE, xi; 'thirst for prosperity', SBE, xiii; 'craving for non-existence', ThB; 'desire for non-existence', A. B. Keith, Buddhist Philosophy (1923), p. 275. 'Childers on the authority of Vigessīṇha, says: "The former (bhava-taṇhā) applies to the sassata-ditthi, and means a desire for an eternity of existence; the latter (vi-bhava-taṇhā) applies to the ukkheda-ditthi [Ap. E c i § 2 [9]] and means a desire for annihilation in the very first (the present) form of existence"' (SBE, xi, p. 149). If this threefold division of taṇhā is Gotama's, and not an explanatory interpolation (Ch. 9 a §§ 11 n, 14 n), it probably has some relation to the two extremes (antā), between which lies the middle path. In this case the gross desires of the sensual man, the pious man's craving for bliss hereafter (Ap. C a § 2), and the Hindu ascetic's longing to escape from the risks of even heavenly bliss, would seem to constitute the three classes of egoistic desire, the first two relating to personal enjoyment and the third to release therefrom, or otherwise the first relating to pleasure in this world, and the last two to bliss hereafter (Cp. Int. § 105, and note above on pono-bbhavikā). Cp. 'The three [directions of] craving, to wit, craving for life in the sphere of sense, for life in the brahma (rūpa) world, for life in the higher worlds': Rhys Davids, Dialogues of the Buddha [Digha Nikāya], Part III, p. 209. Oldenberg (Buddha, 1923, p. 147 n) refers to the Itivuttaka (Sayings of the Buddha), p. 43, as establishing that the third term (vi-bhava-taṇhā) does not mean 'thirst for power (Durst nach Macht)', but 'thirst for non-existence (Vergänglichkeitsdurst)'. A simpler interpretation is suggested by Ap. H 4 c § 2 (3). What is censured is the sense of individuality and of separate interests; cp. Ch. 11 c § 6 [266]. Cp. also Ap. D a § 8 (ii) arūpa-rāga.

<sup>10</sup> Omitting a threefold statement regarding each of the four Truths, namely, that it exists, that it must be mastered, and that it has been mastered by the Buddha. This has the appearance of monkish exegesis and elaboration, and the same may be said of much of the succeeding portion of the discourse as it has come down to us. The statement of each of the Truths mentions that it was 'among doctrines not heard before' (pubbe an-amussutesu dhammesu; cp. Ch. 5 a § 6). This passage and the whole of the narrative down to the close of Kondañña's conversion has been borrowed by the Mahā-vagga compiler from the Sam. Nik. (See § 4 n above, and § 10 n below).

<sup>14</sup> Omitting 'in the sphere of gods (sa-devake loke), of Māra (Int. § 93, iv), of Brahmā (Int. § 93, ii), and in the world of samānas (devotees, Ap. A 2 d) and brāhmins (Ap. F 2, iii), of spirits (Ch. 6 b § 1) and men'. These details are apparently a scholastic definition of the universe comprehended by the Buddha; Ch. 11 e § 1 [2]; Ch. 13 c § 18 n; Ch. 22 a § 2 [18] n; cp. Ch. 15 a § 8 [248] n.

<sup>6</sup> The Mahā-vagga narrative is continued in Ch. 5 c § 7 where Koṇḍañña's complete conversion is described. His conversion is attained when he realizes that everything subject to origination is also subject to cessation. This conclusion does not follow consequentially upon anything said in the First Sermon, but follows logically enough on the matter of the Second Sermon. The compiler of the Mahā-vagga account has added the First and Second Sermons to the narrative contained in Sutta 26 of the Majjhima Nikāya (Ch. 5 a § 10 n; see §§ 4 n, 9 n above; Ch. 5 c § 1 n; Ap. I a § 1 [175] n), but (following exactly the setting given by the reporter of the first of these Suttas in the Samyutta Nikāya) has separated the two discourses and placed the conversion of Koṇḍañña and his companions between the two, whereas it seems evident that their full enlightenment followed on the realization of the transience of individuality, which is the subject of the Anattalakkhaṇa Sutta. This latter therefore is here placed immediately after the First Sermon.

But it does not deal with the question whether the self exists or not, in any other way’, SBE, xiii, p. 100 n. The text presupposes that the attan (Self, Ego) can only be identified with an eternal entity. It is implied that individuality comprises the five constituents (the khandhas); but it seems further to be implied that there is in living beings not only individuality, but also a sub-conscious or perhaps rather super-conscious part, which is common to all and is the Attan, imperishable and universal (cp. § 7 n below; Ch. 6 b § 2 [xiv]; Ap. C b § 10 [2]; Ap. E a, Note; Ap. F 2 c, Note; Ap. G 2 a § 5). The absence of permanent individuality does not involve the absence of divinity any more than the transience of waves implies the absence of the ocean (cp. Ap. E a ii §§ 4, 5). Individuals (samkhārā, dhammā) may be regarded, in this respect, as waves rising upon and falling back into the surface of the divine, immortal, changeless ocean of the One, the All, the Self-same. Consciousness of this fundamental unity is possibly the sense of the amata (immortal), to which reference is frequently made in the Canon (Ch. 5 a § 10 [172]; Ap. C b § 11, Dhp. 374).

Thus the Five Mendicants were instructed and admonished by me, and they being themselves subjected<sup>5</sup> to earthly-existence<sup>6</sup> perceived the wretchedness of what is subjected to earthly-existence, and seeking the supreme peace of Nirvāna (nibbānam) which is not affected by earthly-existence, attained the supreme peace of a Nirvāna not affected by earthly-existence;<sup>7</sup> being themselves subjected to decay<sup>8</sup> . . .<sup>9</sup> disease . . . death . . . grief . . . 'There is no further return to this world', SBE, xiii; 'there is naught (for him) beyond this world', ThB. The implication appears to be that the egoistic fear of re-birth is unfounded. The whole Sutta is directed against egoism, individualism, or particularism. The phrases used here in the text constituted an often repeated formula. If they formed part of the original sermon they must be rendered in such a way as to harmonize with the main part of the discourse. The last phrase may now be interpreted in the light of contemporary Vedāntic (Ap. G 2 c, Note) monism as meaning —there is no individuality beyond this (temporary and delusory) individuality, i.e. the One is the end and origin of all and is in all.

<sup>2</sup> According to the Mahā-vagga account (and Samyutta Nikāya, Mahā-vagga, Samyutta 12, Sutta 11) this was the first Sermon, but there seem to be sufficient reasons for thinking it to have been the second. Ch. 5 b § 9 n; see § 5 n above.

With this famous phrase compare the last words of Gotama: 'Vayadhammā saṃkhārā; appamādena saṃpādettha' (Perishable by nature are composites [i.e. individuality, personality]; labour diligently; Ch. 22 b § 25 [7]). Taken along with the an-atta (Ap. E c) and dukkha (Ap. E b) doctrines these phrases can only mean that individuality is transient, so that individualistic grasping is waste of labour (Ch. 9, the Mahā-satipatṭhana-S.) as well as the cause of sorrow; and yet unceasing labour is necessary, but for others not for the self (Ap. D, Egoism; Ap. F 1 b). Mankind lasts, men perish (Ap. B b). The dying words of the Teacher are usually interpreted in a sense accordant with the doctrine of transmigration, so as to mean that salvation can be attained only by long effort through many re-births; and when once the doctrine of personal Karma was introduced into Buddhism such an interpretation became necessary, but it appears to be not only in direct conflict with the an-atta doctrine and the Four truths, but forced and unnatural in the context (IN 1; Ap. B a). The two famous phrases above clearly state (1) that the constituents of individuality dissolve, and (2) that the individual perishes; not (1) that the constituents of individuality dissolve, and (2) that the individual survives. The last conclusion being in opposition to the premiss would require a definite statement, and cannot be inferred.

It is implied in the Second Sermon that there is an eternal Uncaused-Cause (see § 3 n above) and from this all things caused originate (cp. Int. § 37, Brahman; Ap. B c § 3 n; Ap. E a ii § 4, 1; Ap. F 2 c § 1, 383). This highly metaphysical passage follows naturally on the Second Sermon, which is metaphysical and for the few, but could not be deduced from the First Sermon, which is ethical and for the many (Ap. G 1 a).

<sup>7</sup> The formula 'Ehi bhikkhu' is here said to have been the earliest form of admission to the Order. The first Khandhaka of the Mahā-vagga is entitled 'Admission to the Order of Bhikkhus', and claims to set forth an historical account of the development of the ordination ceremony from its earliest form, with an account of the Enlightenment and of the foundation of the Order (Ch. 4 § 9 n). The formulae for the admission of brethren and laymen are an essential part of the Vinaya and doubtless instituted the original nucleus of the introductory portion of the Mahā-vagga. See Ch. 6 a § 1; Ch. 7 a § 1; Ch. 8 d; Ap. H 2, Note.

<sup>8</sup> Literally, beggar. The term was applied to any religious mendicant; Ch. 15 b § 4 [2]. After the institution of the Buddhist Order the word came to imply membership of the Buddhist confraternity. The translation 'mendicant brother' seems preferable to 'monk' or 'friar', which words have a different connotation. 'Almsman' is a close rendering but scarcely suggests a confraternity. Then the Teacher (Satthā)<sup>2</sup> saw that Yasa<sup>3</sup> the clansman was ready . . . and admitted him, and he admitted also the other fifty-four, Yasa's companions, with the ordination-formula 'Come, mendicant-brother (ehi-bhikkhu-pabbajjāya)'<sup>4</sup> and caused them to attain to Saintship (arahattam).<sup>5</sup> . . . He then sent forth the Sixty<sup>6</sup> in different directions, saying 'Go forth, mendicant brothers, on your travel (caratha, bhikkhave, cārikam)'. Then he went towards Uruvelā<sup>7</sup> and half-way there in the Kappāsiya<sup>8</sup> wood, he convinced the party of thirty well-born youths<sup>9</sup> (bhadda-vaggiya-kumāre)<sup>10</sup> . . . and sending them also forth into the neighbouring regions, he himself proceeded [on his way from Benāres] to Uruvelā.<sup>11</sup> . . .<sup>12</sup>

Gotama's route between Benāres and Uruvelā, near Gayā, is unknown, but it may be conjectured that the first half of it lay along the north bank of the Ganges, which formed part of the Kosalan kingdom (Int. § 149). The country along the south bank lay between the great kingdoms of Avanti (Int. § 155) and Magadha, and was probably at that time inhabited by the aboriginal tribes of the Vindhyan mountains, and was therefore less favourable for the Teacher's work.

The canonical collection of early sacred songs called the Theragāthā assigns Song cxvii to Yasa. His story, built up of many texts from other narratives, may be taken as typical and at least broadly true. Yasa signifies Renown or Fame (Ch. 19 b § 11 [7]).

great merchant.<sup>1</sup> He had three mansions (pāsādā),<sup>2</sup> one for winter, one for summer, and one for the rainy season.<sup>3</sup> For four months in the rainy season he was surrounded by female musicians<sup>4</sup> and never left his mansion. Then [it happened that] Yasa the clansman, given over and altogether surrendered to the five sense-pleasures (pañcahi-kāmaguṇehi),<sup>5</sup> thus attended fell asleep earlier than usual, and sleep descended later on the women attending him, and an oil lamp burnt on through the night. [2] Then Yasa the clansman, having awaked earlier,<sup>6</sup> saw his attendants as they slept, a lute under the armpit of one, a tambourine on the neck of another, a drum in the armpit of another, one with hair dishevelled, another with moisture trickling from her mouth, [some] muttering in their sleep. It was like a cemetery (susānaṃ)<sup>7</sup> ready to hand. As he looked (on the spectacle) the misery of it appeared to him, and his mind stood aghast. Then Yasa the clansman breathed forth the cry (udānaṃ) 'O what wretchedness, O what affliction!'<sup>8</sup>

The Blessed One saw Yasa the clansman from afar approaching,<sup>15</sup> and having seen him he left his pathway (caṅkamā) and sat in his customary seat. Then Yasa the clansman not far from the Blessed One breathed forth the cry 'O what wretchedness, O what affliction!' And the Blessed One spoke thus to Yasa the clansman: 'Here is no wretchedness, Yasa; here is no affliction. Come, Yasa, sit; I will show thee the Law (dhammaṃ).' Ch. 12 a § 7 [229]; Ch. 12 c § 3 [237] n; also Ch. 19 b § 3 [5] n. It must be pointed out, however, that the nominative case is sometimes used elliptically for the locative (Ch. 11 e § 4) and perhaps for the accusative of direction; and if this applies the present passage may read 'to where Isipatana was, [where was] the deer-park'.

<sup>14</sup> There was apparently a rest-house for ascetics at Isipatana, where Gotama and the five disciples found quarters. Beside the rest-house was a path on which the ascetics might walk to and fro in meditation. Ch. 3 § 7; Ch. 15 a § 13 [158]; cp. Ap. H 5 [94].

is no wretchedness; here is no affliction!' glad and exulting, having put off his gilded slippers, drew near to where the Blessed One was; and having drawn near he exchanged greetings<sup>1</sup> with the Blessed One and seated himself at one side.<sup>2</sup> To him thus seated by his side the Blessed One addressed a graduated discourse (anu-pubbikatham),<sup>3</sup> namely, a discourse on charity (dāna-katham),<sup>4</sup> a discourse on conduct (sila-katham),<sup>5</sup> a discourse on the heavenly bliss [of Nibbāna] (sagga-katham),<sup>6</sup> and made clear the misery,<sup>7</sup> the worthlessness, and the defilement (saṃkilesaṃ) of the sense-pleasures (kāmānaṃ)<sup>8</sup> and the blessing (ānisaṃsaṃ)<sup>9</sup> in [their] renunciation (nekkhamme).<sup>10</sup> [6] When the Blessed One perceived that his mind was restored to health, at peace, rid of obstacles,<sup>11</sup> exulting and calm, then he made clear to him

With this graduated discourse compare the 'comprehensive discourse' of the MPS (Ch. 20 § 8; Ap. G 1 b § 3). The latter, though differently distributed and addressed to those already converted, must have covered much the same ground. The term 'graduated discourse' apparently applies only to the phrases 'a discourse on charity . . . renunciation'. These then comprise the essence of the Doctrine (Ap. G 1 b), and so must include the Four Truths mentioned in the next sentence. The incident is taken from the legend of Vipassin Buddha, SBE, iii, pp. 34-5 (Ap. G 1 b § 2); the sermon recurs in Dīgha 3 (i, p. 110) and 5 (i, p. 148; Ch. 11 d § 10 [1] n), and Majjh. 56 (i, p. 379; see Ch. 11 d § 6 n), and 91 (Ch. 12 e § 13). See §§ 6 [10] and 11 [1] below; Ch. 7 a § 12 [6]; Ch. 8 f § 6 [9]; Ap. B b § 4 [13] n; also Ap. F 2 d, Note and Ap. H 3 b § 2 [3] n.

<sup>5</sup> Or, duty. Int. § 32; Ch. 13 c § 20 [4]; Ap. F 1, Note; Ap. F 1 a § 2 [51]; Ap. F 2; Ap. G 1 a § 2 n; Ap. H 4 a; Ap. H 5 [95] n.

<sup>6</sup> 'About heaven', SBE, xiii, p. 104. 'The heavenly bliss of Nibbāna' appears to be a correct rendering. Gotama did not hold up before the eyes of his followers Heaven or any other reward save the peace of mind of self-forgetful activity (Ap. C b; cp. Ch. 13 c § 18, any existence, § 20 [7] n). Nibbāna is always included in the formula describing the Path with the mention of which the 'graduated' discourse concludes; and it must clearly have figured largely throughout the sermon. Gotama's later followers gave to it the name of sagga (Int. § 33; Ap. C b § 11 [174]), and it appears ultimately by a natural transition as a reward in a future life (cp. Ap. C a § 2; Ap. G 1 c, Note). It is noticeable that dāna (charity) and sila (virtuous action) are the first two of the famous Ten Perfections (dasā-pāramiyo; Ap. F 2 a) which distinguish Buddhas and Bodhisattas, and it seems probable that the 'graduated discourse' which constituted the regular conversion sermon (IN 2 a) proceeded however cursorily to describe these saintly virtues. Thus the sagga-kathā, with which the discourse closed, may have treated of the tenth perfection, upekkhā (equanimity), which is practically the same as nibbāna (peace). In any case, however sagga is to be interpreted, no reference whatever to the doctrine of re-birth is here apparent (Ap. B a); see Ch. 11 d § 6 where the 'graduated discourse' is opposed to the Jain doctrine of penance and Karma. Int. § 11; Ch. 9 b § 2 [3]. Cp. Ap. H 4 a § 3 (the other side); Ap. H 4 c § 2 [3].

Apparently all the words following sagga-katham are in apposition to that noun and therefore are to be taken as explanatory expansions of it.

<sup>3</sup> These are the Four Truths (Ch. 4 § 17). The discourse appears to be without the persuasiveness attributed to it in the narrative if the Buddha offered as inducement a long and indefinable course of re-births culminating in Nirvāna dependent on present and continued abjuration of the world and all desires. Moreover, it is difficult to find in the Four Truths any such doctrine (IN 1). What was offered was the present peace in well-doing if once self-seeking can be dropped. It was something within the power of ordinary men. Ch. 5 a § 10.

The dhama-cakkhu is explained in the succeeding clause in the text. It is the perception not only of the transience of the individual but of the unity and continuity underlying all changes. The Dhamma may be summarized as the law of unity, altruism, and continuity (Int. § 55 n; see § 10 below).

I b § 3, iddhi-vidham) that the great merchant, as he sits here, should not see Yasa here seated?”’ Then the Blessed One indeed performed such magic-making’ (see § 8 [11] below). This bears every sign of being an addition intended by a devout narrator to enhance the story, in which, however, it stands as an excrescence, since there was no necessity for Yasa to continue sitting beside the Teacher all day. Int. § 94 (iii).

Yasa here seated', glad and exulting, exchanged greetings with the Blessed One and seated himself at one side.

<sup>3</sup> The phraseology suggests that the 'graduated discourse' was subdivided into three parts, which covered the whole subject, and that the explanations regarding desire and renunciation did not follow but were comprised within one or other of these three parts. The fact that here the phrases common to the cases of Yasa and his father end, shows that the 'graduated discourse' closes at this point. The circumstance that 'renunciation (nekkhamma)' is pressed both upon Yasa, who became a friar, and upon his father, who remained a householder, seems to show that Gotama was not here prescribing a monk's renunciation of the world, but the good citizen's renunciation of worldliness or selfish aims (Ch. 8 l).

§ 8. [11] Then Yasa the clansman, whilst the Law was being shown to his father, considered the ground<sup>5</sup> (bhūmim) as seen and as understood, and having ceased to grasp (an-upādāya)<sup>6</sup> his mind (cittam) was liberated<sup>7</sup> from the defilements<sup>8</sup> (āsavehi). Then this thought came to the Blessed One: 'Yasa, whilst the Law was being shown to his father, has considered . . .<sup>9</sup> and his mind has been liberated from the defilements; Yasa is incapable of returning to the lower [life] and enjoying the passions (kāme)<sup>10</sup> as formerly when he was living in his home.' . . .<sup>11</sup> [12] And the great merchant saw Yasa sitting, and having seen him said to him: 'Thy mother, dear Yasa, is full of lamentation and grief; give thy mother life.' [13] Then Yasa looked at the Blessed One. Then the Blessed One spoke to the great merchant thus: 'What thinkest thou, householder? The Law is visible (dittho) to Yasa through the knowledge of a learner and the insight of a learner<sup>12</sup> (sekkena dassanena), as indeed to thee,<sup>13</sup> and on his considering the ground, as seen and as understood, his mind no longer grasping<sup>14</sup> is liberated from the defilements. Is now Yasa capable of returning to the lower [life] and enjoying the passions as formerly when he was living in his home?' 'Not so, revered sir.' Ch. 8 d § 9 [5].

saluted the Blessed One, and so moving as to keep his right side towards him (padakkhinam katvā)<sup>1</sup> departed.

§ 10. [15] Then Yasa the clansman not long after the departure of the great merchant said to the Blessed One: 'Master (bhante),<sup>2</sup> let me receive from the Blessed One ordination as one who has gone forth [from the world] and receive admission.'<sup>3</sup> The Blessed One replied: 'Come (ehi),<sup>4</sup> mendicant brother; happily proclaimed is the Law;<sup>5</sup> lead the holy life for the complete ending of sorrow.'<sup>6</sup> Thus this venerable man received his upasampadā-ordination. So at that time there were seven saints (arahā)<sup>7</sup> in the world.

<sup>2</sup> See § 5 [9] above. Bhante is a title conveying different shades of meaning varying from respect to reverence and may be applied to laymen as well as to religious teachers: Ch. 22 a § 7 [35]. It is applied to religious teachers irrespective of sect (Ch. 9 c § 2 [1]; Ch. 19 c § 1 [393]).

<sup>6</sup> Ch. 5 b § 7. This phrase once more asserts emphatically the aim of Gotama's teaching, which was to make a certain end of sorrow now in this life (Ap. C b) in this world, not a hypothetical one ages hence after an incalculable series of re-births. The thought of such a series can be endured with resignation, but it never has aroused enthusiasm such as Gotama's gospel called forth on all sides in its early days.

<sup>7</sup> Int. §§ 30, 34. The missionary as well as ascetic nature of early Buddhism is indicated by the term 'houseless' (Ch. 8 d § 8) applied to the Order, and by the vassa rule of residence in a Vihāra during the rainy season (Ch. 8 c). This was modified later by the increasing need of providing permanent places for the training of recruits (Ch. 8 d § 5, probationers, § 6 [1], instructor) and centres for conference and administration (Ch. 10 d § 1, Sāvattihī).

<sup>8</sup> The Mahā-vagga chapters 11 and 13 appear also in the Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagāthā-vagga, Samyutta iv (Māra-sam.) i. 5 and 4 respectively, where the scene is stated to be the Deer-park at Benāres (Ch. 15 a); Ch. 11 b § 1. The instructions to the first missionaries, except the first sentence, occur word for word in, and are apparently taken from, the legend of Vipassin Buddha (Ap. G 1 b § 2).

<sup>15</sup> Or, happiness. The Pāli word is sukha. Ch. 13 c § 4 (5); Ap. C b § 11 (203). Cp. Ch. 7 c § 2 [7] n.

<sup>16</sup> Ch. 8 h § 1 [14]; Ch. 13 a § 6; Ch. 22 a § 7 [35]; Ap. E c ii § 5; Ap. G 1 b § 2; Ap. H 4 a § 4 [8]. That Buddhism was not a mere system of self-culture is evident. The active altruistic nature of Buddhism is here emphasized (Int. §§ 3, 10, 101; Ch. 5 b § 4, vāyāma; Ap. F 1). The love of our fellow-men and the duty of labouring for their welfare are prominent features of Gotama's teaching, in strong contrast with the isolation and quietism of asceticism (Ch. 5 b § 4). 'Apathy' (the Stoic quality of ἀπάθεια), or better 'unperturbedness' (δραστηρία), is indeed a Buddhist virtue, but only in the sense which Marcus Aurelius gave to it, namely, supremacy the sake of, for the help of, for the well-being of spirits and men (deva-manussānam).<sup>1</sup> Let not two go the same way. Make known, mendicant brothers, the Law, good<sup>2</sup> in the beginning, good in the middle, good in the end, in the meaning and in the letter;<sup>3</sup> make clear the complete and pure holy-life (brahma-cariyam).<sup>4</sup> There are beings whose natures are scarcely tainted;<sup>5</sup> through not hearing of the Law they are lost (pari-hāyanti). They will comprehend the Law.<sup>6</sup> I, mendicant brothers, will go to Uruvelā,<sup>7</sup> where the army-township<sup>8</sup> (Senanigamo) is, to make known the Law. [2] . . .<sup>9</sup>

over one's own individual feelings, not the suppression of one's social impulses and sympathies (IN 10). Cp. Ch. 5 a § 6 (beings); Ch. 8 l § 1 (21) n; Ch. 9 b § 4 (good will); Ch. 15 a § 8 (helpful); Ch. 15 b § 3 [2] (amudayata); Ap. F 2 b [6] (karuṇā).

<sup>1</sup> Whilst not denying, Gotama attached no importance to the possible existence of the unseen world (Int. § 35; Ch. 5 b § 9 n; Ch. 7 a §§ 11 n, 12 [5]; Ch. 8 d § 6; Ch. 9 c § 3 [3]; Ch. 10 d § 1 n, 16th vassa; Ch. 21 §§ 12 [38], 14 [50]; Ap. E c i § 2 [73]; Ap. H 1 §§ 5, 6). The phrase 'spirits and men' appears to be merely a conventional term intended to include intelligent beings of all kinds. Comparison may be made with the conventional use of the word 'gods' in the royal title Devānam-piṇḍa frequent in the Asokan inscriptions (Ap. G 1 c). Apart from this conventional title and a passage in which possibly he denies their existence (Minor Rock Edict I, Rūpnāth Text) the Emperor Asoka makes no mention of gods or spirits, and therefore it may be assumed that in the Buddhism of his time such beings had not yet found any secure place. At the time of Gotama's hesitation (Ch. 5 a § 5 n) immediately after his Enlightenment there was no question of his preaching to any but men—the Māgadhan people, his former teachers, and the Five Mendicants. Yet it is conceivable that Gotama, like St. Francis of Assisi, may have attributed understanding to the higher animals and plants. In Buddhaghosha's Sumaṅgala Vilāsi the spirits come to Buddha's monastery daily for instruction (Ap. H 5 [94] n); in Dīgha thirty-two spirits instruct Buddha (Ch. 13 c § 17 n). Interpreted Vedāntically (Ap. G 2 c, Note) deva-manussā might mean the divine in men; cp. Ch. 16 a § 1 [502], and Ch. 17 b § 1 n.

(assama)<sup>1</sup> of Uruvelā Kassapa was, and having drawn near he spoke to Uruvelā Kassapa the ascetic (jaṭīlam). . . .<sup>2</sup> [xx. 17] Then this thought came to the Blessed One: 'For a long time this deluded man (mogha-purissassa)<sup>3</sup> will have the idea "The great devotee (mahā-saṃaṇo) indeed is possessed of great powers (mah-iddhiko)<sup>4</sup> and great experience, but he is not sacred (arahā)<sup>5</sup> as I am." What now if I could move this matted-haired ascetic.' Then the Blessed One spoke to Uruvelā Kassapa the ascetic thus: 'Thou truly art not a saint (arahā); indeed thou hast not attained the path leading to saintship (arahatta-maggaṃ);<sup>6</sup> nor is this way (pati-padā) of thine such that thou mayst become a saint or attain to the path leading to saintship.' Then<sup>7</sup> Kassapa inclined<sup>8</sup> himself with his head at the feet of the Blessed One and said to the Blessed One: 'Master, let me receive from the Blessed One ordination (pabbajjāṃ), let me receive admission (upasampadam).'<sup>9</sup>

§ 3. [18] 'Thou, Kassapa,' [said the Blessed One], 'art leader of five hundred ascetics, . . . inform them now, and as they think fit so let them do.' Then Kassapa drew near to where the ascetics were and having approached them spoke thus: 'I wish, sirs, to lead the holy-life (brahma-cariyaṃ) with the great recluse; as ye think fit so do ye.' 'We have long, sir, had a regard for the great recluse,' said they; 'if thou, revered sir, wilt lead the holy-life with the great recluse, we will all lead the holy-life with the great recluse.' <sup>5</sup> Kassapa's initial arrogance was probably due to caste pride. The Jaṭilas were Brāhman ascetics (Ap. F 2 c, caste). With their admission there was introduced the possibility of a Hinduizing reaction in Buddhism (IN 7). It was perhaps in order to meet this that Gotama later insisted on privileges of admission for his Kshatriya kinsmen (Ap. H 1 i).

<sup>7</sup> Doubtless the conversion was due to Gotama's impressive discourse, but the narrative attributes it to the miracles, though persuasion had sufficed for all previous conversions. In *Sam. § 5. [xxi. 1] Then the Blessed One having stayed at Uruvelā as long as he wished proceeded to Gayā Head (Gayā-sisam) with a great company,<sup>14</sup> a thousand mendicant brothers, all formerly matted-haired ascetics. There the Blessed One stayed at Gayā (Gayāyam) on Gayā-Head (Gayā-sise)<sup>15</sup> with the thousand mendicants. <sup>16</sup> See § 1 above; Int. § 30. The Fire Sermon is a pendant to the Second Sermon. The way of escape from the senses is the perception of the transience of individuality (Ch. 5 b § 2) and the consequent realization of the triviality and futility of the senses. The five senses and the mind together cover, from another point of view, the same ground as the five Khandhas (Ap. E a ii). Gotama insists upon the maleficent aspect of fire, as the Jāṭilas had dwelt upon its beneficent aspect. The Sermon appears in the Samyutta Nikāya, Salāyatana-vagga, Samyutta xxxv, Sutta 28 (Ādiṭṭa).

That the powerfully analytical and practical mind of Gotama counselled unqualified aversion from the mind and all ideas is impossible (Ap. F 1). This would have been to set the Four Noble Truths, including the Noble Eightfold Path, in which he concentrated his teaching, at naught, and would savour strongly of the idealistic asceticism which Gotama rejected before he re-entered the practical world and commenced his forty-five years' ministry of selfless thought and labour (cp. <sup>1</sup> Freedom from desire is the object held up in this discourse as in the First Sermon. But the fourth Noble Truth, calling for activity in mind, word, and deed, must not be overlooked.

<sup>5</sup> Ch. 4 § 17; Ch. 5 c § 5; Ch. 14 c § 7 [9]. 'This state' in this context might refer to the condition of mind in which the fires of lust, hatred, and delusion, all individualistic desires and misapprehensions, are extinguished here in this life (Ap. D c, Arahat). The passage, however, is the regular formula for full enlightenment (Sam. Nik. iv, p. 63, v, p. 165). If this oft-repeated formula is early it is crucial and may be assumed to accord with the doctrine that there are no permanently separate selves (Ch. 4 § 18 [3], anattā).

They found satisfaction in this verse, which states that all caused things are transient. The inference is that they found by contrast the Deathless in the Uncreated (Ap. The verse is found in MV, I. xxiii (see § 19 below), but not elsewhere in the Piṭakas (BBS, Introduction, revised edition by Mrs. Rhys Davids, p. 215 n). <sup>8</sup> 'Or perhaps, "He formed the Corporation of the Disciples", that is, the Order of Mendicants', BBS, I, p. 119 n. The phrase apparently implies that the Saṃgha was now formally constituted (Int. § 13; Ch. 8 a [4] (meetings); Ap. H 3; cp. § 15 n above). From this point Gotama began to reveal his great practical constructive powers. Continued in Ch. 7 b § 1.

that time Sāriputta<sup>1</sup> and Moggallāna<sup>2</sup> were leading a religious life<sup>3</sup> (brahmacariyam) with Sañjaya the wandering philosopher. By these [two] an agreement was made: 'He who first comes to the Deathless<sup>4</sup> (amataṃ adhigacchati) shall instruct [the other].' [2] Then the venerable Assaji<sup>5</sup> before noon wearing his under-robcs and assuming his outer-robe and alms-bowl entered Rājagaha for alms (piṇḍāya).<sup>6</sup> His deportment with downcast eyes was perfect as he moved befittingly this way and that, looked this way and that, and bent and advanced.<sup>7</sup> And Sāriputta saw the venerable Assaji. . . .<sup>8</sup> [3] Then the venerable Assaji having gone through Rājagaha for alms, taking what he had obtained as alms, withdrew. Then Sāriputta drew near to where the venerable Assaji was . . . and standing on one side spoke to him thus: 'Thy faculties (indriyāni),<sup>9</sup> friend, are clear; the colour of thy skin is bright and pure. On whose account, friend, hast thou renounced [the world]? Who is thy teacher? Whose Law dost thou profess?'<sup>10</sup> [4] 'There is, friend, the great devotee Gotama the Sakyan, he who has gone forth from the Sakyan clan;<sup>11</sup> on account of him, the Blessed One, I have renounced [the world]. He, the Blessed One, is my teacher. I profess the Law of him, the Blessed One.' 'And what, venerable sir, does thy teacher declare, what does he announce?'<sup>12</sup> 'I indeed, friend, an newly and but a short while ordained,<sup>13</sup> recently come to this law and discipline (dhamma-vinayaṃ).<sup>14</sup> I cannot show thee the Law in full; but I will tell thee the meaning (atthaṃ)<sup>15</sup> briefly.' . . .

And that which is the cessation (yo nirodho)<sup>6</sup> of these; thus the Great Recluse declares.’<sup>7</sup>

§ 20. [5 cd.] Then, when he had heard this statement of the Law there arose in Sāriputta the stainless clear vision of the Law (dhamma-cakkhum):<sup>8</sup> ‘Everything<sup>9</sup> that has by nature an origin has also by nature a cessation.’<sup>10</sup> He said: ‘If this indeed is the Law, ye have reached even now to the griefless state<sup>11</sup> (padam-a-sokaṃ) unseen in the past<sup>12</sup> during many vast numbers of ages.’<sup>13</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Either, their finiteness, which is implied in any case; or, the One, the impersonal Uncaused Cause, which may be the amata sought by the two students (see § 18 [1] above; Ap. G 2 a). For hetu see Ch. 12 c § 5 [3]. Cp. Ch. 4 § 10 (sa-hetu-dhammam); and Ap. B c (samuppāda); also Ap. G 1 c § 1 (Upatishtya).

<sup>6</sup> Either, their transience, which in any case is implied (Ap. E c i); or, the transcendence of their individuality in the selfless state of Nibbāna, which may be the amata sought by the two students (see § 18 [1] above). ‘He has explained their cessation also’, SBE; ‘and also their cessation’, ThB. The message of Gotama (Int. § 3; Ap. G 1 b) was twofold, namely (1) the transience of individuality (Ap. E), and (2) the passing of egoistic desire and sorrow upon the full realization of the former truth and all its implications, especially the divine fundamental unity (Ap. G 2 a). See § 12 [8] above (cessation); Ch. 4 §§ 10 (nirodho), 11 (khayam paccayānaṃ); Ch. 5 b § 7; Ap. B c §§ 2 (2), 5 [6]; Ap. G 2 a § 1; Ap. I, Note. Cp. Ch. 13 c § 20 [7] (ending); Ap. E a ii § 4 [1] (attha-gama).

<sup>7</sup> This verse, which is here stated to summarize the Dhamma, is in effect a summary of the Anattalakkhaṇa-Sutta (Ch. 5 b § 2), which is the essential philosophic background or foundation of the First Sermon (Ap. G 1 a, i, Four Truths). These lines summarizing the Dhamma are in essence the same as the verses attributed to Gotama at the time of his Enlightenment (Ch. 4 § 10, manifested), and as the verse called the Dhamma-cakkhu (see §§ 12 [8] above, 20 below). They are an expansion of Assaji’s summary in Majjh. 35 (Ch. 12 a § 7 [228]). The corollary of this concise statement of the Law is that the Uncaused Cause alone is permanent. To perceive this is to find with Gotama the lasting One amidst the fleeting Many (Int. § 98; Ch. 13 e § 2 [2] n; Ch. 22 b § 25 n (the last words of the Buddha); Ap. C b § 11 (374); Ap. G 1 a (ii) n; Ap. G 2 a § 7 (383)). No sufficient grounds for idealist or transmigrationist explanations appear at this stage (Ap. G 1 a).

<sup>8</sup> i.e. the clear perception of the Law of Unity (Int. § 55 n). The Jātaka Introduction treats this final comprehension as Arahātship (see § 16 above; cp. Ch. 5 c § 10). The mere perception of the transience of the Many cannot by itself constitute arahātship, which implies further a conviction of the permanence of the One and union with the same through transcendence of the self (Ap. F 2 d, samādhi). Ch. 6 a § 4 [6]; see §§ 19 n above, 21 below; Ch. 11 c § 14 n. Cp. Ap. G 2 a § 5. <sup>9</sup> Ch. 5 c § 7.

<sup>13</sup> The Pāli word is kappa (Int. § 107). The passage conflicts with the theory that Gotama was the third Buddha of the present Kalpa (Ap. A 2 c, Note).

§ 21. [6] Then Sāriputta drew near to where the wandering philosopher Moggallāna was; and Moggallāna saw Sāriputta from afar approaching, and having seen him spoke thus: 'Thy faculties, friend, are clear, the colour of thy skin is bright and pure. Hast thou now, friend, come to the Deathless?'<sup>1</sup> 'Yea, friend, I have come to the Deathless.' . . .<sup>2</sup> [10] When he had heard the statement of the Law there arose in Moggallāna the stainless clear vision of the Law. . . .<sup>3</sup>

§ 22. [xxiv. 1] Then Moggallāna spoke thus to Sāriputta: 'Let us go, friend, to the presence of the Blessed One; he, the Blessed One, shall be our teacher.' Sāriputta replied: 'These two hundred and fifty Wanderers, friend, stay here on our account, looking to us; let us now inform them and as they think fit so let them do.' . . .<sup>4</sup> [2] Then Sāriputta and Moggallāna drew near to where the wandering-philosopher Sañjaya<sup>5</sup> was . . . and spoke thus: 'We go, friend, to the presence of the Blessed One; he, the Blessed One, will be our teacher.' 'Enough, friends,' said he, 'do not go; we three together will lead this company (gaṇaṃ)'<sup>6</sup> . . .<sup>7</sup> [3] Then Sāriputta and Moggallāna taking these two hundred and fifty Wanderers drew near to the Veļuvana. . . .<sup>8</sup>

§ 23. [3 cd.] Then the Blessed One saw Sāriputta and Moggallāna from afar approaching, and having seen them spoke to the mendicant brothers and said: 'Here, mendicant brothers, are two friends arriving, Kolita<sup>9</sup> and Upatissa;<sup>10</sup> this will be a pair of disciples (sāvaka-yugaṃ) for me, the most excellent pair (aggamaṃ bhaddha-yugaṃ).'<sup>11</sup>

§ 24. [3 cd.] They, being liberated<sup>12</sup> in the profound region of knowledge<sup>13</sup> by the supreme destruction of the bases (upadhi-samkhaye)<sup>14</sup> [of self], arrived at the Veļuvana; and then the Teacher

G 2 c) whom Gotama encountered. That Gotama disliked and distrusted their metaphysical subtleties is evident. He wished to purify, not to abandon, the old Vedic religion. This is shown by his retention of the word Brāhman (Ap. F 2 c). It would appear that whilst Gotama differed from the Jātilas (Int. § 186) in that he denied personality to the One and to the Many, to Agni (see § 8 above) and to the individual soul (Ap. E c i), he differed from the sceptical Sañjaya in that he asserted the reality, though not the personality, of the One and of the Many, whereas the Sceptic denied all proof even of their reality. GOTAMA'S FAMILY TO THE SAṂGHA

<sup>12</sup> Omitting the account of the nine messengers who were sent by Suddhodana to the Buddha, all of whom with their followers were converted and becoming Arahats (arahattaṃ patvā), immediately on hearing a single discourse by the Buddha (Ap. D c), forgot their message; also the sending of the tenth messenger Kāludāyin, who was similarly converted but succeeded in delivering the message begging the Buddha's return to Kapilavatthu. <sup>13</sup> Ch. 6 a § 1.

‘One must rise, one must not be slothful (na-ppamajjeyya);<sup>10</sup> one must follow the law of good conduct (su-caritaṃ).<sup>11</sup>

Who follows the Law lies down in bliss (sukhaṃ)<sup>12</sup> in this world and in that beyond (asmim loke paramhi-ca).<sup>13</sup>

When the verse was uttered the Rāja attained the reward of conversion.<sup>14</sup> . . .<sup>15</sup> Then as soon as the Rāja was established in the reward of Conversion (sotapatti-phalaṃ) he took the Blessed One’s alms-bowl and led the Blessed One and his followers to the palace. . . .<sup>16</sup>

<sup>15</sup> Omitting a parenthetical account of his attaining the stages of Once Returning and Never Returning, and finally on his death-bed Arahātship (arahattaṃ; Ap. D c). Thus Suddhodana attained Arahātship without becoming a monk (see § 5 below; Ch. 10 b § 2; Ap. C b, Note). The Rāja was not so zealous an early convert as to be included in the list of foremost lay-disciples (Ch. 10 c [6]).

<sup>16</sup> Omitting an account of the meal given by the Rāja, and later the Buddha’s interview with Rāhula’s mother, who had declined to attend at the meal (Int. § 190, women). During this interview the Rāja states that his daughter-in-law had refused the request of her relatives to return to them (apparently with a view to her remarriage). See Ch. 13 c § 11 [90].

§ 4. [p. 91 cd.] On the seventh day Rāhula's mother<sup>7</sup> . . .<sup>8</sup> sent him to the Blessed One. . . . And the boy followed the Blessed One saying: 'Give me, recluse (samaṇa), [my] inheritance.' . . . Then the thought came to the Blessed One: ' . . . Come, let me give him the sevenfold Noble Treasure (satta-vidhaṃ ariya-dhanaṃ)<sup>9</sup> obtained on the throne of enlightenment (bodhi-maṇḍe),<sup>10</sup> and make him master of the inheritance of the higher world.'<sup>11</sup> Then he said to Sāriputta<sup>12</sup> [p. 92] 'Confer on the young<sup>13</sup> Rāhula the renunciation-ordination.

§ 5. [p. 92 cd.] When the boy (kumāre) had been ordained the Rāja . . . was unable to support his grief and expressed it to the Blessed One and asked a boon, saying: 'It would be well, Master (bhante), if the reverend [brothers]<sup>14</sup> should not confer the renunciation-ordination on a son without the permission of his mother and father.'<sup>15</sup> And the Blessed One granted the boon. . . .<sup>16</sup>

c. RETURN TO RĀJAGAHA: FURTHER CONVERSIONS;
SUMMARY ACCOUNT

Vinaya Piṭaka, Mahā-vagga, Khandhaka I, xxiv, 5-7<sup>12</sup>

<sup>10</sup> Ch. 8 d § 6. This practical ruling, like the bulk of the resolutions recorded in the Vinaya, probably is given precisely in Gotama's own words. The 'connexion' or setting probably was repeated with more freedom until the Canon was finally fixed (IN 6; Ch. 7 c § 2 [7] n; cp. § 4 n above). In Mahā-vagga I. xlix, he ruled that final (or upasampadā) ordination should not be conferred on youths under twenty years of age; and in I. l, he ruled that preliminary (or pabbajjā) ordination should not be granted to boys under fifteen. The practical spirit here revealed is not likely ever to have approved the ordination of a child of seven. Ch. 2 § 4 n.

<sup>11</sup> Ap. H 1 § 2. For dukkata-offences and penalties see Ap. H 4 c. The succeeding section of the Mahā-vagga (I. lv) states that the Buddha proceeded from Kapilavathu to Sāvathī (Ch. 9), where he entrusted Sāriputta with further novice-pupils.

causes childlessness; the recluse Gotama causes widowhood; the recluse Gotama causes the breaking up of the family.<sup>1</sup> Now through him a thousand Jaṭilas<sup>2</sup> have gone forth (pabbajjitaṃ), and those two hundred and fifty Wanderers, followers of Sañjaya,<sup>3</sup> have gone forth; and these many well-known Māgadhan clansmen are leading the holy-life with the recluse Gotama.' Moreover, when they saw the mendicant-brothers they reproached them in this verse:

'The great recluse has come to Giribajja (Giribajjaṃ)<sup>4</sup> of the Magadhas, Leading all the followers of Sañjaya. Whom now will he lead away?'

§ 2. [6] Some mendicant brothers heard those vexed, disturbed, and angry people; and these mendicant brothers reported the matter<sup>5</sup> to the Blessed One. 'This noise, mendicant brothers,' said he, 'will not be for long; it will be only for seven days; after seven days it will cease. If, mendicant brothers, they reproach you in this verse . . .<sup>6</sup> do you reply to them in this verse:

"Great men (mahā-vīrā),<sup>7</sup> the Successors (Tathāgatā),<sup>8</sup> verily lead by the true Law (sad-dhammena).<sup>9</sup>

What envy is there of the wise (viñānataṃ) leading by the Law?"'

[7] . . .<sup>10</sup> Then people said: 'The devotees, disciples of the Sakyan (Sakya-puttiya),<sup>11</sup> indeed lead by law, not by un-law (a-dhammena).'
Thus the noise was only for seven days; after seven days it ceased.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>12</sup> With this incident closes the strictly introductory portion of the Mahā-vagga presenting a continuous narrative (Int. § 1; Ch. 4 § 9 n; Ch. 7 a §§ 15 n, 24 n). The remainder of the Mahā-vagga and the whole of the Culla-vagga comprise administrative rules classified according to subject with their 'connexions' or 'occasions' (Ch. 7 b § 7; Ch. 8 a [4]), presented in piecemeal fashion (Int. § 13).

At this point the First Part of the Life of Gotama may fitly close. The truth has been found, the doctrine or natural law or norm (Dhamma) has been formulated, and the Society (Samgha) has been established, so that the truth may be perpetuated. The great creative effort of his mind has been made; what remains is to develop and organize rather than to create. During the remaining forty-five years of his life Gotama devoted himself ceaselessly, and with a consummate genius for organization (Int. § 5 n; Ap. G 1 a, Note; cp. IN 10 n, and Ch. 6 a § 7 n), to the expansion and administration of the Society which he had founded for the obliteration of human sorrow (Ch. 5 c § 8; Ch. 6 b § 1). The Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga, i.e. the major and minor sections of the Khandhaka division of the Vinaya Piṭaka (or Code of Discipline), in which this activity is recorded, read (except for ill-founded interpolations) almost like the minutes of a modern assembly, though all decisions, when Gotama presides, are attributed not to the meeting but to the president (cp. Ch. 8 a [4], 'I sanction'). They display an immense resourcefulness in dealing with contingencies as they arise, and a wonderfully moderate and judicial spirit. Gotama's habitually serene character by no means excluded a needful severity (Ch. 8 g § 1 [5]). In these records events are naturally classified under different heads, and the narrative form is now abandoned. (A continuous narrative is resumed in the Mahā-parimibbāna Suttanta covering the last few weeks of the Teacher's life.) Many, if not most, of the decisions recorded in the Vinaya Piṭaka doubtless were formulated after Gotama's death, but the nucleus must be attributed to the Master himself. Some attempt to distinguish that nucleus is made in the summaries of the rules and practices of the Samgha given in Ch. 8 and Ap. H.

RĀJAGAHA: THE SAMGHA<sup>1</sup> DEVELOPED; ORGANIZATION

<sup>1</sup> Int. §§ 13, 15; Ch. 6 b § 2 [4]; Ch. 7 c final note; Ch. 11 c § 2 (Veluvana); Ch. 21 § 7 [23]; Ch. 22 a § 1 [15]; Ap. H 3. Literally, assembly or meeting. The word was not confined to the Buddhist confraternity; Ch. 22 b § 15. The Buddhist Samgha was essentially the community, society, or order of mendicant brothers. For the order of mendicant sisters see Ch. 12 b § 2 [4] (iv), (v), (vi). For the Samgha as offering occasion for criticism see Ch. 8 c § 4; as court of discipline, see Ch. 8 b § 7 [1]; as legislature, see Ch. 8 g § 7 [1]; as court of appeal, see many instances, e.g. Ch. 8 c § 4; Ch. 8 d § 1; the same method was applied to the laity; see Ch. 15 b § 13 [1]. The Dhamma (Law or Faith) being now fixed, the Samgha or organized society of believers from this point begins to take definite shape under Gotama's creative hand. That the organization of Jains or Niganthas (Int. § 179) under Mahāvīra, Gotama's contemporary, was equally systematic and effective may be gathered from their sacred Canon (SBE, xx and xlv) and from the fact of their vigorous survival to the present day.

<sup>2</sup> Ch. 8 b §§ 2 [iii. 1], 4 [1]; Ch. 11 a § 3; Ch. 11 d § 11 [1]; Ch. 11 e § 2 [1]; Ch. 12 b § 2 [4] (iii); Ch. 17 a [1]; Ap. H 1; Ap. H 3, Note. Day of observance or of fast. It was originally 'the eve of the Soma sacrifice' (Pāli Dict.), in Brāhmanical ritual (Int. § 190, fasts). With the institution of the Buddhist Uposatha (day reserved or set aside) we have the first of the great body of administrative regulations adopted or invented by Gotama's strongly directive mind. In the Eights of Ang. Nik. the fifth division is called the Uposatha-vagga.

<sup>4</sup> i.e. in the Veluvana; Int. § 128. It would appear from Ch. 8 j § 10 that the brethren were still living as isolated ascetics.

<sup>6</sup> Ch. 8 c § 1 [2]; Ch. 11 e § 3 [1]; Ch. 15 b § 4 [1]; also Ap. G 2 c, Note (teachers). Here the term añña-tiṭṭhiyā might include Brāhmanic Vedāntic philosophers, but it excludes the Vedic ritualists or subordinates them to the philosophic schoolmen. Compare nānā-tiṭṭhiyā (Ch. 12 a § 5 [19]); and tiṭṭhiyā (Ch. 8 j § 4).

<sup>7</sup> 'Fourteenth, fifteenth', SBE, xiii, p. 239. Sometimes the one and sometimes the other of these two days was observed, according to the position of the moon. Cp. Ap. H 1 § 1.

<sup>8</sup> i.e. on the 8th day of the waxing moon, the full-moon day, the 8th day of the waning moon, and the new-moon day. The 8th being a half-moon day has a secondary place. Ch. 8 l § 1 (27); Ch. 12 b § 2 [4] (iii); Ch. 12 d § 3 [2]; cp. Ch. 13 d § 2 [2].

acquired [each] a party<sup>1</sup> (pakkham). [2] Then as the Māgadhan king (rañño Māgadhasa)<sup>2</sup> Seniya Bimbisāra<sup>3</sup> was alone and quiet<sup>4</sup> a reflection arose in his mind thus: '...<sup>5</sup> What now if the fathers<sup>6</sup> (ayyā) also were to hold meetings. . . . ' [3] Then . . . Seniya Bimbisāra spoke to the Blessed One thus: '... It would be well, revered sir, if the fathers also were to hold meetings on the fourteenth-fifteenth and eighth of the half-month.' [4] . . .<sup>7</sup> Then in this connexion<sup>8</sup> and on this occasion the Blessed One having delivered a discourse on the Law<sup>9</sup> instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'I sanction<sup>10</sup> (anujānāmi), mendicant brothers, the holding of meetings<sup>11</sup> (sannipātitaṃ) on the fourteenth-fifteenth and eighth of the half-month.'

b. PĀTIMOKKHA,<sup>12</sup> OR PROFESSION OF FAITH AND CONFESSION

Vinaya Piṭaka, Mahā-vagga, Khandhaka II, ii-iii

§ 1. [II. ii] Now at that time considering that the Blessed One had sanctioned the holding of meetings on the fourteenth-fifteenth and eighth of the half-month the mendicant brothers held meetings . . . and sat in silence. The people went to hear their doctrine. They were vexed . . .<sup>13</sup> and said: 'Should not a doctrine (dharmo) be expounded by them when they hold a meeting?' Some mendicant

<sup>7</sup> Omitting Buddha's acceptance and the king's departure. Gotama showed his administrative greatness as much in accepting the suggestions of others—friends, followers, or opponents (Ch. 8 c § 1; Ap. G 2 c)—as in his own creative ideas. Like other great men he took his good where he found it, desiring it for its excellence and usefulness, as a contribution to the common cause and estimating it without any trace of the smallness of lesser minds which see things from a personal point of view.

<sup>8</sup> Ch. 7 a § 15; Ch. 7 c § 2 [7] n; Ch. 9 c § 2 [2]; Ch. 15 b § 13 [1]. Cp. Ch. 1 § 1 (Nidāna). This phrase constantly recurs throughout the Mahā-vagga. It is the object of this portion of the sacred Canon to explain the 'occasion' on which, and the 'connexion' in which, each part of the Vinaya or Disciplinary Regulations originated (Ap. A 1 a, Note). Some of these occasions and connexions were doubtless supplied at a late date and are imaginary, but many are doubtless authentic. The more imaginative portions of these 'occasions' may perhaps have been added to the Pāli Canon of the Vin. Piṭ. on the authority of the ancient Sinhalese commentaries (Int. § 21).

<sup>9</sup> Or, moral discourse; dharmī-kathā. Cp. Ch. 6 a § 12; Ch. 8 g § 5 [6]; Ch. 10 c [1] (9); Ch. 16 d § 2 [10] n; Ap. H 3 b § 2 [3].

<sup>10</sup> 'I prescribe', SBE, xiii, p. 240. Ch. 6 b § 2 [4]; Ch. 7 c (final footnote); Ch. 8 b §§ 1, 2, 7 [3]; Ch. 8 c §§ 1, 2, 4; Ch. 8 d §§ 1 [3], 2 [4], 5, 6 [1], 7 [2]; Ch. 12 b §§ 2 [2], 3 [1]; Ch. 12 c § 2 [1]; Ch. 12 d § 3 [5]; Ch. 18 b § 1 [162].

<sup>11</sup> A general meeting was called sannipāta; Ch. 7 a § 17; Ch. 20 § 2 (1). For local organization, see Ch. 8 f. See also Ch. 8 d § 3 (gaṇa); Ap. H 3 a § 1 (sannipāta), § 2 (parisā). For meeting-halls, see Ch. 8 f § 4 n.

brothers heard those vexed people . . . and these mendicant brothers announced this matter<sup>1</sup> (attham) to the Blessed One. Then in this connexion and on this occasion the Blessed One having delivered a discourse on the Law instructed the mendicant brothers, saying: 'I sanction,<sup>2</sup> mendicant brothers, the expounding of the Law (dhammam)<sup>3</sup> when you hold meetings on the fourteenth-fifteenth and eighth of the half-month.'

§ 2. [iii. 1] Then as the Blessed One was alone and quiet<sup>4</sup> a reflection arose in his mind thus: 'What now if I were to sanction that the precepts (sikkhāpadāni)<sup>5</sup> taught by me to the mendicant brothers should be their Franchise-Rules recital (pātimokkh-uddesaṃ). This would be their Observance-day service (uposathakammam).'<sup>6</sup> [2] Then the Blessed One, having arisen in the evening from his quiet [contemplation],<sup>7</sup> in this connexion and on this occasion having delivered a discourse on the Law instructed the mendicant brothers saying: ' . . .<sup>8</sup> I sanction,<sup>9</sup> mendicant brothers, the reciting of Franchise-Rules (pātimokkham).<sup>10</sup>

§ 3. [iii. 3] And they must be recited thus. The assembly (samgho) must be directed<sup>11</sup> (ñāpetabbo) by a learned<sup>12</sup> and competent mendicant brother, saying: "Let the assembly, revered sirs (bhante), hear me. To-day is an Observance-day, the fifteenth.<sup>13</sup> If it please the assembly, let the assembly hold the Observance-day service, let it recite the Franchise-Rules. What must be done first by the assembly? Venerable sirs (āyasmanto), announce your purification (pārisuddhim). I will recite the Franchise-Rules; let all of us present hear it well and pay attention. He in whom there is offence (āpatti),<sup>14</sup> let him make it manifest<sup>15</sup> (āvi-kareyya). <sup>3</sup> From this it is evident that a discourse or sermon was an essential part of the ceremony in its early form (cp. § 4 [3] below; also Ch. 12 b § 2 [4], iii), though it does not find a place in the present Pātimokkha (Ap. H 1, Note). The 'expounding of the Law' here mentioned was evidently at a day meeting open to the public (Ch. 11 e § 2 [1]); the Pātimokkha service was held on the preceding night and limited to the Bhikkhus. For the position given to the sermon in modern Buddhist ceremonial see H. G. Q. Wales, Siamese State Ceremonies (1931), pp. 152, 200; cp. Mahā-vagga, II. xv. 5. For the Essentials of the Dhamma see Ap. G 1 b.

When in a meeting of this kind anything has been proclaimed thrice<sup>1</sup> the answer is [taken] as [that] of each individual. Throughout the Vinaya-Piṭaka one finds evidence of the skilful and practised manner in which the public business of the Samgha was organized and carried out (Ch. 8 A, Samgha). Anyone who has directed a large assembly will recognize the potency and value of the right cant brothers after residence, on three points (thānehi),<sup>1</sup> on what they have seen or heard or felt to be uncertain.<sup>2</sup> Thus there will come to you accord with one another, escape from guilt, and the observance of discipline. [14] And [criticism] must be requested thus. The assembly must be directed<sup>3</sup> by a learned and competent mendicant brother, saying: "Let the assembly, revered sirs, hear me. To-day is the day for requesting [criticism] (pavāraṇā). If it please the assembly, let the assembly request [criticism]." The senior mendicant brother<sup>4</sup> should adjust the outer wrap over one shoulder, sit upon his heels, raise his joined palms and say to the assembly thus: "Friends (āvuso), I request the assembly [for criticism] on what they have seen or heard or felt to be uncertain. Venerable sirs, taking compassion, address me; perceiving, I will make amends. A second time . . . a third time<sup>5</sup> I request the assembly. . . ." Then [each] junior<sup>6</sup> mendicant brother . . . should say to him thus: "Revered sir (bhante), I request the assembly [for criticism]. . . ."

§ 5. [iv. iii. 1] Then the thought came to the Bhikkhus: 'How many Pavāraṇā<sup>7</sup> [services] are there?' They reported the matter to the Blessed One. He replied: 'There are two Pavāraṇā [services], that of the fourteenth and that of the fifteenth<sup>8</sup> of the shorter and longer half-months respectively.' . . .<sup>9</sup> of criticism and independent motion here established. Doubtless such criticism might be diverted to petty personal points; but in a body of men of ability it could be made an instrument of great public utility, and as one peruses the records of the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga of the Vinaya-Piṭaka one may well believe that it was utilized to bring forward many points of public interest and value.

The Mahā-vagga describes three forms of Ordination of Bhikkhus: that by the Buddha himself (Ch. 5 b § 8), that by the early individual missionaries (Ch. 6 b § 2 [3]), and that by the Samgha of each district as here set forth and still in use (Ap. H 2 c). For exclusion and expulsion from the Order see Ap. H 2 b. For the ordination of women see Ch. 12 b § 2 [4]; Ch. 13 c § 12 [1].

The mendicant brothers did not wish to confer the ordination on him. . . .<sup>1</sup> The Blessed One saw that Brāhman who had become emaciated. . . . [2] Then the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers, saying: 'Who now, mendicant brothers, remembers a service done by this Brāhman?' On this being said the venerable Sāriputta<sup>2</sup> said to the Blessed One: 'I indeed, revered sir, remember a service done by him. . . . Now this Brāhman, as I was going round for alms in Rājagaha, caused a ladleful of food to be given to me. . . .' [3] 'Then, Sāriputta, do thou confer on the Brāhman the Pabbajjā and Upasampadā ordination (pabbajehi upasampādehi).'<sup>3</sup> 'How, revered sir, shall I ordain him?' Then the Blessed One on this occasion, having delivered a discourse on the Law, instructed the mendicant brothers, saying: 'The admission-ordination (upasampadā) with the three declarations of taking refuge<sup>4</sup> sanctioned by me I prohibit from to-day. I sanction,<sup>5</sup> mendicant brothers, the conferring of the admission-ordination (upasampādetum) by the fourfold procedure of resolution (ñatti-catutthena kamma).'<sup>6</sup> [4] And the admission-ordination must be conferred thus. The assembly must be directed<sup>7</sup> by a learned and competent mendicant brother, saying: "Let the assembly, revered sirs, hear me. This [person] named so and so is desirous of admission-ordination under the venerable so and so.<sup>8</sup> If it please the assembly let the assembly confer the admission-ordination on so-and-so, with so-and-so as instructor (upajjhāyena)."<sup>9</sup> This is the proposal<sup>10</sup> (ñatti): [5] "... The assembly confers the admission-ordination on so-and-so with so-and-so as instructor." To whatsoever venerable [brother] it seems good that admission-ordination should be conferred on so-and-so with so-and-so as instructor, let him remain silent;<sup>11</sup> to whomsoever it does not seem good, let him speak. And for the second time I state this matter (attham).<sup>12</sup> . . . [6] And for the third time.<sup>13</sup> . . . So-and-so has been admitted by the assembly with so-and-so as instructor. It seems good to the assembly; therefore it remains silent. Thus I take it."<sup>14</sup>

'Necessaries', KM, p. 78; 'Four Resources', SBE, xiii, p. 173. The four Bases or Maintenances as stated in the MV are self-contradictory. First the ascetic rule is stated, and then appear exemptions which entirely annul it. Gotama's predilection for moderation or the 'middle way' (Ch. 5 b § 4 [17]; Ch. 8 k), and his aversion from asceticism, were shown throughout his life after the Enlightenment and were evidently the reason for Devadatta's schism from the Order. The Maintenances in their present form show every sign of being a later Hinduized version of Gotama's own moderate rules. They doubtless, however, represent Gotama's broad-minded permission to the ascetically minded to follow their own bent (Ch. 8 j § 2 [35]; Ch. 19 b § 7 [14] n), a permission which he freely gave to Devadatta, who, however, desired to impose ascetic practices on all. The four ascetic 'bases' appear as an-avajjāni (blameless) in the Catukka-nipāta (Fours) of the Ang. Nik. (PTS, ii, p. 26).

§ 1. Vinaya-Piṭaka, Mahā-vagga, Khandhaka II, iii.

[1] Then as the Blessed One was alone and quiet a reflection arose in his mind thus: 'What now if I were to sanction that the precepts<sup>4</sup> taught by me to the mendicant brothers should be their Pātimokkha rules for recital<sup>5</sup> (pātimokkh-uddesaṃ).' . . . [2] Then the Blessed One, having arisen in the evening from his quiet [contemplation] . . . instructed the mendicant brothers saying: ' . . . I sanction the reciting of Pātimokkha rules (pātimokkham).'

[1] Then at that time the Blessed One in different methods<sup>6</sup> addressed a discourse on the rules (vinaya-katham) to the mendicant brothers, spoke in praise (vaṇṇam)<sup>7</sup> of the rules, spoke in praise of mastery of the rules, and spoke again and again in praise of the venerable Upāli.<sup>8</sup> Then the mendicant brothers [said to one another]: 'The Blessed One . . . speaks in praise of Upāli. Come, friends, let us attain mastery of the rules under the venerable Upāli.' Thereupon many mendicant brothers attained mastery of the rules under the venerable Upāli.

§ 3. Culla-vagga, XI, 9.

Then the venerable Ānanda<sup>9</sup> spoke thus to the Elders (there):<sup>10</sup> 'The Blessed One, revered sirs, at the time of his death<sup>11</sup> said thus to me: "If it so wishes, Ānanda, let the assembly (saṅgho) when I have passed away abolish the minor<sup>12</sup> precepts (sikkhāpadāni)."' <sup>13</sup> 'Didst thou, friend Ānanda, ask the Blessed One: "Which then, revered sir, are the minor precepts?"' 'I did not ask, revered sirs. . . .' Thereupon some mendicant brothers said thus: 'Except the four Pārājikāni<sup>14</sup> rules, the remaining precepts are minor.' Some mendicant brothers said thus: 'Except the four Pārājikāni and the thirteen Samghādisese<sup>1</sup> rules, the remaining precepts are minor.' Some said: 'Except the four Pārājikāni, the thirteen Samghādisese, and the two Aniyate<sup>2</sup> rules, the rest are minor.' Some said: 'Except the Pārājikāni, Samghādisese, Aniyate and the thirty Nissaggiye Pācittiye<sup>3</sup> rules, the rest are minor.' Some said: 'Except the Pārājikāni, Samghādisese, Aniyate, Nissaggiye Pācittiye and the ninety-two Pācittiye<sup>4</sup> rules, the rest are minor.' Some said: 'Except the Pārājikāni, Samghādisese, Aniyate, Nissaggiye Pācittiye, the ninety-two Pācittiye and the four Pāṭidesaniye<sup>5</sup> rules the rest are minor.'

<sup>11</sup> This passage from the well-known account of the First General Council, held at Rājagaha soon after the death of the Buddha, appears both reasonable and probable, whether the narrative (in CV xi; Ch. 23 b § 7 [7] n) of this Council was written at the same time as or before or after the account (in CV xii) of the Second Council, held a hundred years after the First Council. Naturally it does not settle which precise texts were then approved, but these can scarcely have contained what was contrary to the teaching and instructions of the Founder. Ap. H 3, Note.

Then the venerable Mahākassapa directed the assembly; saying: 'Let the assembly, friends, hear me. . . . If it please the assembly, that which was not ordained [by the Blessed One] let the assembly not ordain, and that which was ordained let it not cut off; let it remain devoted to the precepts as they were ordained. This is the proposal (ñatti).<sup>6</sup> . . . To whomsoever this does not seem good, let him speak. That which was not ordained [by the Blessed One] the assembly does not ordain, and that which was ordained it does not cut off; it remains devoted to the precepts as they were ordained. This seems good to the assembly. . . . Thus I take it.'

<sup>4</sup> The fourfold procedure comprised a statement of the proposal or motion and its submission to the meeting three times. When the proposal was submitted only once the procedure was called twofold (see SBE, xiii, p. 169; MV ix. iii. 3). Ch. 8 d § 1 [3]; see also Ch. 8 e (Constitution).

[3] The venerable Upasena Vaṅgantaputta,<sup>5</sup> when of one year's [standing], conferred the Upasampadā-ordination on [a pupil who thus became] his associate (saddhī-vihārikam).<sup>6</sup> . . . 'I am of two years [standing], Blessed One,' he replied. 'And of how many years is this brother (who is with thee)?' 'Of one year, Blessed One.' 'What is this brother to thee?' 'My associate, Blessed One.' The Blessed Buddha rebuked<sup>8</sup> him: ' . . . How canst thou, foolish man, who shouldst be exhorted and admonished by others, think of exhorting and admonishing another? . . . The admission-ordination must not be conferred,' he said, 'by [a Bhikkhu who has standing] of less than ten years<sup>9</sup> (ūna-dasa-vassena).'

[5] 'Revered sir,' they replied, 'our thoughts (dhammā)<sup>9</sup> are rooted in the Blessed One, have the Blessed One as leader, take refuge in the Blessed One. Indeed, revered sir, whatever may seem right to the Blessed One is the answer to this question. Whatever they hear from the Blessed One the mendicant brothers will keep in mind.' [6] Then the Blessed One waved his hand in the air and said: 'Just as this hand<sup>10</sup> in the air is not attached<sup>11</sup> or caught or bound, even so, mendicant brothers, among the folk the mind (cittam) of a Bhikkhu whenever he approaches the folk is not attached or caught or bound. § 2. Sutta-Piṭaka, Khuddaka-Nikāya, Sutta-Nipāta,<sup>10</sup> Culla-vagga 14 (Dhammika-Sutta).<sup>11</sup>

So was it heard by me: At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvathī, in Jetavana,<sup>12</sup> in the park of Anāthapiṇḍika. Then the follower (upāsaka)<sup>13</sup> Dhammika,<sup>14</sup> together with five hundred [other] followers, went to Bhagavat, and having gone to Bhagavat and saluted him, he sat down apart; sitting down apart the follower Dhammika addressed Bhagavat in stanzas:

<sup>2</sup> This term suggests that the reporter or later reviser of the Sutta has slightly altered the Teacher's words, doubtless out of respect, and thereby has diminished the selflessness of its tone. Cp. Ch. 5 a § 10 [171] n; Ch. 5 b § 4 [17] n; Ch. 6 b § 2 [4]; Ap. B c § 5 [7] n.

Here it is precisely stated that the Dhamma is not dogmatic or traditionary but rationalistic and practical, and this statement can hardly have intended the great hypothesis of transmigration or Karma (IN 2; Ap. <sup>10</sup> Ap. A 1 a (Khudda Nikāya). The Sutta-Nipāta verses are in tone less purely altruistic, less communal and social, more individualist, ascetic and tolerant of wonders, of spirits and of gods, and so more Hindu (IN 8) than the mass of the Sermons in the first four Nikāyas. They form the 5th Book of the 5th Nikāya and show signs of being later in date than the Sermons generally.

It is not clear whether monks dwelling in Vihāras are included or only lay householders, but conventionally the former were 'houseless' (Ch. 8 d § 2 (3), vihāra). Buddha's reply avoids any comparison of status and by no means reserves salvation to the ascetic (Ap. C b, Note).

Sutta-Piṭaka, Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 77 (Mahā-Sakuludāyi-Sutta)

One of the most beautiful sayings in the Canon typifies the supreme virtue of kindness or mettā (Ap. F 1 b) by mother-love, the foundation of all love in the world: 'As a mother at the risk of her life watches over her own child, her only child, so also let everyone cultivate a boundless (friendly) mind towards all beings' (Sutta-Nipāta, Metta-Sutta, SBE, x, p. 25).

i. Body

§ 2. [2] Breathing. And how does the Bhikkhu live as regards the body,<sup>4</sup> contemplating the body? Here (idha) . . .<sup>5</sup> he trains himself (sikkhati),<sup>6</sup> thinking: 'I will exhale<sup>7</sup> understanding all the body. . . . I will inhale understanding all the body. . . . I will exhale tranquillizing the body-compound<sup>8</sup> (kāya-saṃkhāraṃ). . . . I will inhale tranquillizing the body-compound<sup>9</sup> . . .<sup>9</sup> and lives independent (a-nissito)<sup>10</sup> and grasps at (upādiyati)<sup>11</sup> nothing in the world. Thus, mendicant brothers, a Bhikkhu lives as regards the body, contemplating the body.

[3] Postures. And further a Bhikkhu, either walking<sup>12</sup> . . . or standing . . . or sitting . . . or reclining . . . or however his body is disposed, so comprehends it. He lives as regards the body contemplating that which has by nature an origin<sup>13</sup> . . . contemplating that which is by nature perishable<sup>14</sup> . . . and then his meditation (sati) on the existence of the body is extended up to the measure of knowledge,<sup>15</sup> up to the measure of reflexion.<sup>16</sup> . . .

'There is in this body the element of earth, the element of water, the element of fire, the element of air.' . . .<sup>1</sup> So he lives as regards the body, contemplating it either in respect of himself or in respect of what is outside himself<sup>2</sup> or in respect both of himself and of what is outside himself. . . .

[7-10] Cemeteries. . . .<sup>3</sup> [So] he lives independent and grasps at nothing in the world. Thus, mendicant brothers, a Bhikkhu lives as regards the body, contemplating the body.

ii. Sensations

§ 3. [11] And how does the Bhikkhu live as regards the sensations,<sup>4</sup> contemplating the sensations? Here a Bhikkhu feeling a pleasant . . . a painful . . . an indifferent<sup>5</sup> . . .<sup>6</sup> sensation understands the . . . sensation felt by him. So he lives as regards the sensations, contemplating them either in respect of himself or in respect of what is outside himself. . . . He lives as regards the sensations contemplating that which has by nature an origin . . . contemplating that which is by nature perishable. . . . [So] he lives independent and grasps at nothing in the world. Thus, mendicant brothers, a Bhikkhu lives as regards the sensations, contemplating the sensations.

iii. Mind

§ 4. [12] And how does the Bhikkhu live as regards the mind (citte),<sup>7</sup> contemplating the mind? Here a Bhikkhu understands a desirous mind as a desirous mind and a mind without desire as a mind without desire . . .<sup>8</sup> a liberated mind as a liberated mind and an unliberated<sup>9</sup> (a-vimuttam) mind as an unliberated mind. . . . He lives as regards the mind contemplating that which has by nature an origin . . . contemplating that which is by nature perishable. . . . Thus, mendicant brothers, a Bhikkhu lives as regards the mind, contemplating the mind.

iv. Phenomena or objects of thought

§ 5. [13] Five Obstacles. And how does the Bhikkhu live as regards phenomena<sup>10</sup> (dhammesu), contemplating phenomena? Here

<sup>8</sup> Omitting mention of hatred and delusion (which with desire constitute the Three Fires; Ap. D a § 10) and other characteristics of the mind, as in Ap. I b § 3 [7 (x)].

the bond [between them] having been abandoned does not arise in the future. . . . He lives as regards phenomena, contemplating that which has by nature an origin . . . contemplating that which is by nature perishable. . . .

. . .<sup>5</sup> And what is death (maranam)?<sup>6</sup> The departure (cuti) of such and such living-beings, from such and such a group of living-beings—parting, breaking up, disappearance,<sup>7</sup> dying (maccu), death, decease (kāla-kiriya), the breaking<sup>8</sup> up (bhedo) of the aggregations, the casting away of the corpse—this is called death.

And what is a wish which one does not fulfil and which is sorrowful? In beings subject by nature to earthly-existence (jāti-dhammānam)<sup>9</sup> . . . to decay, disease, death, grief . . . there arises a wish thus: 'Oh that we were not subject by nature to earthly-existence . . . and oh that earthly-existence, decay, disease, death, grief . . . did not come to us!' But this cannot be attained by wishing. . .

And where, mendicant brothers, does this craving arise; where does it enter in? That which is dear and delightful to men (loke),<sup>14</sup> there this craving arises; there it enters in. What is dear and delightful to men? The eye is dear and delightful to men; there this craving arises, there it enters in; the ear . . . nose . . . tongue . . . body . . . mind (mano).<sup>15</sup> . . .<sup>16</sup>

<sup>13</sup> The commentarial explanation does not mention these three terms, which therefore may be an interpolation, or may be regarded as part of the commentary; Ch. 5 b § 6. In Buddha's mouth the last phrase might mean (1) craving to be rid of the realities of life, and (2) craving for the joys of heaven.

sounds . . . odours . . . tastes . . . tangible things . . . things that are thought<sup>1</sup> are dear and delightful to men; there this craving arises, there it enters in. This is called the Noble Truth as to the Origin of Sorrow.

§ 12. [20] Cessation of Sorrow. And what is the Noble Truth as to the Cessation of Sorrow? It is the cessation of this very craving, so that no remnant or trace of it remains—its abandonment, its rejection, liberation from it, detachment from it.

And where, mendicant brothers, is this craving abandoned<sup>2</sup> (pahīyati); where does it cease? That which is dear and delightful to men, there this craving is abandoned; there it ceases. What is dear and delightful to men? The eye . . . ear . . . nose . . . tongue . . . body . . . mind. . . .

(1) And what is right outlook? Knowledge (ñāṇam)<sup>4</sup> as to sorrow, as to the origin of sorrow, as to the cessation of sorrow, as to the road leading to the cessation of sorrow. . . .

(2) And what is right will? The will to [practise] renunciation,<sup>5</sup> no ill-will,<sup>6</sup> harmlessness.<sup>7</sup> . . .

(3) And what is right speech? Abstinence<sup>8</sup> from false-speaking, from malicious speech,<sup>9</sup> from harsh speech, from frivolous talk. . . .

mind (cittam), makes effort, so that evil and unrighteous qualities<sup>1</sup> not having arisen<sup>2</sup> may not arise, [or] . . . having arisen may be abandoned [and] . . . that righteous qualities not having arisen may arise, [and] . . . having arisen may . . . have full development.<sup>3</sup> . . .

This, mendicant brothers, is called the Noble Truth as to the road leading to the Cessation of Sorrow.

So he lives as regards phenomena, contemplating them either in respect of himself or in respect of what is outside himself, or in respect both of himself and of what is outside himself. . . . Thus a Bhikkhu lives as regards phenomena, contemplating phenomena. . . .<sup>14</sup>

The three parts of the triple knowledge there correspond with the fourth, fifth, and sixth abhiññā (Ap. The simplex knowledge (ñānaṃ) of emancipation in Majjh. 26 (Ch. 4 § 16) grows in time into the threefold vijjā of Majjh. 36 and thence into the sixfold abhiññā of the present passage and elsewhere (IN 6, Canon); and at the same time liberation from the passions and isolation of selfishness grows into emancipation from future re-birth.

RĀJAGAHA AND SĀVATTHI: THE TWO CENTRES; SAKYAN CONVERTS; THE CHIEF DISCIPLES; THE GREAT TOURS

§ 2. Then he built along the road [from Rājagaha to Sāvattihi], forty-five leagues<sup>9</sup> in length, rest-houses (vihāre)<sup>10</sup> at the cost of 100,000 [pieces] each. Then he bought the Jeta Grove<sup>11</sup> by spreading out eighteen koṭis of gold [pieces]<sup>12</sup> (atthārāsa-hiraṇṇa-koṭihi) and had a new building<sup>13</sup> constructed there. In the middle he made a perfumed abode (gandha-kutim)<sup>14</sup> for the tenfold [Sage]<sup>15</sup> (dasa-balassa), and round it he built separately placed dwellings for eighty chief elders<sup>16</sup> (mahā-therānaṃ), and other lodgings such as long halls with single or Having thus built a pleasant dwelling-place in a fair spot at the cost of eighteen koṭis, he sent word to the tenfold [Sage] asking him to come.

§ 3. The Teacher (satthā), hearing the words of the messenger, departed from Rājagaha attended by a great multitude of mendicant brothers and in due course reached the city of Sāvattthi. Then the great merchant (mahā-seṭṭhī) decorated the vihāra and on the day of the Leader's arrival at the Jeta-vana . . .<sup>5</sup> [JN, p. 93] he himself wearing freshly washed garments, with five hundred merchants also wearing freshly washed garments went out to meet the Blessed One. The Blessed One . . . entered the Jetavana. Then Anāthapiṇḍika asked: 'How, revered sir (bhante), must I proceed as to this vihāra?' He replied 'Present this vihāra, householder, to the mendicant community, present and future.'<sup>6</sup> And the great merchant said 'It is well (sādhū), revered sir', and having brought a golden pitcher and poured water<sup>7</sup> over the hand of the tenfold [Sage], dedicated the vihāra saying 'I present<sup>8</sup> this Jetavana vihāra to the mendicant community, present and future, from the four quarters<sup>9</sup> [of the world].' <sup>16</sup> According to the Burmese tradition (Int. § 89 n; Ch. 10 d § 1 n) recorded in Bigandet's Legend of Gaudama the Buddha of the Burmese (1866), p. 197, the death of Siddhodana took place in the fifth year after the Enlightenment. 'In the 4th year Gautama . . . crossing the Ganges into Wesālī, lives for a time in the Mahāvana grove. Whilst there he hears of a quarrel between the Sākya and the Koliyans about the water in the boundary river Kohāna (Int. § 136; Ch. 13 c § 9, 529; Ch. 13 d, Koliyans) and, flying to Kapilavastu through the air (Int. § 94, iii), he reconciles the two clans, and then returns to Mahāvana, and prepares to spend the rainy season there. 5th year: In the middle of vas, however, he hears of the illness of Siddhodana, and again returns to Kapilavastu, and is present at the death of his father, then ninety-seven years old, at sunrise of Saturday, the full-moon day of the month of August in the year of the Eetzana era, 107. After comforting his relatives, and carrying out the cremation of the body with due ceremony, Gautama returns to the Kutagāra Vihāra at Mahāvana. He is there followed by his father's widow, Prājāpatī, Yasodharā, and other Sākya and Koliyan ladies, who earnestly ask to be allowed to take the vows (Ch. 12 b § 2; Ch. 13 c § 12 [1]). He is very unwilling to admit them to the Order, but at last yields to the earnest advocacy of Ānanda', RDB, p. 70. For Ānanda's conversion see § 3 [4] below. For other dates see Ch. 21 § 7 [25] n.

A 1 b (8). The commentary on the Theragāthā (cclvi, cclx) states that he was the son of Amitodana, who was the father of Mahānāma and Anuruddha and paternal uncle of Gotama. According to the Sanskrit Mahavastu, ii. 157, he was the son of Mrigī, i.e. Kisa Gotami (Ch. 2 § 2; ThB, p. 54 n). Tradition places his conversion in the fifth or in the first year of Gotama's ministry (Rh.D's article Devadatta in ERE; ThB, p. 123 n). He became Gotama's personal attendant in the 20th year (Ch. 10 d § 1 n; Ap. A 2 b, Note). After Buddha's death the Sakyan party apparently put forward Ānanda's claim to the leadership: Ch. 11 d § 7 n; see also Ch. 14 d § 8 [1]; Ch. 15 b § 15 [12]; Ch. 18 f § 1; Ch. 23 a; Ch. 23 b § 4.

D a § 8), i.e. the delusion of Self, scepticism, and reliance on customary formalities or rites. All ten Bonds are developments of the Three Fires (Ap. D a § 10), which in turn arise from an analysis of Craving (Ap. D a, Tanhā).

‘[1] This, mendicant brothers, was the foremost<sup>3</sup> of my disciples (sāvakaṇaṃ), (i) who became Bhikkhus (bhikkhūnaṃ)—

- (1) of long standing (rattaññūnaṃ)<sup>4</sup>—Añña-Koṇḍañña;<sup>5</sup>
- (2) having great insight (mahā-paññānaṃ)<sup>6</sup>—Sāriputta;<sup>7</sup>
- (3) having [spiritual] power (iddhi-mantānaṃ)<sup>8</sup>—Mahā-Moggallāna;<sup>9</sup>
- (4) practising the Dhutanga-precepts<sup>10</sup> (dhuta-vādānaṃ)—Mahā-Kassapa;<sup>11</sup>

<sup>7</sup> Ch. 7 a §§ 18 [1], 23; Ch. 11 d § 4 n; Ch. 14 c § 2 [1] n; Ch. 15 a § 8; Ch. 15 b § 5 [1]; Ch. 18 e § 2 [2]; Ap. H 4 b § 2; Ap. I b § 3 n. The Theragāthā anthology assigns Song cclxi to Sāriputta. The commentary on the same states that he was born in the Magadhan township of the Upatissas and was the son of Rūpasāri the Brāhmanī; see Mrs. Rhys Davids’s Psalms of the Brethren, PTS, 1913.

<sup>9</sup> Ch. 7 a §§ 16, 18 [1], 23; Ch. 14 c § 2 [1] n; Ch. 15 a § 8. Theragāthā, cclxiii; the commentary states that he was born in the Magadhan township of the Kolitas and was the son of Moggali the Brāhmanī. ‘Mahā-’ distinguishes the older among two or more persons of the same name; Ch. 18 b § 4 [78] n.

- (5) having divine vision (dibba-cakkhukāṇaṃ)<sup>1</sup>—Anuruddha;<sup>2</sup>
- (6) of high family (uccā-kulikāṇaṃ)<sup>3</sup>—Bhaddiya,<sup>4</sup> son of Kālī-godhā;<sup>5</sup>
- (7) with sweet voice<sup>6</sup> (manju-ssarāṇaṃ)—Lakuṇṭaka-Bhaddiya;<sup>7</sup>
- (8) with lion-roar<sup>8</sup> (siha-nādikāṇaṃ)—Piṇḍola-Bhāradvāja;<sup>9</sup>
- (9) discoursing on the Law (dhamma-kathikāṇaṃ)<sup>10</sup>—Puṇṇa<sup>11</sup> the son of Mantānī;
- (10) analysing the meaning<sup>12</sup> (atthaṃ vibhajantāṇaṃ) of a concise speech in detail—Mahā-Kaccāna;<sup>13</sup>

- (12) strong and skilled in mind<sup>16</sup>—Culla-Panthaka;
- (13) strong and skilled in perception<sup>17</sup>—Mahā-Panthaka;<sup>18</sup>
- (14) living remote<sup>19</sup>—Subhūti;<sup>20</sup>
- (15) worthy of donations<sup>21</sup> (dakkhineyyāṇaṃ)—Subhūti;
- (16) dwelling in forests (araññikāṇaṃ)<sup>22</sup>—Revata Khadiravaniya;<sup>23</sup>
- (17) practising meditation (jhāyīṇaṃ)<sup>24</sup>—Kaṇkhā-Revata;<sup>25</sup>

Sutta 8 (Kassapa-sihanāda-S.), appears to be a different person; he is mentioned also in Sam. Nik. (ii, pp. 19–22; iv, pp. 300–2). Members of the Brāhmaṇ clan were known also in Kosala; Ch. 14 f § 8.

<sup>6</sup> Ch. 12 b § 2 [2], [3]. The verses declaring her aññā (perception, understanding; Ch. 5 c § 7 [31]) appear in Therīgāthā, v; the commentary thereon states that she was born at Devadaha, in the family of Suppabuddha whose family name was Gotama, and that she was the younger sister of Māyā (Ch. 1 § 3).

<sup>4</sup> The name does not occur again in the first four Nikāyas or in Vin. Piṭ. It is given to the wife of Gotama in the Buddhavaṃsa (Ap. A 2 b, Note). Kaccāna is said to have been the name of her ancestor (Cp. Ch. 12 b § 2 [2] n). For a discussion of the whole subject see ThB, p. 110. In the Therīgāthā no sacred song is assigned to her.

<sup>6</sup> Gotamī the slender; Ch. 2 § 2. In the Sagātha-vagga of Sam. Nik. (i, pp. 129–30) Kisā-Gotamī and Māra (Ap. G 2 b) address each other in verse. Therīgāthā, lxiii; 'Lean Gotamī' Mrs. Rhys Davids, Psalms of the Sisters. The beautiful story of how Buddha taught Kisā-Gotamī to control her grief for the death of her little son is found in the Therīgāthā commentary, which states that she was born at Sāvattthi. <sup>1</sup> Or, givers of [mutual] pleasure. See (62) above. For manāpa cp. (28) above, and Ch. 21 § 12 [48].

<sup>2</sup> Ugga of Vesālī in the Fives of Ang. Nik. (iii, pp. 49–51; Ap. F 1 b § 7) whilst bestowing gifts quotes Buddha's phrase 'Who grants a kindness receives a kindness to himself, Manāpa-dāyī labhate manāpam' (Int. § 113; Ap. F 1 a; cp. Ch. 8 h § 1 [7]). He is also the subject of a discourse in the Eights (Ang. Nik. iv, pp. 208–12). Ch. 12.

<sup>7</sup> Like the other nine laymen here mentioned he is included in the longer list of commended lay-followers in the Sixes of Ang. Nik. (iii, p. 451). Ambaṭṭha is a family name; Sutta 3 of Digha-Nik. is called after a youth of this family (Ch. 13 c § 10 [9]; cp. Ch. 14 d § 4 [2] n).

<sup>8</sup> Perhaps, having brilliant personality. Puggala means 'person' (Ap. E b § 2; Ap. G 1 a § 3, 3), and later came to mean 'self' or 'soul' (A. B. Keith, Buddhist Philosophy, pp. 81–4). Jīvaka can scarcely have accepted the doctrine of a permanent soul (Ap. E a, saṃkhārā), but certainly was a believer in individual exertion (Ap. E c ii) and in the care of persons.

<sup>9</sup> The great physician; Ap. G 2 c § 3 (i). He is frequently mentioned in MV and CV, and is a leading personage in Digha-Nik. 2; Majjh. 55 is called after him, and he is the interlocutor in a discourse on the virtues of a layman in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (iv, p. 222).

These contain an ethical summary of the faith in the form of questions and answers resembling those in the Devatā-samyutta of *Sam. Doubtless the necessity of providing a permanent president at this great centre had become evident (Ch. 6 b, n). The commentators assign to the 20th year the conversion of the robber Angulimāla (Majjh. 86, Ch. 18 c § 1; Int. § 189, robber bands) and his meeting with the Kosalan king Pasenadi (Int. § 169, i). To this year also is assigned the appointment of Ānanda as Buddha's personal attendant (Ch. 10 b § 3 [4]; Ap. A 2 b, 68). He succeeded Sāgata (Ch. 8 j § 6 [4]), Meghiya (Ch. 16 d § 2), and the disobedient Nāgasamāla (Uddāna, viii, 7; see ThB, p. 122), and others, including Upavāna (Ch. 13 c § 24 n; Sam. Nik., i, p. 174), Nāgita (Ch. 12 c § 4 [2]), and Cundaka (Ch. 22 a § 8). If it is rightly assumed that Ānanda's verses in the Theragāthā (1039) were composed after Buddha's death the difficulty regarding his being 'twenty-five years a learner' seems to disappear (Ch. 10 c, 32).

a. KINGDOM AND SUB-KINGDOM; THE EASTERN CLANS OF THE MIDDLE-LAND<sup>4</sup> AND BORDERS

§ 1. Sutta-Piṭaka, Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 26.

[PTS, i, p. 166] 'Pursuing the good<sup>5</sup> (kim-kusala-gavesi), seeking the supreme path of tranquillity, I journeyed by stages among the Magadhas (Magadhesu), and came to Uruvela<sup>6</sup> the army-township. [p. 167] There I saw . . . a fair grove (vana-saṇḍam),<sup>7</sup> and a clear-flowing river,<sup>8</sup> delightful and easy of approach (sū-patitṭham),<sup>9</sup> and finally a village in which to beg food. . . . There I settled, here being everything needed for effort.'

If the great devotee (mahā-saṃaṇo)<sup>15</sup> should perform a marvel of power (iddhi-pāṭihāriyam)<sup>16</sup> before the multitude his gain and honour would increase. . . . So now the great devotee must not come to-morrow.' And the Blessed One understood the reflection in the mind of Uruvela-Kassapa. . . .

[16] This thought came to the Māgadhan king Seniya Bimbisāra.<sup>6</sup> . . . 'Where now should the Blessed One stay, not too far from the town and not too near, suitable for coming and going, approachable for people having business with him, by day not crowded, by night free from noise, undisturbed, solitary, fit for rest away from men, suited for retirement? [17] . . . There is our park, the Veḷuvana<sup>7</sup> (Veḷuvanam uyyanam). . . ' [18] Then the Māgadhan king Seniya Bimbisāra having taken a golden pitcher made a gift to the Blessed One [by pouring out water], saying 'Revered sir, I give this Veḷuvana park to the mendicant-community headed by the Buddha.'

§ 3. Jātaka Commentary, Introduction (Nidāna-kathā).

<sup>1</sup> Int. § 125; Ch. 8 l § 4 [2] n. Discourses are occasionally introduced vaguely by 'Rājagaha connexion (Rājagaha-midānam)', or, 'At Rājagaha' (Sam. Nik., PTS, i, pp. 54, 108); cp. Ch. 14 b § 7 [1]; Ch. 18 e § 1 n. In MV specific mention is made of Rājagaha on approximately 28 occasions and of Sāvattthi on 21; in the CV the figures are approximately 15 and 27; in the rest of Vin. Piṭ. 31 and 40 (Ap. A 1, Canon). Of the 34 Suttas of the Dīgha-Nik. six are placed in Rājagaha and five in Sāvattthi, whilst the long narrative known as the MPS (DN 16) opens at Rājagaha and mentions Sāvattthi only in a list of cities. In Majjh. Nik. Rājagaha is the scene of only 22 discourses, whilst Sāvattthi is the scene of 76, the total number being 152. In Sam. Nik. mention of Rājagaha is made on about 37 occasions, and of Sāvattthi on some 112 occasions; the similar figures for Ang. Nik. being 28 and 58. The first General Council was held at Rājagaha. It is possible that one of the causes of dissension at Vesālī at the time of the second General Council (Int. §§ 56, 57) was the introduction of this mass of Sāvattthi literature, some of which, such as the very lengthy poetical Sagātha-vagga of Sam. Nik. is of a markedly dubious character. Cp. Ch. 10 a § 4 n; Ap. B c, Note (Nidānas).

Ch. 16 a § 1 (vana-saṇḍa); and the Veḷuvana at Kimbilā (Ch. 16 d § 7 [1]) and at Kajangalā (Ch. 16 d § 8 [1]). Here mainly was worked out the elaborate constitution of the Saṃgha; Ch. 8.

[p. 92] He returned to Rājagaha, together with the company of mendicant brothers, and stayed in the Sita-Grove (Sita-vane).<sup>1</sup>

[1] . . . The Bhikkhus then were dwelling here and there. . . .<sup>2</sup>
[2] And at that time the great merchant of Rājagaha went early to his pleasure-ground and saw the Bhikkhus . . . and spoke to them thus: 'If, revered sirs, I were to cause dwellings (vihāre) to be made, would you stay in my dwellings?' . . . The Bhikkhus approached the Blessed One . . . and said ' . . . How now, revered sir, must we proceed?' . . . 'I sanction,' he said, 'five shelters (lenāni)—rest-house,<sup>3</sup> hut, storied-house, house with sloped roof and cave.'

[1] . . . Anāthapiṇḍika the householder<sup>4</sup> went to Rājagaha. . . .
[2] Then the great merchant (seṭṭhi) of Rājagaha . . . said to him: ' . . . The Saṅgha headed by the Buddha is invited by me for to-morrow. . . . To-morrow early, householder, thou shalt approach and see the Blessed One.' . . . [3] Then [at dawn] Anāthapiṇḍika the householder approached the Sītavana-gate (Sītavana-dvāram)<sup>5</sup> . . .<sup>6</sup> and went out from the town . . . [4] and approached the Sītavana. . . . The Blessed One as dawn drew near was walking to and fro in the open air. . . .<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Int. § 130; Ch. 7 b § 6; see §§ 5, 12 below. It is apparent that the Sītavana was at a considerable distance from the Vulture-peak, since the Buddha miraculously transported himself between the two places (MV, v. i. 14, 17; Ch. 8 j § 6, and Int. § 94, iii). The city-gate leading to it was called after its name (Ch. 10 a § 6 [3]). The spot included the Snake's Pool (Int. § 129), and apparently a cemetery (KM, p. 28). The texts suggest that it was on the southern slope of the range north-west of the old city.

<sup>4</sup> Ch. 10 a § 6 [3]; cp. Ch. 14 f § 1 [209] n. See § 3 above. If the scene is the old city the walls may have consisted of a palisade as found on the site of Pāṭaliputta, supported by an earthen rampart as on the site of Bimbisāra's palace-fortress, together with the core of large boulders still in place on portions of the site of old Rājagaha; Int. § 136.

<sup>5</sup> Omitting the statement that the gates were opened for him by non-human beings. Thus the Seṭṭhi's house, in which Anāthapiṇḍika was lodging, was within the city-walls. If 'Rājagaha' is to be taken strictly the Seṭṭhi's house was in the new city.

<sup>8</sup> Or, Squirrels' Feeding-ground; Int. § 126. Kalandakanivāpa was perhaps a tract possibly equivalent to the Veluvana, or possibly including it; cp. Ch. 12 c § 3 [237] n; Ch. 22 b § 1 (Grove); also Ch. 19 b § 3 [8] n. The locatives are not necessarily in apposition; cp. Ch. 16 d § 5 [1]; Ch. 18 b § 3 [1]; Ch. 21 § 20.

[1] . . . The Blessed One stayed at Rājagaha in the Veḷuvana<sup>8</sup> at Kalanda-kanivapa.<sup>9</sup> [2] And at that time the venerable Lakkhaṇa<sup>10</sup> and the venerable Mahā-Moggallāna<sup>11</sup> were staying [elsewhere] on the Gijjhakūṭa<sup>12</sup> hill. . . . [5] And the venerable Mahā-Moggallāna [and the venerable Lakkhaṇa] descended from the Gijjhakūṭa hill . . .<sup>13</sup> [7] and went begging for food in Rājagaha. And after their meal<sup>14</sup> having returned from their begging-round<sup>15</sup> they drew near to where the Blessed One was, and . . . having exchanged greetings with the Blessed One seated themselves at one side. The range of hills immediately north of the old city of Rājagaha is divided into two parts by a pass through which a stream runs northward to join the Ganges (Int. § 121 n). One of these was the Vulture-peak and upon its slope was situated the Veḷuvana Garden. The texts seem to favour the conclusion that the Vulture-peak was the eastern part of the range.

Piṭ.* ii, p. 193, Devadatta; D. ii, p. 72, &c.) and above the Wanderers' Garden at Moranivāpa (see § 9 below), which was within the walls of the city. Whether the aspect was north or south the texts do not make sure.

<sup>14</sup> The text states that Upasena had overcome all egoism, selfishness, and inclination to pride, ahaṃkāra-mamaṃkāra-mānāmusaya (Ap. E a ii § 4, 1; Ap. E c i § 7 [3]; see § 17 n below; also Ch. 15 b § 9 [10] n, and Ch. 12 a § 7 [228] n), and any thought that the body or faculties (indriyāṃ) were 'I' or 'mine' (Ch. 5 c § 2 [42]; see Int. § 3, non-egoism). Then the body of the venerable Upasena there dissolved as if it were a handful of chaff.

<sup>7</sup> The first four prohibitions (Ap. H 2 c) and the fault of acquisitiveness (cp. Ch. 9 c § 3 [3], cājoles; Ap. H 3 b § 2 [3], covetousness; Ap. H 4 a § 3 [2], covetousness) are then specified.

<sup>8</sup> To the previous five points are now added disregard for the Buddha, for the Dhamma, for the Saṅgha, and for the training (sikkhā; Ch. 8 d § 5 [1]; Ap. H 1 § 3); cp. Ch. 12 a § 6 [2] n. These four points have the appearance of a monkish addition to make up the required number of the nine vices (Ap. F 2 n).

<sup>10</sup> Int. § 130. Also Sam. Nik. (PTS) v, 233. This may have been near the foot of the northern slope.

The commentary on Theragāthā, cclix, states that he was Sāriputta's sister's son. (Mrs. Rhys Davids's Psalms of the Brethren, pp. 341-2.)

<sup>14</sup> Int. § 30; Ch. 7 a § 16 (month), § 20 (dhamma-cakkhu). Sāriputta now attains liberation from the 'taints' on realizing the transience of all sensations. Dighanakha acquires the clear vision of the Law (dhamma-cakkhu) and becomes a lay-disciple (Ch. 8 l). Here liberation from sinful desires is a higher stage than clear vision.

d. VISITS TO MINOR PLACES IN THE MAGADHA COUNTRY.
ADMISSION OF MAHĀ-KASSAPA

and hereafter by succeeding generations (Ap. B b § 1, hereafter). Sutta 135 states that men depend for their condition of life on their own action (kamma-ssakā sattā) and on other forms of kamma (Ap. B a); but with dubious additions to the original theory (cp. Mrs. Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 129).

<sup>2</sup> The Southern Mountain or, more correctly, mountainous region (see § 2 below; Int. § 132). Visits to Dakkhināgiri by Gotama are mentioned also in MV, i. liii; by Sāriputta in Majjh. 97 (PTS, ii, p. 184); by Sāriputta and Moggallāna in Ang. Nik. (iv, p. 63); by Ānanda in Saṃ. Nik. (ii, p. 217); and by Purāṇa in CV, xi. i. 11. The phrase 'touring' (cārikaṃ caramāno) is used in some of these passages, showing that the region was extensive.

<sup>7</sup> 'Tillage'. The narrative is repeated word for word in the Sutta-Nipāta (SBE, x, p. 11) with the addition of a miracle (IN 8 b) and of a concluding statement that Bhāradvāja became an Arahāt, plainly intended to heighten the effect (IN 6, Canon).

Thou also, devotee, shouldst plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown shouldst eat.' [7] 'I too, Brāhman, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown I eat.' [8] 'Truly we do not see the respected Gotama's (bhoto Gotamassa)<sup>1</sup> yoke, or plough, or ploughshare, or goad, or oxen.' . . .<sup>2</sup> [9] The Brāhman farmer addressed the Blessed One in verse:<sup>3</sup>

'A ploughman (kassako) thou declarest thyself; and yet I do not see thy tillage (kasim).

Questioned as a ploughman explain how we should understand this tillage.'

§ 1. Madhurattha-vilāsini<sup>5</sup> (commentary on the Buddha-vamṣa), Introduction.

... How [did he spend] the first rainy season? ... Having started the wheel of the Law at Isipatana ... he spent it near Benāres at Isipatana in the deer-park. [He spent] the second near Rājagaha ... and there also the third and fourth rainy seasons; [he spent] the fifth near Vesāli in the Mahā-vana, in the Kūṭāgāra Hall.<sup>6</sup>

I announce the annihilation of the many evil thoughts opposed to good . . . and I teach contempt<sup>1</sup> of unrighteous action. . . . I teach contempt of approach to the many evil thoughts opposed to good. . . . I teach dissolution<sup>2</sup> [in the sense of the destruction] of desire, of enmity, of delusion . . . and I teach [penance in the sense] that all evil thoughts opposed to good, all unrighteous actions by deed, by word, and by thought, are to be burnt away.<sup>3</sup> . . . And in what way may one speaking rightly say of me "The devotee Gotama is unfixed (a-pagabbho)<sup>4</sup>? . . . For the Tathāgata<sup>5</sup> return to birth hereafter and to re-existence<sup>6</sup> is abandoned,<sup>7</sup> made like an up-rooted up-torn palm-tree, made non-existent, not able to arise in the future." In this way one speaking rightly may say of me "The devotee Gotama is unfixed; he teaches a law of unfixedness<sup>8</sup> and instructs his disciples in it." And in what way may one speaking rightly say of me "The devotee Gotama is confident<sup>9</sup> (assatto) . . . ?" <sup>6</sup> Punabbhav-ābhiniḥbatti; Ch. 4 § 16.

<sup>9</sup> The Nigaṇṭhas evidently claimed to be kiriya-vādā, jegucchi, tapassī and assatthā, and regarded Gotama as a non-believer in Karma or retribution, a denier of the future state, a believer of the dissolution of the soul and a doubter or sceptic (IN 1, transmigration). He taught, however, the transience of individuality (Ap. E a) and the divinity of virtue (Ap. C b § 4, brahmacariya; Ap. F 2 b, brahma-vihāra). The Nigaṇṭhas taught a dogmatic metaphysic and accused Gotama of agnosticism. Gotama, however, claims as much certainty as his opponents.

The 'unclothed' ascetics may have included Jains of the Dig-ambara (sky-clad or naked) sect, but this is not stated in the text (see Ch. 12 a, Jains). Cp. Ch. 13 a § 4 [1] (ājīvaka).

<sup>15</sup> Omitting a passage in which Gotama is represented somewhat improbably as condemning his own weakness in admitting women to the Order against his better judgement whilst on the other hand disclosing no case against their admission save that women are physically unable to repel robbers, and such reasons as may be gathered from comparisons in which they are likened to mildew and rust in fields of rice and sugarcane (Int. § 189, land). It may be observed that these comparisons are altogether inconsistent with the final simile in which the 'eight rules' are likened to an embankment prudently built to prevent a pond from overflowing. One may suspect that the passage so uncomplimentary to women and to Buddha's action in admitting them to ordination was added by later followers less liberally inclined than the Founder (IN 6, Canon). At the same time if Gotama hesitated before admitting them, and judged that special restrictions were necessary, it may have been because of the tenderness in their nature which inclines them to personal adoration or bhakti (Ap. G 2 c, Note), very marked in Hinduism but eliminated from his creed. The unwillingness to admit women to the Order, here attributed to Gotama, conflicts very markedly with the passage in the MPS, iii, 7, in which

Ānanda,' he said, 'should build an embankment to a great pond to prevent the water from overflowing, even so have I providently appointed for mendicant-sisters eight rules which throughout life must not be transgressed.'

Gotama is represented as declaring to Māra that he will not die until he has established the brethren and sisters, laymen, and laywomen, in the Doctrine (SBB, iii, p. 112). The omitted passage includes a statement that had women not been admitted the 'good doctrine would have lasted a thousand years, whereas after their admission it would endure no longer than five hundred years'. The terms of this prophecy suggest that it may have been made after the event (Int. § 95; Ch. 22 b § 24 n). The real causes of the decay of the Good Doctrine (saddhamma) are discussed in Ang. Nik. (iii, pp. 247, 338; iv, p. 84).

Gotama may have said this of mankind in general (cp. Ap. B a § 2 [8]), not of individuals. Only thus would the statement be logical, or even accordant with the Milinda-pañha (Ap. B b § 1). The Jains taught the end of Karma through penance (Ch. 9 c § 1 [93]); Gotama did not merely substitute for penance the Truths. He replaced, at least for his times, the egoistic karma doctrine by the monistic and altruistic an-atta creed (Int. § 3), though the persistent ego-centred doctrine re-entered and returned to power. The obvious and even materialistic egoism of the later Mahāyāna school caused a second reaction which led to the subtler quietism of idealistic Mahāyānism (Ap. D b).

The MV is the more consistent account, but is not necessarily therefore the earlier. Both accounts plainly are compilations (IN 6, Canon). <sup>19</sup> The greater part of the rest of this chapter (Bhāṇavāra iii) of the MPS, in which Buddha promises Māra that he will die shortly and then blames Ānanda (Ch. 21 § 12 n [41]) for having failed earlier to persuade him to live for the rest of the age (kappa), is evidently a comparatively late addition to the narrative (Ch. 11 c § 25 [43] n; and IN 6, Canon), which it delays and greatly confuses. Its intention plainly is to explain the Buddha's mortality away by a monkish exegesis on his plain statement that to die is natural to him as to all (SBE, xi, p. 59). The earlier portion of the passage is found also in Samyutta li of Sam. Nik. (v, pp. 259-63), and somewhat more extensively in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (iv, pp. 308-13). § 3. Dīgha-Nikāya, Sutta 33 (Sangīti-S.).

Varied derivations of the name Sakya are offered incidentally. It seems likely that these historical hypotheses were part of the most ancient commentary on the Canon (Int. § 21). Okkāka is called Ikshvāku king of Sāketa (or of Sāvathī; ThB, p. 10) in Prakrit legends (Int. § 159 n; cp. § 15 (18) n below). Buddhaghosha's commentary states that in a previous birth Gotama was Kapila the Brāhman, after whom Kapilavatthu was named (ThB, p. 8; Int. § 135), and that the Koliyans (Ch. 13 d) were descended from King Rāma of Benāres and the eldest daughter of Okkāka (ThB, p. 9).

Blessed One instructed the young [Brāhman] Ambaṭṭha saying: 'Then what thinkest thou, Ambaṭṭha? In this regard (idha)<sup>1</sup> if a Kshatriya young man<sup>2</sup> should dwell with a Brāhman maiden and in consequence of their union a son should be born, now would that son . . . receive either seat or water<sup>3</sup> among the Brāhmins?' 'He would receive them Gotama.' 'Now would the Brāhmins let him partake of funeral-repast<sup>4</sup> (saddhe) or rice-dish<sup>5</sup> (thāli-pāke) or sacrifice<sup>6</sup> (yaññe) or oblation<sup>7</sup> (pāhune)?' 'They would let him partake, Gotama.' 'Now would the Brāhmins let him recite the sacred-texts<sup>8</sup> (mante) or not?' 'They would let him recite them.' 'Now among the women would [the door] be closed<sup>9</sup> (āvaṭaṇ) to him, or open?' 'It would be open to him.' 'Now would the Kshatriyas consecrate (abhisinceyyum) him with the Kshatriya anointment<sup>10</sup> (Khattiya-ābhisekena)?' 'Not so indeed, Gotama.' 'Wherefore?' 'On account of his mother, Gotama, he is not admitted<sup>11</sup> (an-uppanno).' [25] ' . . . In this regard if a Brāhman young man<sup>12</sup> should dwell with a Kshatriya maiden and . . . a son should be born, would that son . . . receive either a seat or water among the Brāhmins?' 'He would.' . . . 'Now would the Kshatriyas consecrate him with the Kshatriya anointment?' 'Not so.' 'Wherefore?' 'On account of his father, Gotama, he is not admitted.' The present discourse is said to have been delivered in the 15th year of the ministry (Ch. 10 d § 1), and to the same year is assigned a miracle (Int. § 94, iii) destroying Suprabuddha, Rājā of the Kolis (RDB, p. 73; KM, p. 36), who is held by late tradition or commentarial ingenuity (Int. § 14) to have been the father of Yasodhara, Gotama's wife (Ch. 1 § 8; Ch. 13 d, n and § 2 n).

The place is 4 miles within the Nepalese border northward of the British Indian district of Basti and is a little westward of the Tilar River (see A. C. Woolner, Asoka, 1924, p. xvi). The pillar was discovered here evidently in situ and its position seems to decide the approximate situation of Kapilavatthu; see Ch. 13 c (ii). Fa-hien and Hsüen-tsung, the Chinese travellers, evidently were shown a different site, perhaps more suited to the details of later poetic legendary history.

<sup>7</sup> The Rāja gives many 'memorable' reasons (dharmma-cetiyyāni) why he shows such signs of respect and affection, one of these being that the Blessed One is like himself a Kshatriya (Int. § 185) and a Kosalan (see § 8 above), and 80 years of age. If the age is stated correctly then the dialogue must have taken place in the last year of Gotama's life (Ch. 21 § 7; Ch. 22 b § 16 [27]) but the Sutta has a somewhat fanciful air.

On their quarrel over the river see Ch. 10 b § 1 (5th vassa) n and Brethren, p. 93. Gotama's mother (see § 2 below) and wife (Ch. 13 c § 14 [91] n) are said to have been and probably were daughters of Koliyan Rājas.

<sup>11</sup> Ch. 1 § 3; Ch. 13 d, n. Commentarial speculation has made Mahā-Māyā a daughter of Añjana or Suprabuddha the elder, a son of Devadaha of Koli; see RDB, p. 52, where authorities are cited. The same authorities make the younger Yasodharā a daughter of Suprabuddha the younger or Daṇḍapāni (Ch. 13 c § 14 [91] n, § 18). Other and equally speculative commentators make Mahā-Māyā a daughter of Añjana, son of Devadaha the Sakya, whose township also called Devadaha, was in the Sakyan territory (see ThB, pp. 24-5). Cp. Psalms of the Sisters, p. 88. For the close association of Sākiyans and Koliyans in Devadaha see Brethren, p. 77 (Rakkhita).

Between the two cities there is a pleasure park of sāl-trees, called the Lumbini Grove (Lumbini-vanam),<sup>3</sup> belonging to the inhabitants of both towns. . . . Her attendants bearing her entered the Grove. Having reached the foot of a noble sāl-tree she wished to take hold of one of its branches. . . . She stretched out her hand and took hold of the branch; and at that moment her pains began. . . . Thus grasping the branch of the sāl-tree, and standing, she was delivered. . . . It is perhaps the same as Rāmāgāma of the Koliyans; Int. § 166 (5) and Ch. 22 c § 9 (5). The fact that it is called a town of the Sakyas may show only the dominance of the latter; cp. § 1. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Māra-samyutta (Sam. 4), Sutta 10 (Rajja). (PTS, i, p. 116.)

a. KOSALA; GOVERNMENT AND INSTITUTIONS; PUBLIC AFFAIRS

§ 1. Sutta-Piṭaka, Anguttara-Nikāya, Dassaka-nipāta (the Tens), Sutta 29. (PTS, v, p. 59.)

§ 2. Dīgha-Nikāya, Sutta 6 (Mahāli-S.).<sup>5</sup>

[1] . . . The Blessed One was staying at Vesālī in the Mahāvana. . . . At that time many Brāhmins,<sup>6</sup> who were Kosalan and Māgadhan envoys,<sup>7</sup> were dwelling at Vesālī for some business . . . [2] and they proceeded to the Mahāvana . . . and exchanged courtesies with the Blessed One. . . .

§ 3. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 86 (Aṅgulimāla-S.).<sup>8</sup>

[PTS, ii, p. 101.] . . . 'The Māgadhan King Seniya Bimbisāra<sup>9</sup> has no quarrel with me, nor [have] the Licchavis of Vesālī, nor other rival rulers,'<sup>10</sup> said the Kosalan King Pasenadi;<sup>11</sup> 'but there is in the land acquired by me a robber, Aṅgulimāla<sup>12</sup> by name. . . .'

§ 4. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 9 (Yañña). (PTS, i, pp. 75-6.)

<sup>4</sup> Int. § 169 (i). See below §§ 3, 4, 5; Ch. 14 d § 5; Ch. 14 e §§ 1 [3], 3; Ch. 14 f § 12; Ch. 18 c §§ 1 [97], 2 [8]. 'The whole of the Third Samyutta [Kindred Sayings, i, pp. 93-127] consisting of twenty-five anecdotes, each with a moral bias, is devoted to him [Pasenadi]. And there are about an equal number of references to him in other parts of the literature', RDBI, p. 8. There are in the first four Nikāyas but six Suttas (in the Dīgha and Majjh. Nik.) which mention the Māgadhan King Bimbisāra and ten mentioning his successor and deposer Ajātasattu; whilst Pasenadi's son and successor and deposer, the Vidūdabha of the commentaries (Int. § 169, iii), is barely mentioned in the Nikāyas (Majjh. Nik., ii, pp. 110, 127). Cp. Ch. 3 § 1 n.

§ 5. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 10 (Bandhana). (PTS, i, pp. 76-7.)

Not that is the strong bond,<sup>9</sup> the wise declare,
Of iron, wood, or twisted rope contrived;
But that desire (apekkhā)<sup>10</sup> infatuate with treasures,<sup>11</sup> children, wives,<sup>12</sup>
'Tis that is the strong bond, the wise declare. . . .

§ 6. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 12 (Pañca-rājāno). (PTS, i, pp. 79-80.)

. . .<sup>13</sup> [2] Now at that time among five Rājas<sup>14</sup> (rājūnam), [who had met together] with Pasenadi at their head and who were familiar with, provided with, and surrounded by the five elements of the sense-pleasures (kāma-guṇehi)<sup>15</sup> this informal<sup>16</sup> (antarā) conversation arose: 'What is the peak (aggam)<sup>17</sup> of the sense-pleasures?'<sup>18</sup> [3] Then someone said 'Sights (rūpā)<sup>19</sup> are the peak of sense-pleasures'; someone said 'Sounds . . .' someone said 'Scents . . .' someone said 'Tastes . . .' someone said 'Contacts . . .' Whereupon those Rājas were unable to

<sup>14</sup> Ch. 8 b § 6 [b]. The word rāja means ruler and is by no means definite. The four minor Rājas here may have been the sons of Rājput families such as would consort with the king, whether closely related to him or not; cp. Int. § 159 (Rājput). This seems more likely than that they were members of council or governors of subordinate or of neighbouring states. Cp. Ch. 14 d § 2 (noble).

§ 7. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 93 (Assalāyana-S.).

[1] The Blessed One journeying gradually came to Sāvatti. There at Sāvatti the Blessed One stayed in the Jetavana, the garden of Anāthapiṇḍika.<sup>18</sup> . . . Then Anāthapiṇḍika . . . said: 'May the Blessed One, revered sir, consent to take with me a meal to-morrow together with the mendicant community?' The Blessed One accepted by his silence. . . . When the Blessed One having eaten had withdrawn his hand from the bowl Anāthapiṇḍika seated himself at one side . . . and spoke to the Blessed One thus: 'How, revered sir, must I proceed

<sup>16</sup> Assalāyana reluctantly encounters Gotama, admits all his points and is converted. In the discussion the order of mention remains Kshatriya, Brāhman, Vaisya, Sūdra, or Candāla (pp. 152, 157). It is stated that among the Yonas (Greeks) and Kambojas (Ch. 17 a [4] n) and their neighbours there are only two interchangeable classes; this dates the Sutta as late (IN 6, Canon). A telling argument is that members of all four castes go to hell or to heaven (sagga-loka), doubtless direct (Int. § 19, and Ch. 14 b § 8 [2] n) for otherwise the argument fails.

The Blessed One was staying . . . in Anāthapiṇḍika's Garden.<sup>6</sup> [2] And King Pasenadi the Kosalan (Pasenadi-kosalo)<sup>7</sup> came to where the Blessed One was . . . and having gone through the current phrases<sup>8</sup> of courtesy seated himself at one side [3] and . . . spoke thus: 'Is the respected (bhavam)<sup>9</sup> Gotama not [what is termed] "fully enlightened in the supreme<sup>10</sup> enlightenment"<sup>11</sup> (sammā-sambodhim)?' [4] 'If one indeed, Mahārāja,<sup>12</sup> speaking rightly could say of anyone that he is "fully enlightened in the supreme enlightenment" then he might rightly say it of me. . . .'<sup>13</sup> [5] 'Those religious teachers (samaṇa-brāhmaṇā)<sup>14</sup> indeed, O Gotama, [heads] of Orders, [heads] of companies, instructors of companies, well-known, renowned, founders of sects,<sup>15</sup> well thought of by the multitude, namely Pūrāṇa Kassapa,<sup>16</sup> Makkhali-Gosāla,<sup>17</sup> the Nigaṇṭha<sup>18</sup> Nātaputta, Sañjaya Belaṭṭhiputta,<sup>19</sup> Pakudha<sup>20</sup> Kaccāyana, Ajita Kesakambalin<sup>21</sup>—these indeed on being asked by me whether they were "fully enlightened . . ." did not acknowledge [the claim of]<sup>22</sup> being fully enlightened in the supreme enlightenment. For they himself become, just as the bamboo<sup>13</sup> [fades] into its seed.<sup>14</sup>

§ 5. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 3 (Rāja). (PTS, i, p. 71.)

Pasenadi begs to be admitted as a lay follower (Ch. 10 c, n) in the customary terms attributed to the first lay convert (Ch. 6 a § 7) and others. § 8. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 17 (Appamāda i). (PTS, i, p. 86.)

§ 1. Vinaya-Piṭaka, Culla-vagga VI, iv.

<sup>14</sup> Literally, previous residence: Ap. C a § 2 (423); Ap. I b § 3 [7] (x); and Ap. B (Samsāra). 'Previous births', SBB, iii, p. 4. This Suttanta does not treat of 're-birth' in the ordinary sense (Int. § 11). The six previous Buddhas whose remarkably similar lives are here sketched must not be confused with Bodhisattas (Ap. A 2 a, Note), that is to say previous births of one destined to become in time a Buddha. The predecessors of Buddha were not previous births of Gotama but manifestasaying 'It is thus'. [2] And the Blessed One . . . overheard their conversation . . .<sup>1</sup> and addressed them saying. . . [3] 'Do you wish, mendicant brothers, to hear from me a religious discourse connected with prior existence.' . . .<sup>2</sup>

§ 3. Dīgha-Nikāya, Suttanta 30 (Lakkhana-S.).

[1] . . . The Blessed One was staying at Sāvatti in the Jetavana,<sup>3</sup> Anāthapiṇḍika's garden. There the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: ' . . . There are, mendicant brothers, in a Great Man<sup>4</sup> (Mahāpurisassa) these thirty-two marks<sup>5</sup> of greatness with which endowed the Great Man has but two courses [possible]. If he lives the household life (agāraṃ)<sup>6</sup> he becomes an emperor (rājā cakkavatti),<sup>7</sup> the rightful king of right,<sup>8</sup> [lord] of the four points<sup>9</sup> . . . endowed with the seven jewels. . .<sup>10</sup> But if he goes forth<sup>11</sup> from the household to the houseless life he becomes a Saint supremely enlightened (araṇaṃ sammā-sambuddho),<sup>12</sup> manifest<sup>13</sup> in the world (loke).'
[2]. . .<sup>14</sup>

§ 4. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 2 (Sabb-āsava-S.).

[PTS, i, p. 6.] . . . The Blessed One was staying at Sāvatti in the Jetavana<sup>15</sup>. . . There the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers, saying: ' . . . [p. 7] I will show you, mendicant brothers, the tions of the universal power (Ap. G 2 a, Unity) which reveals itself in repetitions (Int. § 107, kappa). The naming of his predecessors was probably as alien to the mind of Gotama (Ap. E c i § 6 [8]) as was the idea of climbing through long ages towards the attainment of a supreme personal reward (Ap. C b § 9, attain).

<sup>10</sup> The Jewels (Ap. A 2 a, 4) are enumerated; the wheel, elephant, horse, gem, wife (īthi), banker (gahapati); Ch. 10 a § 1), and adviser (pari-nāyaka); cp. Int. § 172). Omitting a statement that he will have more than a thousand sons and will rule the earth (Ch. 15 a § 1 [35]) up to its ocean boundary.

way to control all the taints.<sup>1</sup> . . . Here the uninstructed ordinary<sup>2</sup> man unacquainted with the Noble without knowledge of the Noble Law (ariya-dhammassa)<sup>3</sup> . . . [p. 8] thinks incorrectly (ayoniso) thus: "Did I exist in time past,<sup>4</sup> or not? What was I in time past? How did I exist in time past? What having been did I become in time past? Shall I exist (bhavissāmi)<sup>5</sup> in time to come,<sup>6</sup> or not? What shall I be in time to come? How shall I exist in time to come? What having been shall I be in time to come?" And now as to the present time<sup>7</sup> he is in doubt about himself (ajjh-attam)<sup>8</sup> saying: "Do I exist, or not? What am I? How do I exist? Whence has this being (satto)<sup>9</sup> come? Whither will it go?"

(To him thus thinking incorrectly one or other of these six views<sup>10</sup> (ditthiṇaṃ) presents itself as true and firm: "I have a [permanent] self";<sup>11</sup> or "I have not a [permanent] self"; or "By the [permanent] self I perceive the [permanent] self (attānaṃ)"; or "By the [permanent] self I perceive the non-[permanent] self (an-attānaṃ)"; or "By the non-[permanent] self I perceive the [permanent] self"; or his view is "This my [permanent] self which speaks and feels and experiences the result (vipākam)<sup>12</sup> of good and bad deeds [committed] everywhere—this my [permanent] self, lasting (nicco),<sup>13</sup> constant, eternal, unchanging, will stand so eternally." This, mendicant brothers, is called theorizing,<sup>14</sup> [and is] a jungle,<sup>15</sup> a maze, a contortion, a writhing, a fetter.)

[2] There the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying:
' . . . [3] The eye,<sup>9</sup> mendicant brothers, is impermanent<sup>10</sup> (a-niccam); that which is impermanent is suffering; that which is suffering is without permanent-self<sup>11</sup> (an-attā); that which is without permanent-self is to be regarded with right insight<sup>12</sup> as it really is thus: "This is not mine,<sup>13</sup> I am not this, this is not my permanent-self." [4-8] The ear . . . nose . . . tongue . . . body . . . the mind (mano)<sup>14</sup> should be regarded thus. . . . [9] Regarding them thus an instructed disciple of the Noble [Law]<sup>15</sup> becomes indifferent<sup>16</sup> to the eye, and ear, and nose, and tongue, and body, and mind. Becoming indifferent he becomes free from desire; through non-desire<sup>17</sup> he is liberated,<sup>18</sup> when he is liberated there arises in him the knowledge "I am liberated". He knows: "Ended is individual-existence (jāti);<sup>19</sup> lived is the holy-life; done is what should be done; there is nothing [individual] beyond this state (n'āparam itthattāya)."<sup>20</sup>

<sup>3</sup> As in Ap. E c i § 7 [8], where the same discourse is delivered to Rāhula; the two discourses may have been similar in substance and edited into identity (IN 6, Canon). See Ch. 5 c § 3 [44].

<sup>9</sup> Ch. 7 a § 5 [2]. From the parallelism of the passages it would appear that the Aggregates or Khandhas (Ch. 5 c) are equivalent in general to the five physical senses and the mind.

<sup>20</sup> This climax here is reached through indifference to the five senses and the mind; elsewhere it is attained by the destruction of the Taints (Ch. 4 § 17), by indifference to the Khandhas (Ch. 5 c § 5), and by indifference to the organs of Sense and the mind and their objects (Ch. 7 a § 6 [4]). It seems clear that the culmination is reached not by the cessation of this personal existence at long last but by its disappearance when viewed with insight.

[1] The Blessed One was staying at Sāvatti. . . . And at that time about thirty Western (Pāṭheyyaka)<sup>9</sup> Bhikkhus . . . when the beginning of the rainy season was approaching, were unable to get to Sāvatti by the beginning of the rainy season and entered upon vassa<sup>10</sup> at Sāketa<sup>11</sup> on the way. B) and in the survival of individual existence (Int. § 12 n); it is stated that a wise man believing in these will gain the benefit of them if they exist (Int. § 12), and whether they exist or not he will surely gain the good opinion of other men. The outlook is for the most part individualistic, self-interested, and desirous, and may be attributed

Those religious teachers (samaṇa-brāhmaṇā)<sup>1</sup> who announce the theory that there is cessation of individual-existence altogether (atthi sabbaso bhava-nirodho)<sup>2</sup>—if the dictum of these religious teachers is true this position<sup>3</sup> is found, that in the present existence (ditṭhe va dhamme)<sup>4</sup> I should attain peace (parinibbāyissāmi).<sup>5</sup> As to those religious teachers who announce the theory that there is not cessation of individual-existence altogether—this theory of theirs is nigh to desire, nigh to bondage,<sup>6</sup> nigh to enjoyment,<sup>7</sup> nigh to clinging, nigh to grasping.<sup>8</sup> . . . One thus reckoning proceeds to develop indifference<sup>9</sup> [to the transient ego], non-desire, cessation<sup>10</sup> [of selfhood] . . .<sup>11</sup> [p. 413] When thus he perceives and understands . . . he knows that . . . there is nothing [individual] beyond this [existence] (n'āparam itthattāya).<sup>12</sup> . . .

THE LANDS OF THE KĀSIS AND VACCHAS; BENĀRES; DISSENSIONS IN KOSAMBI

<sup>3</sup> Discourse on the Great Governor (literally, Master of Cattle). Buddha is represented as saying that he himself in a former birth was the Brāhman Great Governor. The story, however, is not included in the Jātaka Birth-stories (Ap. F 1 a § 2; SBB, iii, p. 280 n); it appears with some differences in the Mahāvastu, the comparatively late Story of Buddha in Sanskrit (SBB, iii, p. 256). See Ch. 17 c [36] n.

<sup>4</sup> The heavenly minstrel (Gandhabba-putta, Ap. D c § 4). Pañcasikha appears to Buddha on the Vulture-peak (Int. § 128) and describes his visit to the heaven of the Thirty-three (Int. § 70) and recounts a story told there to the Thirty-three and to Sakka (Int. § 69) by Brahmā Sanam-kumāra (Int. § 93, ii), who assumes a visible form for the occasion.

<sup>10</sup> 'The king-makers', SBB, iii, p. 268. They may have had the right to veto or approve, and may have held a council for the purpose. See Int. § 162 (government); cp. Ch. 13 c § 15 (17).

<sup>13</sup> Omitting obscure terms as to northern and southern limits. As the eastern and western limits are set by the Kālingas on the east coast and the Soviras on the west coast but no northern or southern limits are indicated it may perhaps be taken that the omitted terms merely signify vague and immense extent.

G 1 c) in Rock Edict XIII expresses his remorse for his devastating conquest of the Kāliṅgas early in his reign (V. A. Smith's Asoka, 3rd ed., pp. 25, 185). In Majjh. 56 (i, p. 378) it is stated that the Kāliṅga forest (Kāliṅg-āraṇṇam) and similar wildernesses were made by 'mental wrath of Seers (Isinaṃ manopadosena)'; cp. Int. § 94 (v).

<sup>16</sup> The name by metathesis has become Benāres. The prose setting with its strange mythology is certainly of comparatively late date. The verses (Ap. A 2 a, Note) may possibly be earlier, but show signs of latter-day origin and seem to be rather a confused corruption than an earlier version of the stock list of sixteen (Ch. 11 a § 3 [17]) or the abbreviated list of ten clans (Ch. 12 e § 6). The verses in any case show the legendary fame of Benāres.

rājā)<sup>1</sup> called Brahmadatta.<sup>2</sup> . . . The king of Kosala (Kosala-rājā) was called Dīghīti<sup>3</sup> . . . and Brahmadatta the king of Kāśi having arrayed a fourfold<sup>4</sup> army went out against Dīghīti the king of Kosala. And Brahmadatta the king of Kāśi conquered and took over the army and transport and country (janapadam)<sup>5</sup> and treasury and storehouse of Dīghīti the king of Kosala. . . . And Dīghīti with his consort<sup>6</sup> abode in Benāres in a certain outlying quarter in a potter's house in concealment in the guise of a wandering-ascetic.<sup>7</sup> [4] . . .<sup>8</sup> [18] Then Brahmadatta the king of Kāśi having entered Benāres caused his intimate councillors (amacce-pārisajje)<sup>9</sup> to meet and spoke thus: 'If, sirs (bhane),<sup>10</sup> you should see the son of Dīghīti the king of Kosala, Prince Dīghāvu<sup>11</sup> (Dīghāvukumāram),<sup>12</sup> what would you do to him?' Some of them spoke thus: 'We, my lord (deva),<sup>13</sup> would cut off his hands'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his feet'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his hands and feet'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his ears'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his nose'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his ears and nose'; 'We, my lord, would cut off his head'.<sup>14</sup> 'This, sirs,' said he, 'is the son of Dīghīti the king of Kosala, Prince Dīghāvu; it is not permissible to do anything to him.' . . .<sup>15</sup> [91] Then . . .<sup>16</sup> [Prince Dīghāvu said] 'What, my lord, my father at the time of his death said, "[Look]<sup>17</sup> not long", signified "Do not keep enmity for long"; this indeed, my lord, my father at the time of his death said saying "Not long". What my father at the time of his death said, "Not short", signified "Do not be divided soon from friends"; this indeed, my lord, my father at the time of his death said saying "Not short". What my father at the time of his death said saying: "Not indeed, dear (tāta)<sup>18</sup> Dīghāvu, through enmity<sup>19</sup> are enmities appeased; but enmities, dear Dīghāvu, are appeased through non-enmity", signified . . . that my life now

<sup>8</sup> Dīghīti and his wife are betrayed at last to King Brahmadatta and executed. Their young son Dīghāvu escapes and secretly enters the king's service, becoming his lute-player (Int. § 190, arts) and charioteer. He drives the king to a lonely forest and there lulls him to sleep and draws his sword but refrains from slaying him. On the king's awaking the two forgive each other and swear mutual friendship.

<sup>4</sup> The scene is Sālavatikā (Int. § 149). The Brāhman Lohicca who has been endowed by King Pasenadi with a royal estate (Ch. 11 d § 10 [1], gift) entertains Buddha and maintains that one who has mastered a noble idea need not teach it. Buddha by examples convinces him. See Ch. 14 f § 10 [5].

The long rivalry of Kāsi and Kosala ended with the conquest of Kāsi by King Kamsa, known as 'the conqueror of Benāres' (RDBI, p. 25), before the time of Buddha. Sisunāga the ancestor of Bimbisāra and founder of the Magadhan kingdom (V. A. Smith, Oxford H. of I., pp. 45, 70) was apparently a fugitive from Benāres, possibly at this time; Int. § 158 (2).

The five recluses<sup>8</sup> (pañca pabbajitā), headed by Kondañña, begging alms of food through villages, towns, and royal cities,<sup>9</sup> met the Bodhisatta. . . .<sup>10</sup> And during six years, while he undertook the Great Effort, they remained with him. . . . Then the band of five mendicants thought 'He was not able even by the austerity of six years to reach all-knowledge (sabbāññutam). . . . What is he to us?' Then taking their robes and begging-bowls they left the Great One; and going eighteen leagues<sup>11</sup> away they entered Isipatana.<sup>12</sup>

B c § 5) and on what is elsewhere called 'dependent origination' (Ap. B c) tracing sorrow back to ignorance (avijjā) and individuality (saṃkhārā). The first of these two cruxes perhaps may be interpreted as meaning that individual life is real but delusory and is not as it appears. The second may be interpreted as meaning that within the fundamental unity (cp. Ap. G 2 a, Note, māyā) the parts acquire individuality and assume desirous selfhood which is the cause of all sorrow.

On the general principle that Canonical borrowers do not abbreviate but expand one may judge that Dīgha 6 borrowed from Dīgha 7 and Dīgha 2 from both; IN 6 (Canon).

<sup>11</sup> Sandaka quiets the noisy assemblage and invites Ānanda to be seated and to discourse on the tenets of his teacher. Ānanda specifies four theories opposed to the Teacher's doctrine: (i) the theory of non-existence (Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [23]), (ii) the theory that there is no evil or good (Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [17]), (iii) the theory of causeless evil and good (Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [20]), (iv) the theory of seven elements combined temporarily by predestination (Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [26]). Thereafter he explains the general outlook of the Buddhist convert and then the four Jhānas culminating in liberation from the Āsavas, as in Digha 2 (Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [33] n). Sandaka is convinced.

They are also mentioned together in the Sixes of Ang. Nik. (iii, p. 384) where Pūraṇa Kassapa (Int. § 179) is said to have classed them in the 'purest white' grade or the highest of the six orders reckoned by colours (Ch. 12 c § 11 [xxx. 3] n). The first two seem otherwise unknown.

'It is indeed not easy, Ānanda,' he replied, 'to make plain<sup>6</sup> (desetum) the Law to others. § 10. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 128 (Upakkilesa-S.).

'Not at any time through enmity<sup>10</sup> are enmities appeased here;
But they are appeased through non-enmity: this is an eternal law.

Those who break bones, those who take life, those who steal<sup>11</sup>

Plundering the realm—even among these accord is known.
Why amongst you should there be none?

<sup>1</sup> Khemaka in spite of his illness instructs the elders further on the origination and disappearance (Ch. 9 a § 6 [14]; Ap. F a ii § 4, 1; cp. Ch. 5 c § 7 [29], nirodha; also Ch. 4 § 10, cessation, and § 11, destruction) of the Khandhas and the gradual extinction of the notion 'I am (asmī-ti māno, asmī-ti chando, asmī-ti amuso).'

If one should find a true friend,<sup>1</sup> a comrade, firm in good,
With him one may go forth surmounting every ill with joy in thoughtfulness.

Should one not find a true friend, a comrade, firm in good,
One should go forth alone, even as a monarch<sup>2</sup> leaving his conquered realm, like a lone elephant<sup>3</sup> in solitude.

Better to go alone; there is no friendship with the foolish.

One should go forth alone and do no evil, carefree, like a lone elephant in solitude.<sup>4</sup>

And the Blessed One having uttered these verses standing then went on to the village of Bālaka the salt-maker (*yena Bālaka-loṇakāra-village. . . .<sup>6</sup> Then the Blessed One rose and went on to Pācīnavamṣa

simile of the lonely rhinoceros is used (SN, 35-75).

Majjh. 31 (Ch. 12 e § 10) except that the scene is transferred from the Vajjian country to a region farther westward.

<sup>13</sup> The subject of the subsequent conversation with the three disciples is different from that in Majjh. 31 though akin as it is to the same theme, namely the supreme comfort in the highest experience of contemplation (cp. Ch. 12 e § 10 n). In Majjh.
31 the disciples describe the four Jhānas (Ap. I a) and the succeeding stages of attainment (Ch. 3 § 4 [66]). In the present Sutta they speak of perceiving the aura (obhāsa) and vision (dassana) of forms. The latter Sutta seems to indicate a later stage of psychological theory. In the MV account (see § 11 [iii. 3] n below) the conversation is similar but shorter. The text does not extend Buddha's journey to Pārileyyayaka (see § 11 [iv. 6] below) as does the MV account. The gradual compilation of the story of the dissensions at Kosambi and Buddha's lonely exile is interesting (IN 6, Canon). The lonely elephant introduced as a simile in the verses above (see [154]) is not mentioned as a fact till § 11 [iv. 6] n below.

'Shall I not be, revered Ānanda, [as one] slain so long as the mendicant brothers do not even answer me, do not admonish me, do not teach me!' There upon Channa fell swooning. Then the venerable Channa . . . dwelling alone secluded . . . ere long realized for himself in the present life and abode in the supreme fulfilment of the holy life (brahmacariya-pariyosānam)<sup>5</sup> . . . and he perceived fully:<sup>6</sup> '[Separate] existence (jāti) is ended . . . there is no [individual state] beyond this state (nāparam itthattāya).'<sup>7</sup> . . .<sup>8</sup>

a. KURUS<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Int. § 158 (9). The Kuru-Pañcālā are included in the summary list of 10 clans mentioned in Digha 18 (Ch. 12 e § 6) and in the longer list of 16 clans in Ang. Nik. (iv, pp. 252, 256, 260). The comprehensive treatise called Mahāsatipatṭhāna-S. (Digha 22) and its shorter version called Satipatṭhāna-S. (Majjh. 10) are located at the Kuru township of Kammāssadhamma (Ch. 9 a, n). The 'northern Kurus' are mentioned along with the 'eastern Videhas' at Ang. Nik. v, p. 59.

<sup>12</sup> He became a believer (Ch. 10 c). It is improbable that he was the Māgandiya of Sam. Nik. iii, p. 12, and Sutta-Nipāta, 835-47, and of the imaginative commentaries (Int. § 14) on the latter and on Udāna, IV, 10 (see ThB, pp. 115-16).

<sup>17</sup> As in Ch. 11 e § 1 [2] and Ch. 11 f 1 [11], but without the involved reference to Māra, Brahmā, and other powers which appears to be a later touch; IN 6 (Canon).

<sup>18</sup> This rendering is perhaps too free, but if Gotama used the expression deva-mamussā it is not improbable that the phrase represented for him the relationship between the universal and the spirit cribbed, cabined, and confined for a time in the passing individual self; Ch. 6 b § 1 [1], and Ch. 4 § 18 [3].

Blessed One (buddho bhagavā ti). For that respected Gotama this couch is prepared.' 'An ill sight indeed we see, O Bhāradvāja, seeing the couch of this revered (bhoto) revolutionary<sup>1</sup> Gotama', said he. . . .<sup>2</sup> 'If indeed, O Bhāradvāja,' he said, 'we were to see this reverend Gotama face to face, face to face even would we say to him: "The devotee Gotama is a revolutionary." And wherefore? He pries so [critically] into our lore (sutte).<sup>3</sup> . . .<sup>4</sup>

§ 2. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 106 (Āṇaṇḍa-sappāya-S.).<sup>5</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Cp. Ap. A 1 a, Note (Sutta); and Ap. G 2 c § 1 (i), Vedic; also Int. § 178 (teachers); Ap. G 2 a, Note (Brāhman). 'Because our Scriptures say so', SBB, v, p. 354; 'Because it is on these lines that you criticize our tenets', SBB, v, p. 355.

<sup>4</sup> Buddha hears the conversation through his 'divine ear' (Int. § 94, iii; Ch. 14 c § 2 [2]; Ap. I b § 3 [7]; Cp. Ch. 16 d § 6 [4] n) and on returning addresses Māgandiya upon the control of the senses and sensuous thoughts (Ch. 7 a § 5 [2], eye). In an incongruous passage mention is made of Gotama's luxurious youth and his three mansions (Ch. 1 § 8), and earthly pleasures are compared unfavourably with those of heaven (sagga; Ap. C a § 2, 126) and of the company of the Thirty-three (Int. § 70) and of the divine nymphs (accharā; Int. § 93, vi) in the Grove of Gladness—ideas more suited to a later priesthood than to Buddha's selfless detachment (cp. Ap. C b § 9, heavenly life). Buddha concludes by saying that through the true Doctrine 'by oneself one will know and see . . . that with the cessation of grasping there is cessation of bhava (separate life), with the cessation of bhava there is cessation of jāti (the individual's life regarded as a unit), with the cessation of jāti cease [individualistic fears of] decay and death, grief, lamentation, sorrow, dejection, and despair'. Here the 12 steps of the causative process are intelligibly simplified and reduced to four (Ap. B c, Note; cp. Ch. 12 e § 7 [4] n). Māgandiya is convinced and enters the Order.

<sup>15</sup> Āṇaṇḍa is the same as āneja which is used in the Sāmaññaphala-S. (Digha-Nik. i, p. 76) in describing the fourth jhāna (Ap. 1 a § 1 [174]), as also in the Fives of Ang. Nik. (iii, pp. 93, 100) and further in the Fives of Ang. Nik. (ii, p. 184) in describing a stage higher than upekkhā, the fourth of the Brahma-beatitudes (Ap. F 2 b) there made to follow the four Jhānas. Āṇaṇḍa-samādhi (transcendent unperturbedness) is used in Sutta-Vibhanga (Vin. Pit. iii, p. 109). Cp. samādhi (Ch. 5 b § 4 [18]); upekkhā (Ch. 9 a § 13 [8] n); yoga-khema (Ch. 1 § 11 [163]).

[1] . . . The Blessed One was staying . . . [at] Kammāsadamma.<sup>7</sup>
[2] Then the venerable Ānanda<sup>8</sup> . . . [3] addressed the Blessed One thus: 'It is surprising, it is strange, revered sir! How profound, revered sir, is the causative-process<sup>9</sup> and its illumination how profound; yet to me it seems altogether clear.' 'Not so, Ānanda; not so, Ānanda. The causative-process indeed is profound and its illumination is profound. Through not understanding this law . . . mankind (paṇā)<sup>10</sup> cannot get . . . beyond wandering (samsāraṃ).<sup>11</sup> [5] In one who sees enjoyment in notions (dhammesu)<sup>12</sup> of grasping and abides therein craving increases.<sup>13</sup> Because of craving [there is] grasping;<sup>14</sup> because of grasping [there is] individual-existence; because of individual-existence [there is] earthly-existence (jāti); because of earthly existence arise decay-and-death, grief, lamentation, sorrow, dejection, and despair. Thus there is origination<sup>15</sup> of this whole aggregation of sorrow.' . . .<sup>16</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Ap. F 1 c [162] (upadhayo). These are personal possessions and the concomitant desires. They had not yet been transmuted into that metaphysical residue which germinated repeatedly in rebirths and which was an item of the Jain belief and was repudiated by Gotama (Ch. 9 c § 1 [93], outflow) but was too subtle to be resisted by his successors.

[1] . . . The Blessed One was staying . . . [at] Kammāsadhmma.<sup>4</sup> There the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers. . . .<sup>5</sup>
 [2] 'There are, mendicant brothers, these ten noble states<sup>6</sup> (ariya-vāsā) which the Noble<sup>7</sup> have kept and keep and will keep. What ten?

<sup>6</sup> Or, qualities of the faithful. The whole passage occurs with a few verbal differences in Digha 33 (Ch. 13 a § 3 [4] n) and Digha 34, and the introductory portion appears also as Sutta 19 of the Tens but without mention of place. The priority can scarcely be settled but the shortest form is probably the earliest; IN 6 (Canon). Cp. āriya-vasāmi in Ap. G 1 c § 1.

<sup>11</sup> This is defined later as sat-ārakkha, watchful of sati (self-knowledge; cp. Ch. 9 a § 1, satimā) that is mindful of the transience of individuality.

<sup>12</sup> It is explained that he deliberately pursues, he deliberately abides in, he deliberately avoids and deliberately rejects. Cp. the explanation of right activity in Digha 22, see Ch. 9 a § 13 [21] (6), development.

<sup>14</sup> It is explained later that he has abandoned the quests called kāma-esana and bhava-esana and has moderated that called brahmacariy-esana. These aims are termed 'wordly desires', 'rebirth', and 'religious life' in SBB, iv, p. 248, and 'longing for things sensual', 'longing for becoming', and 'longing for the brahma-life' in Gradual Sayings, v, p. 22. The last of these three is translated as 'the quest of . . . (problems connected with) the religious life' in SBB, iv, p. 209. They may be the three forms of tanhā censured in the second Truth (Ap. D a § 1). The 'noble Quest' is expounded in Majjh. 26 (Ap. F 1 c) and is the quest for brahmacariya of which the fulfilment is Nibbāna (Ch. 5 a § 10 [172]; Ch. 5 b § 4 [17]); thus the brahmacariya of the present text must mean something other than Nibbāna in this life and may mean the future rewards thereof.

<sup>6</sup> i.e. he understands the transience of the individual; cp. Ch. 13 c § 20 [7] (insight). It is explained that he is conscious that for him rāga, dosa, and moha, have been uprooted like a palm-tree stump, not to spring up in future; Ap. E a § 4 (5).

<sup>7</sup> The rest of the Discourse explains each of the ten points. This list of ten essential (IN 5 b) Āriyan characteristics makes no reference to rebirth (Int. § 19; IN 2). The Kammāssadhamma discourses as they give no support to the doctrine of rebirth are similarly unfavourable to animistic beliefs in Spirits (Int. § 93) or in marvels (Int. § 94). They may be used as a touchstone of early if not of the earliest doctrines accepted by those who were not laymen; cp. Int. § 48 (teachers).

<sup>19</sup> The story of Raṭṭhapāla follows in imaginative prose with moral verses (Ap. A 2 a, Note), the latter as in Theragāthā ccli and the former as in the commentarial introduction to the Theragāthā verses (Brethren, pp. 302-3). Raṭṭhapāla's parents at last consent to his becoming a monk, but later try to tempt him back to worldly pleasures and to household life, which is described in picturesque detail (Int. § 190, family). He retires to the deer-park (mig-ācira; cp. Ch. 5 a § 9, and Ch. 1 § 9 n) of the local Rāja—the Theragāthā prose improves the narrative by stating that he flew (Int. § 94, iv) to the park. There he informs the Rāja that with a wise self-interest he has abandoned worldly pleasures in order to avoid the pains of rebirth (Ap. B a, Karma). If reliance can be placed upon this Sutta, the Rāja was sole ruler of the Kurus; cp. Ch. 8 j § 2 (Rāja).

b. PAÑCĀLANS

§ 1. Dīgha-Nikāya, Sutta 18 (Janavasabha-S.).

[1] . . . The Blessed One was staying at Nāḍika.<sup>1</sup> . . . At that time the Blessed One explained regarding the followers in the folklands round about, who had died and passed on in rebirths—among the Kāsis and Kosalas, among the Vajjis and Mallas, among the Cetis and Vaṇsas, among the Kurus and Pañcālans<sup>2</sup> (Kuru-Pañcālesu), among the Macchas and Sūrasenas. . . .<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Int. § 158 (10); Ch. 12 e § 6 [1]; see § 2 n, below. Two branches of the Pañcālās are mentioned in earlier Indian literature (RDBI, pp. 27, 203) as occupying lands to the NE. and SE. of the Kurus, whose capital was Indraprastha in the neighbourhood of what is now Delhi. The northern branch extended from the Ganges to the Himālayas; the southern branch from the Ganges to the Jamna. The capital of the latter was Kanauj (Ch. 15 a § 12, ii, n). See ThB, pp. 13-14; Gradual Sayings, i, p. 192 n.

<sup>3</sup> This ancient list (Int. § 158; Ch. 17 a [4] n) seems to be of Kosalan origin and to comprise the clans coming within the Kosalan sphere of influence. Ānanda, who like Buddha was a Sakyan, is made somewhat strangely to plead for the inclusion of the trans-Gangetic clans of Magadha and Anga.

[6] Then the Blessed One addressed the venerable Visākha saying 'It is well (sādhū), it is well, Visākha. . . .'<sup>1</sup>

§ 1. Samyutta-Nikāya, Mahā-vagga, Sacca-samyutta (Sam. 56), Sutta 30 (Gavampati). (PTS, v, p. 436.)

<sup>2</sup> Int. § 154; Ch. 14 d § 8 [5]. Both in the shorter and longer stock lists of clans (Int. § 158 [7]; Ch. 12 e § 6 [1]) the Cetis are always associated with the Vamsas and it may be concluded that the territories of the two clans were adjacent. In § 3 below it is stated that Pācinavamsadāya was in the land of the Cetis and it is elsewhere made clear (Ch. 15 b § 11 [iv. 1]) that this place lay between Kosambi and Sāvattthi; it may be assumed therefore that the land of the Cetis was to the north of Kosambi, probably in the Doāb between the Ganges and the Jamna.

<sup>11</sup> Ch. 11 c § 6 [263]. He addresses the Cetis also in the Tens of Ang. Nik. (v, pp. 41, 157). See also Majjh. Nik. (i, p. 40); Sam. Nik. (v, p. 81). He is said to have been a younger brother of Sāriputta (Brethren, pp. 118-19). In MV, x. v. 6, CV, i. xviii. 1 (Ch. 16 d § 5 [1] n), and in the Sutta-vibhaṅga (Vin. Piṭ. iv, p. 66), as also in Majjh. Nik. (iii, p. 78) and Ang. Nik. (iii, p. 299), he is named in a recurring list of 10 or 11 foremost disciples (Ch. 10 c; Ch. 17 d § 2 [1] n; Ch. 18 b § 4 [78-9]), namely Sāriputta, Mahā-Moggallāna, Mahā-Kaccāna, Mahā-Koṭṭhita, Mahā-Kappina, Mahā-Cunda, Anuruddha, Revata, Upāli, Ānanda, and Rāhula—the list sometimes varying by the inclusion of Mahā-Kassapa or the exclusion of Upāli and Rāhula (Ch. 7 b § 7 [1]).

<sup>14</sup> Mahā-Cunda speaks of the dissension between those monks who value the intellectual understanding and following of the Law (dhamma-yogā) and those who rely on ecstatic meditation (jhāyī bhikkhū). The former seek for the fundamental (attha; Ap. C b § 10 [2]), the latter for the Immortal (amata; Ap. G 2 a § 6); it is implied that the two are the same. If Buddha himself had commended an elaborated Jhāna (Ap. I a, jhāna) this controversy could scarcely have arisen.

These five and four subsequent conditions appear also as 'helpful to enlightenment' in the first Sutta of the Nines (Gradual Sayings, iv, p. 236), where it is stated that they must be enumerated to those who inquire as to the faith (IN 5 b, Essentials), and where the scene is the Jetavana at Sāvattthi (Ch. 14 c) and the hearers are monks.

In Culla-vagga, i, xviii. 1, it is stated that Sāriputta and Moggallāna with a party of Elders (Ch. 16 c § 2 n) journeying among the Kāsīs (Kāśīsu; Ch. 15 a) arrived at Macchikasaṇḍa and were entertained by Citta there.

<sup>8</sup> See § 4 [3] above; Ch. 10 c (63); Ch. 17 d § 1 [2]; Culla-vagga, i. xviii. The ten Suttas forming this Samyutta all illustrate the merits of this famous householder. In the 8th Sutta he encounters the Nigaṇṭha Nātaputta (Int. § 179). In the 9th he asserts his ability to enter at will the four Trances (Ap. I a) and states that ‘it would not be wonderful if the Blessed One should say “There is no fetter binding Citta to bring him back to this world”’ (Ap. D c § 3 [15], an-āgāmin). Thus the possible spiritual equality of pious laymen to the monks is asserted (Ap. C b, Note). <sup>15</sup> In the udāna of this Vagga Suttas 27 and 28 are both entitled ‘mahāpañha’; the reference here appears to be to Sutta 27. The Catechism in Digha 33 is conducted by Sāriputta (Ch. 13 a § 3 n) with Buddha’s approval; in Digha 34 Sāriputta also puts questions and supplies the answers. Cp. Ap. G 1 b § 4 (dhammā).

<sup>17</sup> The nun states that though she has not heard the matter expounded by the Blessed One or the great masters she will attempt to explain how it appears to her. Her explanations correspond mostly but not completely with those attributed to Buddha in Sutta 27.

E a ii § 2)’. Digha 34 presents nine other ‘unities’. Sāriputta puts this question to Bhaddā before her conversion (Sisters, p. 66, where Vedāntic passages are cited).

... regarding the two"—this was thus said by the Blessed One. ... A mendicant brother rightly indifferent ... as to two things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what two? Name and form (nāma ca rūpe ca).<sup>1</sup> "... Regarding the three" ... A mendicant brother rightly indifferent ... as to three things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what three? The three feelings (vedanāsu).<sup>2</sup> [6] "... Regarding the four" ... A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind (su-bhāvita-citto)<sup>3</sup> ... as to four things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what four? The four earnest meditations.<sup>4</sup> [7] "... Regarding the five" ... A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind ... as to five things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what five? The five spiritual organs.<sup>5</sup> "... Regarding the six" ... A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind ... as to six things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what six? The six elements of deliverance.<sup>6</sup> "... Regarding the seven" ... A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind ... as to seven things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what seven? The seven parts of wisdom.<sup>7</sup> "... Regarding the eight" ... A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind ... as to eight things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what eight? The Āryan Eightfold Path.<sup>8</sup> [8] "... Regarding the nine." ... A mendicant brother rightly indifferent ... as to nine things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what nine? The nine abodes of beings (satt-āvāsesu).<sup>9</sup> [9]

<sup>4</sup> Satipatthānā. See Ap. G 1 b § 4, where other fours are enumerated. In Ap. G 2 a § 9 the four are defined as the Four Noble Truths. In Sutta 27 the four are explained as four nourishments (āhārā; see above, [4] one), elsewhere defined as relating to body, touch (senses), volition, and consciousness (Digha 33 and 34).

<sup>5</sup> Indriyāni; Ap. G 1 b § 4. In Sutta 27 the five things to be regarded indifferently are defined as the five grasping-aggregates (pañc'upādāna-kkhandhā) as in Ap. G 2 a § 9.

<sup>6</sup> Nissarāṇi dhātū. In Digha 33 and 34 these are defined as loving-kindness, pity, sympathy with joy, serenity (Ap. F 2 b [6]), unqualified liberation of mind, and the destruction of the conceit 'I am' (Ap. D b § 1). In Sutta 27 the six are called 'the six spheres in the self', as in Ap. G 2 a § 9.

<sup>7</sup> Ap. G 1 b § 4. In Sutta 27 the seven are defined as 'states (spheres) of consciousness, which in Digha 33 and 34 are explained as seven realms where conscious beings exist (Int. § 70 n; cp. [8] n, nine, below). The detailed description of these states suggests that these passages in Digha 33 and 34 and Sutta 27 of the present series are later in date than Sutta 28—on the principle that simpler forms tend to give way to rather than to succeed more complex and imaginative expositions (IN 6, Canon) and that ground apparently gained however delusively is rarely if ever abandoned in the Canon (Int. § 57).

<sup>8</sup> Ap. G 1 b § 4; Ap. G 2 a § 9. In Sutta 27 the eight (indifferent) things are defined as 'the eight worldly matters (loka-dhammā)'; these are explained in Digha 33 and 34 as gain and loss, repute and disrepute, blame and praise, pleasure and pain (cp. Ch. 19 b § 11 [7]; and Int. § 111, indifferent).

<sup>9</sup> Ap. G 2 a § 9 (nine). Sutta 27 gives the same answer. As defined under the Nines in Digha 33 and 34 these are abodes both of conscious and unconscious beings (cp. [7] n, seven, above; Ap. G 2 a § 9, unity), ending with the sphere of

"... Regarding the ten" . . . A mendicant brother rightly trained in mind . . . as to ten things makes an end of sorrow in this world. As to what ten? 'The ten good paths of action.'<sup>1</sup> . . .<sup>2</sup> neither perception nor yet non-perception (Ap. I a § 1 [175]. One is tempted to interpret these nine 'abodes' here less fancifully as the nine stages of meditation ('trance').

BEYOND THE JAMNA: A SUPPLEMENTARY CHAPTER REGIONS TO THE WEST, SOUTH-WEST AND NORTH-WEST OF THE RIVER JAMNA

a. THE LAST SIX CLANS

Sutta-Pitaka, Anguttara-Nikāya, Aṭṭhaka-nipāta (the Eights), Sutta 42. (PTS, iv, p. 251.)

<sup>11</sup> Int. § 155. They are always coupled with the Sūrasenas in the stock list of clans and with them constitute the last pair in the shorter list. The Macchas are not mentioned elsewhere in the first four Nikāyas or in Vin. Piṭ., and it would appear that Buddha did not visit their country. See RDBI, p. 27; ThB, p. 13.

<sup>16</sup> Int. § 158 (16); see RDBI, p. 28. These with the three preceding clans form the last two pairs in the longer stock list of clans and with them are excluded from the shorter list. Excepting this list and a brief passage at Majjh. Nik., ii, p. 149, they are not mentioned elsewhere in the first four Nikāyas or in Vin. Piṭ., and undoubtedly part of the Observance-day perfected [by the] eightfold [rules]. And why? Poor is human rule in comparison with divine happiness (dibba-sukham).<sup>1</sup> . . .<sup>2</sup>

§ 1. Sutta-Piṭaka, Anguttara-Nikāya, Catukka-nipāta (the Fours), Sutta 53. (PTS, ii, p. 57.)

§ 2. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 84 (Madhura-S.).

[PTS, ii, p. 83.] . . . The venerable Mahā-Kaccāna<sup>10</sup> stayed at they lay beyond the range of Buddha's wide journeyings. Their territory may have touched the Gandhāran frontier and not improbably was adjacent to the coast of what is now Sind. The Kambojas are mentioned in the Asokan Rock Edicts V and XIII (Smith, Asoka, pp. 168, 186; Woolner, Glossary, pp. 79, 126) with the Yonas (Ionians) and Gandhāras.

<sup>2</sup> The Discourse proceeds to state that a devout man or woman (Int. § 190, women) may attain after death the fellowship (sahavyatā, Ap. G 1 a § 8 [14]) of the Four Great Kings, the Thirty-three, the Yāma devas, the Tusita devas, the gods delighting in creation or lastly the gods who delight in the work of others (Int. § 70, sphere; Ch. 13 c § 21 [9] n). These and other particulars are an expansion of the word sagga (heaven; Int. § 33) in the verses which follow them (In 6, Canon). Cp. dibba-sukha above.

<sup>5</sup> Int. § 155; Ch. 15 a § 12 (ii) n; see § 2 below. The clan of which this was the capital is not mentioned. The proof of Buddha's visit to Madhura is by no means complete. In the Fives of Ang. Nik. (iii, p. 256), however, he is said to have remarked that the town suffered from five disadvantages, 'roughness, dust, savage dogs, Yakkhas in animal forms (Ch. 3 § 1, n), and scarcity of alms', and this may be taken as relevant evidence. The town grew to greatness at a much later period.

Madhurā<sup>1</sup> (Madhurāyaṃ) in the Gundā-vana.<sup>2</sup> And Rāja<sup>3</sup> Madhura (rājā Madhuro) the son of an Avanti princess (Avanti-putto)<sup>4</sup> heard [the news]: 'The devotee Kaccāna, sir (bho), is staying at Madhurā in the Gundā-vana. Now concerning the respected (bhavantam) Kaccāna the good report has gone forth: "He is wise, accomplished, intelligent, very learned (bahu-ssuto),<sup>5</sup> a brilliant preacher,<sup>6</sup> speaking readily on the good,<sup>7</sup> a venerable man (vuddho), a saint. It is good to look upon such saints."'<sup>8</sup> Then Rāja Madhura . . .<sup>9</sup> went to where the venerable Mahā-Kaccāna was and . . . [p. 84] seated at one side spoke thus: 'The Brāhmins,<sup>10</sup> O (bho) Kaccāna, say thus: "The Brāhmins are the highest caste<sup>11</sup> (settho vaṇṇo); [every] other caste is lower. The Brāhmins are the fair (sukko)<sup>12</sup> caste; [every] other caste is dark (kaṇho). The Brāhmins are pure (sujjhanti); not so the non-Brāhmins. The Brāhmins are the sons of Brahmā,<sup>13</sup> his own, born from his mouth,<sup>14</sup> Brahmā-born (Brahma-jā), Brahmā-created, Brahmā-heirs."<sup>15</sup> On this matter, respected Kaccāna, what sayest thou?' 'It is an [empty] clamour such as is [heard] in the [noisy] world, Mahārāja.<sup>16</sup> . . . If a Kshatriya is rich in treasure and grain, in silver and gold,<sup>17</sup> will [another] Kshatriya . . . a Brāhman . . . a Vaisya . . . a Sūdra (suddo) serve him, rising early, lying down late, doing any work, obliging,<sup>18</sup> pleasant spoken<sup>19</sup> . . .<sup>20</sup> [p. 89] Should a Kshatriya . . . Brāhman . . . Vaisya . . . Sūdra shave off his hair and beard and assume the yellow

<sup>15</sup> With the substitution of dhamma (Law) for brahma (cp. Ap. G 1 a § 8 [14] n) these last three phrases also are used of Buddha's true disciples.

<sup>20</sup> Kaccāna then asks whether the case would be similar if a Brāhman, Vaisya, or Sūdra became wealthy, and the Rāja assents. They agree that ill-doers irrespective of caste will be punished in hell (miraya; Ap. B a § 7) or other place of suffering; and that a well-doer of any caste will pass to bliss in heaven (sagga-loka); Ap. C a § 2 [126]). The Rāja further agrees that he would punish malefactors irrespective of their caste.

robes<sup>1</sup> and go forth from the household to the houseless life, abstaining from taking life,<sup>2</sup> from stealing, from falsehood, eating only once<sup>3</sup> a day . . . observing the good law—what wouldst thou do?’ ‘We<sup>4</sup> should salute him, O Kaccāna, and rise<sup>5</sup> and invite him to a seat and would honour him with robes. . . .’ ‘This being so, Mahārāja, are not these four castes exactly equal (sama-samā); or how does it seem to thee in this matter?’ ‘Assuredly, O Kaccāna, this being so these four castes are exactly equal; I see no difference between them in this matter [of status]. ### c. ASSAKAS

Mahissatī of the Avantis<sup>11</sup> and of the Sovīras Roruka; Mithilā too of the Videhas; Campā among the Aṅgas founded;
And Bārānasi of the Kāsis.<sup>12</sup> These were Govinda-founded.’ So
’tis said.

d. AVANTIS

§ 1. Sutta-Piṭaka, Samyutta-Nikāya, Salāyatana-vagga, Citta-saṃyutta (Sam. 41), Sutta 3 (Isidatto ii). (PTS, v, pp. 285–8.)

[1] At one time many elder mendicant brothers were staying at Macchikasaṇḍa<sup>13</sup> in the Wild-plum Grove. [2] And Citta<sup>14</sup> the householder went to where the elder mendicant brothers were . . . and having exchanged greetings with them sat down at one side. [3] . . .<sup>15</sup>

<sup>6</sup> The Rāja asks to be admitted as a lay disciple of the Blessed One, and on hearing of the latter's death begs to be made Kaccāna's disciple. With the death of the teacher changes in his unwritten doctrine were inevitable (IN 6, Canon).

<sup>15</sup> Citta asks what is the basis of the divergent notions about the eternity of the world, the infinity of the world, the identity of soul and body, and the existence of the Tathāgata after death (Ap. G 1 a, ii), and also of the 62 erroneous theories stated in the Brahmajāla (Ap. E c i § 2).

[10] Now the venerable Isidatta<sup>1</sup> was the junior of all in that assembly of mendicant brothers. [11] And the venerable Isidatta spoke thus to the venerable Elder [the Senior]: 'May I reply to the question of Citta the householder, revered (bhante)<sup>2</sup> Elder?' 'Do thou reply, friend Isidatta', he said. . . .<sup>3</sup> [14] 'The instructed disciple of the noble (ariya-sāvako)<sup>4</sup> . . . regards not body . . . sensation . . . perception . . . individual character (saṅkhāre)<sup>5</sup> . . . consciousness as the self (attato). Thus, householder, there is [for him] no false idea of individuality (sakkāya-ditṭhi).<sup>6</sup> [15] [Citta the householder approving said] 'Whence, revered sir, has the reverend<sup>7</sup> Isidatta come?' 'I come from Avanti<sup>8</sup> (Avantiyā), householder.' 'There is in Avanti, revered sir, a clansman (kulaputto)<sup>9</sup> named Isidatta, who is a friend of ours though we have not met<sup>10</sup> and who has retired<sup>11</sup> (from worldly life). Has the venerable [elder] met him?' . . .

§ 2. Vinaya-Piṭaka, Mahā-vagga, V, xiii.

Buddha makes special concessions to Bhikkhus living in outlying regions and distinction is made, possibly commentarily (Int. § 21), between these outlying parts or 'border countries' and the Middle-land as in Ch. 1 § 2. The scope of these backward outlying regions is suggestive.

I b § 4) reference is made to the famous ‘Gandhāran science (Gandhārī nāma vijjā)’ in association with miracles, which Gotama declares that he ‘dislikes, is ashamed of, and disapproves’. Except this and the longer stock list of clans (see a above) there is no mention of the Gandhārans in the first four Nikāyas or in Vin. Piṭ. The Gandhārans and Kambojans are mentioned as border tribes in the Emperor Asoka’s Edicts (Ap. G 1 c), but evidently were beyond the range of Gotama’s widest journeyings. The present passage though it has the authority of the Mahā-vagga of Vin. Piṭ. is clearly part of a commentarial addition (Int. § 21). The narrative preceding the passage is gossiping, prurient, and credulous and can scarcely be accepted as serious. Takkasilā and what is now the north-west frontier of India was evidently far beyond the range of Gotama’s travels. A statement that Pasenadi before his accession to the Kosalan kingdom was educated at Takkasilā is only commentarial (RDBI, p. 28; cp. Sam. Nik., Sam. iii, the Kosala or Pasenadi Saṃyutta; Int. § 137 n). Takkasilā is mentioned repeatedly in Brethren (pp. 136, 149, 201, 319) as an educational centre, but only in the commentarial prose. This once famous centre, the Taxila of Greek writers on India, has now been identified with a site about 20 miles north-west of Rawalpindi excavated by Sir J. Marshall (ThB, p. 164). It thus lay within the region generally called Gandhāra.

GOTAMA'S CONTINUOUS MINISTRY IN SĀVATTHI<sup>1</sup>

a. PERMANENT RESIDENCE IN SĀVATTHI; DEATH OF ANĀTHAPIṆḌIKA

Introduction (PTS, Buddhavaṃsa, Preface, p. ix).

... It is said that the Blessed One was for the first twenty years after the Enlightenment without a fixed residence; wheresoever he wished to go, there he went and stayed. Thereafter he stayed near Sāvatthi,<sup>3</sup> both at the Jetavana<sup>4</sup> Vihāra and at the Eastern Garden (Pubb-ārāme),<sup>5</sup> [living] upon regular contributions.<sup>6</sup>

§ 2. Sutta-Piṭaka, Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 143 (Anāthapiṇḍiko-vāda-S.)

A 2 b (68); see Dīgha 14 (SBB, iii, p. 7); ThB, pp. 122-3; A. Coomaraswamy, Buddha, p. 67. That Gotama toured periodically from this centre in spite of advancing age is probable; cp. E b § 3 [2] n, and Ap. G 2 c § 3, i [23]) including ether and mind (Ap. E c i § 4 [6] n, and Ch. 18 d § 1 [423]), or at the five Aggregates (Ap. E a, ii), or at the realms of infinite space, of infinite consciousness, of nothingness, of neither perception nor non-perception (Ap. I a § 1 [175]). The counsel is to transcend individuality and not to grasp at personal reward; cp. Ch. 13 c § 21 [18] (sakkāya); and Ap. G 1 b § 4.

I will not grasp at a world beyond (para-lokam),<sup>2</sup> nor shall my mind become dependent on a world beyond." . . . And thou must train thyself, householder, saying, "Anything seen, heard, perceived (mutam),<sup>3</sup> thought (viññātam), sought, investigated by the mind—that I will not grasp at nor shall my mind become dependent on that." Thus indeed, householder, must thou train thyself.' . . . Then the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Ānanda . . . having risen departed. And Anāthapiṇḍika the householder not long after . . . [p. 262] died. . . .<sup>4</sup> And Anāthapiṇḍika as a spirit (deva-putto)<sup>5</sup> when the night was far advanced came to the Blessed One in surpassing beauty illuminating<sup>6</sup> the whole Jeta Grove . . . and standing at one side addressed him in verses:<sup>7</sup>

'This friendly Jeta Grove,<sup>8</sup> haunt of the company of seers!
Abode of the Law's Lord, source of my happiness!
Labour and learning, law and duty, life's high way—
By this are mortals cleansed and not by birth or wealth.
Therefore he who is wise discerning his own goal (attham attano)<sup>9</sup>
Will ponder deep the Law; he thus and there is cleansed.
Like unto Sāriputta in insight, duty, calm—

Then rising from her seat, having saluted the Blessed One, and so moving as to keep her right side towards him<sup>5</sup> she departed. And her slave-girl came away forgetting the bundle. Instantly the slave-girl remembered she had forgotten it and had left it behind. . . . And the slave-girl went and fetched it. Visākhā paid the price herself;<sup>13</sup> and, putting ninety millions and a hundred thousand into a cart, she took the amount to the monastery. It is extracted from the Commentary on Dhammapada, verse 53, which is itself taken from the Visākhāyā Vatthu. Visākhā's story is given at great length, but it is more detailed than convincing. A shorter but similar history of Visākhā (Int. § 140) appears in Buddhaghosha's Commentary on the Digha-Nikāya (Digha 27). 'This is an example of one of the latest of the legends in the Commentaries. The whole of it is probably later than any of the references to Visākhā in the Vinaya', ThB, p. 106.

ling-place at the east gate for the congregation of the priests would be fitting.' . . . And Visākhā, with a joyous mind, bought a site for ninety millions, and with another ninety millions she began constructing a monastery.

. . . Now it was the custom of the Teacher, if he took alms at the house of Visākhā, to issue forth from the city by the south gate and [p. 476] lodge at Jetavana monastery.<sup>1</sup> If he took alms at the house of Anāthapiṇḍika, he would issue forth by the east gate,<sup>2</sup> and lodge in Eastern Park; but if the Blessed One was perceived at sunrise making his way to the north gate,<sup>3</sup> then people knew that he was setting out on his travels. So when Visākhā heard . . . that he had gone in the direction of the north gate, she hastened to him, and making an obeisance, said, 'Reverend sir . . . at this vast expense I am having a monastery built for you. . . . Command some priest to stay behind who will know how the work should be done.' . . . 'Moggallāna,'<sup>4</sup> said the Teacher, 'take five hundred priests in your train and turn back.' And he did so. . . .<sup>5</sup> And in no long time they had erected a two-storey building on high foundations and approached by steps. The building contained a thousand apartments—five hundred apartments being in the lower storey, and the same number in the upper.

After travelling about for nine months, the Teacher came again to Sāvatti; and in these nine months Visākhā had put up her building, and was now at work on the peak, which was [p. 477] intended to hold the water-pots, and was finished in solid, beaten, red gold. . . . For four months did Visākhā give alms in her monastery to the Buddha and to the congregation which followed him . . . [p. 478.] Thus ninety millions went for the site of the monastery, ninety for the construction of the monastery, and ninety for the festival<sup>6</sup> at the opening of the monastery, making two hundred and seventy millions<sup>7</sup> in all. . . .<sup>8</sup>

The mortal who is thoroughly wise,
Keeps measure in the food he eats,
O'er him sense pleasures lose their power,
For him life passing gently fleets.

[4] At that time the young (mānava)<sup>3</sup> Sudassana<sup>4</sup> was standing behind the king. . . . [5] And King Pasenadi the Kosalan instructed the young Sudassana, saying: 'Come thou, my good (tāta)<sup>5</sup> Sudassana, having learnt this verse in the presence of the Blessed One recite it to me when my meals are brought and I will grant thee a hundred kahāpanas<sup>6</sup> daily as permanent alms (nicca-bhikkham).'<sup>7</sup> . . . [7] The king by degrees fixed a nālīka<sup>8</sup> of boiled rice<sup>9</sup> as his maximum.

§ 6. Samyutta-Nikāya, Sagātha-vagga, Kosala-samyutta (Sam. 3), Sutta 8 (Mallikā). (PTS, i, p. 75.)

Traverse all regions with the thoughtful mind
Naught will it reach more dear than is the Self (Attanā);
Even so dear the common<sup>19</sup> self (puthu attā) of others.

[8] . . .<sup>17</sup> [11] Again the Māgadhan king . . . and King Pasenadi the Kosalan met in conflict. And in the conflict King Pasenadi the Kosalan defeated the Māgadhan king . . . and took him prisoner alive. [12] And this thought came to King Pasenadi the Kosalan: 'What though this Māgadhan king . . . injures me who have not injured him yet he is my sister's son (bhāgineyyo).<sup>18</sup> What if now I should take away his whole array<sup>19</sup> of elephants . . . cavalry . . .

A man despoils another as far as profits him;
 When others him despoil, he spoil'd despoils in turn.
 'It stops here' thinks the fool, until his deed has ripened;
 When his ill-deed shall ripen, he will encounter sorrow.<sup>1</sup>

d. GREAT DISCOURSES IN SĀVATTHI

§ 1. Majjhima-Nikāya, Sutta 62 (Mahā-Rāhul-ovāda-S.).<sup>3</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Ap. G 2 a § 2 [37]. The word sahavyatā may mean companionship or union according to the context. The mention of these deities in the plural is an acknowledgement of their limitation and finiteness. In the Tevijja-Sutta (Int. § 35, i) Gotama speaks of union with Brahman, the fundamental infinite divinity (Int. § 37), and the present passage must be reconciled therewith and with the use of the word appamāna, unlimited, infinite (see [207] below).

The chapter consists apparently of a residue of partially classified pieces facing the redactor, possibly Buddhaghosha himself (Int. § 21) at the end of his labours. This residue may well have been in manuscript and scruple may have prevented him from adding a definite scene, or possibly lack of suggestive detail in the piece itself. There is similarly a collection headed Rājagaha-nidānaṃ (Ch. 11 c, n). Similar headings are Sāvattiyam (Ch. 14 b § 4 [1]) and merely Sāvatti (Ch. 14 a § 4).

LAST VISIT TO RĀJAGAHA: THE SCHISM OF DEVADATTA; AJĀTASATTU KING OF MAGADHA

a. THE DEATHS OF SĀRIPUTTA AND MOGGALLĀNA<sup>1</sup>

Ānanda he seated himself at one side and . . . spoke thus to the venerable Ānanda: 'The venerable Sāriputta, revered sir, has died. This is his outer-robe with his bowl.'<sup>1</sup> [5] 'This now, friend Cunda,' he said, 'is news to be told to the Blessed One personally. Come, friend Cunda, we will go to where the Blessed One is. When we have arrived we will announce this matter to the Blessed One.' . . . [6] Then the venerable Ānanda and Cunda the novice went to where the Blessed One was. . . . Seated at one side the venerable Ānanda spoke thus to the Blessed One: 'Cunda the novice here, revered sir, says thus: "The venerable Sāriputta, revered sir, has died; this is his outer-robe with his bowl." Indeed, revered sir, my body was near swooning and the quarters [of the heavens] became dim to me and objects<sup>2</sup> (dhammā) became darkened to me when I heard "The venerable Sāriputta has died"'. . .

[7] 'What thinkest thou, Ānanda,' he said, 'did Sāriputta in dying take away the aggregate<sup>3</sup> of duty<sup>4</sup> or did he take away the aggregate of self-transcendence or did he take away the aggregate of insight, or did he take away the aggregate of liberation<sup>5</sup> or did he take away the aggregate of clear-knowledge<sup>6</sup> [which leads] to liberation?' 'Not so do I think, revered sir. . . . But indeed to me, revered sir, the venerable Sāriputta was an exhorter who had crossed<sup>7</sup> [the stream], an instructor, enlightening, informing, stirring and gladdening,<sup>8</sup> unwearied in showing the Law, the helper of his companions in holy-living;<sup>9</sup> and we remember the venerable Sāriputta's strength [drawn] from the Law (dhamm-ojā),<sup>10</sup> enjoyment in the Law, help in the Law.' [8] 'Now indeed, Ānanda,' he said, 'has it not been announced by me ere this<sup>11</sup> that there is in all, even the beloved and kind, the principle of change, of separation, of transience?<sup>12</sup> And, Ānanda, in this case [is anything else] possible? . . .<sup>13</sup> Such a thing is not to be found. <sup>10</sup> Ch. 11 c § 23 [8].

<sup>11</sup> In this and succeeding sections of the CV Ajātasattu is still called prince (kumāra); apparently because though he has assumed the royal power he has not yet seized the throne; cp. Ch. 19 c § 1 (rājakumāra). According to the CV [6-8] Devadatta and Prince Ajātasattu conspire to slay 'the Samana Gotama' (Ch. 7 a § 11 [2]; Ch. 20 § 11 [32]); Devadatta employs men to waylay Gotama but they are overcome by the goodness of the Blessed One and become lay disciples. In [9] Devadatta resolves after this failure himself to slay the Blessed One; he climbs the mountain called the Vultures' Peak and hurls a rock down whilst the Blessed One is walking in meditation in the shade below, but miraculously (Int. § 94, ii) 'two mountain peaks came together and stopped that rock, and only a splinter falling from it made the foot of the Blessed One to bleed' (SBE, xx, p. 245). In [10] Buddha assures the Bhikkhus of his safety and says that the Tathāgatas (Ap. A 2 c, Buddhas) 'die (in the course of nature) not by violence' (cp. Ch. 22 b § 7 [14]). In [11-12] Devadatta causes the man-slaying elephant Nālāgiri to be released in a street which the Blessed One has entered, but the elephant is subdued by his loving-kindness (Int. § 94, iii). In [13] Devadatta loses reputation and favour and his followers become unpopular among the laity through their importunity; Buddha rules that not more than three monks shall receive hospitality together (Ap. H 5 [92] n). Some of these incidents are impossible and others may be equally unreal.

Khandadevī's son and Samuddadatta<sup>1</sup> and . . . said: 'Come, friends, we will make a split in the community<sup>2</sup> of the devotee Gotama,<sup>3</sup> a breaking of his wheel<sup>4</sup> (cakka-bhedam).<sup>5</sup> On this being said Kokālika said to Devadatta: 'The devotee Gotama indeed, friend, is great in power<sup>6</sup> and eminence. . . .' 'Come, friends,' said he, 'we will go to the devotee Gotama and ask for five (fundamental) things (vatthūmi), saying: "The Blessed One, revered sir, in different methods<sup>7</sup> (aneka-pariyāyena) speaks in praise of the uncovetousness (app-icchassa) and contentment (santuṭṭhassa) of the meditative, earnest, believing, humble, and strenuous.<sup>8</sup> These five (fundamental) things, revered sir, in different methods conduce to uncovetousness and contentment . . . and strenuousness—(i) it would be well, revered sir, that mendicant brothers should be throughout life<sup>9</sup> forest-dwellers,<sup>10</sup> and that if anyone stays within a village-boundary it should be accounted to him as a sin (vajjam);<sup>11</sup> (ii) that they should be throughout life alms-beggars<sup>12</sup> (for food), and that if anyone accepts an invitation<sup>13</sup> it should be accounted to him as a sin; (iii) that they should be throughout life wearers of rags taken from the dust-heap,<sup>14</sup> and that if anyone accepts a robe [received] from a layman<sup>15</sup> it should be accounted to him as a sin; (iv) that they should be throughout life dwellers at the foot of trees,<sup>16</sup> and that if anyone resorts to a shelter it should be accounted to him as a sin; (v) that they should throughout life not eat fish or meat (maccha-mamsam),<sup>17</sup> and that if anyone eats fish or meat it should be accounted to him as a sin." These the devotee Gotama will not sanction. We on our side through these five (fundamental) things will persuade the people.' 'It is possible, friend,' they said. '. . . Men have faith in what is austere.'<sup>17</sup> [15] Then Devadatta with his group <sup>1</sup> Tibetan tradition presents these as five Sakyans—Kokālika, Kaṭamoraga, Tiṣṣa, Khandadravya, and Sāgaradatta; see KMI, p. 39. The whole passage appears also in Samghadisesa Rule X, i. 1–3 (Vin. Pit. iii, pp. 171–2). The names of these four stock evil-doers recur in Samghadisesa Rule XI, and Pācittiya Rules XXIX and LXXXI. Kokālika and Kaṭamoraka-Tissaka also appear in Sam. Nik. (Kindred Sayings), i, pp. 186–91, where both are censured by deities to whom the title of 'solitary' Brahmā (pacceka-brahmā; Int. § 93, ii) is given; and in Ang. Nik. (Gradual Sayings), v, pp. 113–16 the censure of Kokālika is repeated. <sup>6</sup> Kokālika awakens and informs Devadatta, who is painfully affected.

<sup>9</sup> In [5-6] Devadatta's fate and the eight qualifications of an envoy (as in the Eights of Ang. Nik., Gradual Sayings, iv, p. 134) are mentioned.

<sup>10</sup> Devadatta's surrender to eight evil conditions is censured. This whole passage is found also in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (Gradual Sayings, iv, pp. 109-10), where the scene is the Vultures' Peak 'not long after Devadatta had gone'.

c. PRINCE ABHAYA'S CONVERSION. KING AJĀTASATTU'S REPENTANCE

<sup>4</sup> Int. § 179. According to this Sutta Nātaputta was alive after the schism if not after the death of Devadatta. According to one account (Ch. 11 d § 6 n) Nātaputta's death took place near Nālandā in the Magadhan country, and according to another (Ch. 13 c § 25 [243]) the news of his death reached Buddha at Sāmagāma in the Sakyan country and this in turn implies that the news was previous to Buddha's last journey, which must therefore have been preceded by a long tour from Rājagaha northward to the Sakyan country and back. It is possible that the different accounts of these events are not reconcilable, but it seems to emerge that a considerable period of months or years may have elapsed between Devadatta's schism and Buddha's last journey; cp. Ch. 18 c § 7 n.

others, then the Follower knows the right time for declaring such speech. . . .<sup>1</sup> [396] On this being said Abhaya the prince spoke thus to the Blessed One: 'How excellent, revered sir, how excellent. . . .'<sup>1</sup>

THE LAST TOUR: THROUGH THE MAGADHA- COUNTRY

the Narrative of the Great Decease. Part I, 1-34.*

§ 1. [i. 1.] Thus was it heard by me. At one time the Blessed One was staying at Rājagaha on the Gijjhakūṭa Hill.<sup>3</sup> At that time the Magadhan king Ajātasattu<sup>4</sup> . . . was desirous of overcoming the Vajjians. . . .<sup>5</sup>

§ 2. Then standing at one side the venerable Ānanda spoke to the Blessed One thus: 'The assembly of mendicant brothers, revered sir, has met; now for what, revered sir, the Blessed One thinks seasonable (kālaṃ).'<sup>8</sup> And the Blessed One having risen from his seat went to the attendance-hall and when he arrived sat in the place prepared<sup>9</sup> and being seated the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'I will set forth for you, mendicant brothers, seven conditions<sup>10</sup> (dhamme) securing stability.<sup>11</sup> Then

<sup>7</sup> Or, common hall, the large hall of the Vihāra; Ch. 10 a § 11; Ch. 15 a § 13 [163]; Ch. 16 b § 2 [2]; Ch. 21 § 13 [49]. 'Service Hall', SBE, xi, p. 5; SBB, iii, p. 81.

<sup>8</sup> The phrase is also used as a formula for granting permission to leave (MPS, i. 25; Ch. 19 c § 2 [101]). It has much the force of 'at your pleasure'. Int. § 190 (ceremonial); Ch. 14 f § 1 [210]; Ch. 21 §§ 10 [6], 13 [49]; Ch. 22 c § 1. Cp. Ch. 16 d § 7 [4].

<sup>10</sup> Ch. 12 d § 5 [1]; Ch. 19 d § 3 [5]; also Ch. 18 d § 2 [199]. See below §§ 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7; it seems clear that these five following sets of seven or six 'conditions' were announced by Buddha on different occasions, as is implied in the sevens of Ang. Nik. (vii, Suttas 21-7) and evident from Ang. Nik. vi. 11, and that they have been assembled here by a compiler who has massed the ideals and virtues of monkish life (Ap. H 4, ideals and Ap. F 2, virtues). In none of these is a clear place given to the rebirth theory (IN 2; Ap. B a, Karma).

THE LAST TOUR: THROUGH THE VAJJIAN<sup>1</sup> COUNTRY; VESĀLI

the Narrative of the Great Decease. Parts ii-iv, 12.*

<sup>9</sup> See Ap. B a § 6. Omitting the long passages in which Gotama is stated to have explained the several destinies of certain persons recently deceased at Nādikā as respectively (i) Arahātship (saintship or emancipation in this world, and hence final release), (ii) the state of never returning to this world, (iii) the state of once returning, and (iv) that of being no longer liable to rebirth in a state lower than human; and in which the Teacher further is made to declare that, in order to avoid the tedium of answering questions regarding the fate of each disciple on decease, he will teach Ānanda the 'Mirror of the Law', by which each disciple may predict of himself that Hell is destroyed for him, and rebirth as an animal, or as a ghost, or in any place of woe or fallen state of suffering, and that he is assured of complete enlightenment. This system of sanctions is based upon individualistic desires strongly reprobated in the Sermon on the Four Noble Truths. The Nidāna-kathā of the Jātaka (Ch. 5 b § 2) following the Pāli scriptures represents the first five disciples as having attained (i) the fruits of entering the stream, and (ii) the fruits of Arahātship or saintship. These two ideas present a natural sequence, and contain the germ from which apparently the above dogmatic fourfold classification subsequently developed. Between entering the stream (i.e. of conversion) and becoming no longer liable to rebirth in a fallen state of suffering there is a wide space to be filled up by the imagination. It is noticeable that the highest stage, that of Arahātship in this world, cannot follow on the next highest, namely the state of never returning to this world. This confusion seems attributable to the process of expansion to which the original teaching was subjected.

Nādikā in the Brick-house delivered that same full religious discourse<sup>1</sup> to the mendicant brothers: 'Such is duty. . . .'

§ 3. [11] Then the Blessed One having stayed at Nādikā as long as he wished instructed the venerable Ānanda saying, 'Let us go . . . to Vesālī.'<sup>2</sup> . . . Then the Blessed One together with a great assemblage of mendicant brothers went on to Vesālī. And there at Vesālī the Blessed One stayed in the Ambapālī-grove.<sup>3</sup> [12] And there the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'Let a Bhikkhu, mendicant brothers, live self-scrutinizing, comprehending; this is our injunction to you. And in what way is a Bhikkhu self-scrutinizing (sato)?<sup>4</sup> In this respect (idha) a Bhikkhu lives as regards the body,<sup>5</sup> contemplating the body . . . as regards the sensations, contemplating the sensations . . . as regards the mind, contemplating the mind . . . as regards phenomena, contemplating phenomena; strenuous,<sup>6</sup> comprehending, mindful, having put away in this world covetousness<sup>7</sup> and perturbation. Thus, mendicant brothers, is a Bhikkhu self-scrutinizing. [13] And in what way is a Bhikkhu comprehending (sampajāno)?<sup>8</sup> In this respect a Bhikkhu acts with comprehension in going out, in returning . . .<sup>9</sup> in walking, in standing, in sitting, in sleeping, in waking, in speaking, in being silent. Thus, mendicant brothers, is a Bhikkhu comprehending. Let a Bhikkhu live self-scrutinizing, comprehending; this is our injunction to you.'

<sup>10</sup> In the MV version (Ch. 12 c § 11 [xxx. 1]) the place is Koṭigāma and later (Ch. 12 c § 11 [xxx. 6]) Ambapālī is said to have sent a message from her mango-grove at Vesālī to Buddha at Nātika. The more detailed account is probably the later.

<sup>12</sup> Omitting accounts of visits by Ambapālī and by the Licchavi nobles, and descriptions of their gorgeous chariots (as in Ch. 12 c § 11 [1-5]; cp. Ch. 12 a § 9 [2]), all plainly intended to interest and flatter Licchavis of a later day (IN 6, Canon), whose predecessors Buddha is here said to compare with the tāva-tiṃsa Gods (Int. § 93, vi).

The Blessed One accepted the garden.<sup>6</sup> And the Blessed One having enlightened . . . Ambapālī with a discourse on the Law, rose from his seat and departed.<sup>7</sup>

§ 5. [20] And there also the Blessed One staying at Vesālī in the Ambapālī-grove delivered that same full religious discourse<sup>8</sup> to the mendicant brothers: 'Such is duty. . . .'

§ 6. [21] Then the Blessed One having stayed in the Ambapālī-grove as long as he wished instructed the venerable Ānanda saying, 'Let us go . . . to Beluva-gāmaka.'<sup>9</sup> . . . Then the Blessed One together with a great assemblage of mendicant brothers went on to Beluva-gāmaka. And there at Beluva-gāmaka the Blessed One stayed. [22] And there<sup>10</sup> the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'Come, mendicant brothers, do you on every side<sup>11</sup> of Vesālī keep the rainy season<sup>12</sup> [grouping yourselves] according as you are friends and intimates faring together.<sup>13</sup> I for my part will enter upon the rainy season [retreat] here at Beluva-gāmaka.' 'Be it so, revered sir', said the mendicant brothers in assent to the Blessed One and in every part of Vesālī they entered upon the rainy season [grouping themselves] according as they were friends and intimates faring together. Then the Blessed One there at Beluva-gāmaka entered upon the rainy season [retreat].

§ 7. [23] And a severe illness attacked the Blessed One when he had entered upon the rainy season [retreat]; the painful sensations became like unto death. The Blessed One, self-scrutinizing<sup>14</sup> and comprehending,<sup>15</sup> endured them patiently. Then this thought came to the Blessed One: 'It does not befit me that I should die (parinibbāyeyyam)<sup>16</sup> without having instructed my attendants (upaṭṭhāke),<sup>17</sup> without having advised<sup>1</sup> the mendicant community (bhikkhu-saṃghaṃ).<sup>2</sup> What now if I having turned aside this illness by strength<sup>3</sup> (of resolve) should continue to keep the will to live?<sup>4</sup> And the Blessed One turned aside that illness by strength (of resolve) and continued to keep the will to live. And the illness of the Blessed One abated. [24] Then the Blessed One having recovered from the weakness, not long after he had recovered from it, came out from the dwelling (vihāra) and sat down on a seat appointed<sup>5</sup> in the shade<sup>6</sup> of the [verandah of the] house (vihāra-paccāyāyaṃ). Then the venerable Ānanda drew near to where the Blessed One was and . . . seated at one side spoke to the Blessed One thus: "The health<sup>7</sup> of the Blessed One, revered sir, has been observed by me. Indeed, revered sir, my body was near swooning and the quarters [of the heavens] became dim to me and objects<sup>8</sup> (dhammā) became darkened to me, owing to the weakness of the Blessed One. Yet indeed, revered sir, there was some measure of relief for me in thinking "The Blessed One will not die until he has made some pronouncement concerning the mendicant community." ' [25] 'What then, Ānanda,' he said, 'does the mendicant community expect of me? The Law has been shown by me, Ānanda, without my making [distinction between] that which is outer [doctrine] and that which is inner [doctrine].<sup>9</sup> Here<sup>10</sup> in respect of the laws<sup>11</sup> (dhammesu), Ānanda, the Follower<sup>12</sup> has not the closed hand<sup>13</sup> of an instructor (ācariya-muṭṭhi). But the Follower, Ānanda, does not think thus, either "I will lead the mendicant community" or "The mendicant community is looking to me." Why, Ānanda, should the Follower make any pronouncement concerning the mendicant community?)<sup>1</sup> I indeed, Ānanda, am now worn-out, old, of great age, I have gone my journey,<sup>2</sup> completed my life; my life has lasted eighty years.<sup>3</sup> As when a worn-out cart<sup>4</sup> is made to go by patching up (vegga-missakena),<sup>5</sup> even so by patching up methinks, Ānanda, the body of the Follower is made to go. At such time as the Follower by withdrawing attention from all outward-things,<sup>6</sup> by the cessation (nirodhā) of each sensation, attains and dwells in a self-transcendent state of mind (ceto-samādhim)<sup>7</sup> free from [thoughts of] outward-things, then [only] is the body of the Follower at ease.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This passage, seemingly so inconsistent with Buddha's habitual mild imperiousness and with his own preceding thoughts, may have been interpolated (IN 6, Canon) by a party favouring local independence or congregationalism (Ch. 8 f). This long passage is found also in Sam. li of Sam. Nik. (v, pp. 260-3) and in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (iv, pp. 310-12). It may perhaps have formed part of the ancient Sinhalese Commentary (Int. § 21) and so found place in Buddhaghosha's recension of the Canon (IN 6).

<sup>15</sup> Ānanda inquires regarding the causes of the recent earthquake and in [13]-[20] Buddha explains that earthquakes are due to eight causes (Int. § 189; Ch. 22 b § 27 n), the first cause being a natural disturbance of the wind and water on which the earth rests; the second being the power of some spiritual teacher or god (devatā, IN 8 a), and the remaining six being the conception, birth, enlightenment, first preaching, renunciation of the will to live, and final extinction of a (or the) Tathāgata (Ap. A 2 c; and Ch. 22 a § 8 n). These last six evidently are not catastrophic. The passage appears also in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (iv, pp. 312-13). In [21]-[23] eight kinds of assemblies (parisā, Ap. H 3 a § 2 [21]) are mentioned and Buddha's supernatural appearances and disappearances thereat (Int. § 94, iii). The passage appears also in Ang. Nik. (iv, p. 30) and partly in Digha 33 (iii, p. 260). In [24]-[32].

<sup>1</sup> Or, stages of deliverance. This passage occurs also in Dīgha 15 (SBB, iii, pp. 68-70) and Dīgha 33 (SBB, iv, pp. 242-3) and in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (Gradual Sayings, iv, pp. 203-4), and also in fuller form in the Units of Ang. Nik. (Gradual Sayings, i, pp. 36-8), where the States of Mastery (see [12] n above) lead up to and explain the first stages of the Deliverances. It may be remarked that the first three Deliverances cover the same ground as the four Jhānas, and the last five are identical with the five Attainments (Ch. 3 § 4 [66]) which usually follow the Jhānas; Ap. I a (Trance) n.

<sup>5</sup> See Dīgha-Nik. iii, pp. 35 and 262. Subhan ti; the fair, the beautiful, the good. It seems reasonable to interpret this as equivalent to the amata (Ap. G 2 a, Note). This interpretation at least gives truth and beauty to the passage. 'It is well', SBB, iii, p. 119; 'it is beautiful', SBB, iv, p. 242; 'how fair!', Gradual Sayings, i, p. 37; 'it is fair', Gradual Sayings, iv, p. 203. Cp. Ch. 22 b § 26 (fourth trance); also Ch. 14 f § 9 [401] n (formless).

<sup>7</sup> See Ch. 22 b § 2 b [8]. Ap. I a § 1 [174]; and Ch. 16 d § 7 [2] n; cp. Ch. 17 d § 4 [3] (space-unity); Ch. 15 a § 11 [3] (void). Of the last five stages of Deliverance four are identical with the Attainments (samāpattiyo) taught by Gotama's teachers and rejected by him (Ch. 3 § 5 [164], nothingness) and the last is mere metaphysical negation. It is apparent that his later followers re-adopted (IN 6, Canon) these subtleties from an earlier Hindu system of yoga (Ap. G 2 c, Note, yoga and Sāṅkhya).

§ 13. [49] Then the Blessed One with the venerable Ānanda went on to the Mahāvana, to the Kūṭāgāra Hall; and having arrived he instructed the venerable Ānanda saying: 'Go thou, Ānanda; as many mendicant brothers as are staying near Vesālī, cause them all to meet in the attendance-hall.'<sup>14</sup> . . . Then standing at one side the venerable Ānanda spoke to the Blessed One thus: 'The assembly of mendicant

<sup>1</sup> Buddha recounts how Māra (see § 11 [7] n above; also Int. § 69; and Ch. 4 § 6 n) attempted at Uruvelā on the bank of the river Nerañjarā under the goatherds' Nigrodha-tree to persuade him to pass away prematurely, and how he has just renewed the attempt, and he states that he has now assured Māra that he will pass away after three months.

<sup>5</sup> Buddha refuses the request, saying that the time for making it is past. In [39] Ānanda repeats and Buddha refuses the request up to the third time. In [40] Ānanda pleads that Buddha should exercise his power of fourfold iddhi (see above § 10 [3] n, and § 12 [38]) for the purpose. In [41]-[47] Buddha recounts the occasions at Rājagaha (Ch. 11 c § 25; and Int. § 134) and Vesālī (see § 9 [2] n above, and Ch. 12 d § 1 [2]) when Ānanda missed the opportunity of asking him to live on to the end of the kappa, and he declares that the fault has been Ānanda's (Ch. 12 d § 1 [2] n). These passages are mostly repetition and add little or nothing except the stock list of spots at Rājagaha.

§ 1. [Pt. iv. 13.] The Blessed One having stayed at Bhoganagara<sup>3</sup> as long as he wished instructed the venerable Ānanda saying, 'Let us go . . . to Pāvā'.<sup>4</sup> . . . Then the Blessed One together with a great assemblage of mendicant brothers went on to Pāvā. And there at Pāvā the Blessed One stayed in the mango-grove (ambavane) of Cunda<sup>5</sup> the metal-worker.<sup>6</sup> [14] And Cunda the metal-worker heard that the Blessed One having arrived at Pāvā was staying at Pāvā in his mango-grove.<sup>7</sup> Then Cunda went to where the Blessed One was and having drawn near he exchanged greetings<sup>8</sup> with the Blessed One and seated himself at one side, and when he was so seated the Blessed One enlightened, informed, stirred, and gladdened him by discourse on the Law<sup>9</sup> (dharmūyā kathāya). [15] . . . Then Cunda spoke to the Blessed One thus: 'May the Blessed One, revered sir, consent to take with me a meal<sup>10</sup> to-morrow together with the mendicant-community.'<sup>11</sup> The Blessed One accepted by his silence. . . .<sup>12</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Omitting a speech which Buddha commences by saying that though he will eat the sūkara-maddava prepared (see § 4 below) his followers must not touch it, and that except a Tathāgata (Ch. 21 § 7 [25]) no one in the universe of spirits and men with Māra and Brahmā (Ch. 5 b § 9 [28] n) could digest it. He then orders that the residue shall be buried in a pit. The object of the narrator apparently is to show that Buddha did not act in human ignorance.

most painful sensations became like unto death. The Blessed One self-scrutinizing<sup>1</sup> and comprehending endured them patiently. Then the Blessed One instructed the venerable Ānanda saying, 'Let us go . . . to Kusinārā.'<sup>2</sup> 'Be it so, revered sir,' said the venerable Ānanda in assent to the Blessed One.

 Upon the Teacher from the "boars' delight" (sūkara-madda-vena).<sup>3</sup>
 Relieved from pain, the Blessed One declared
 "Now will I go to Kusinārā town".<sup>4</sup>

§ 5. [21] Then the Blessed One pausing on the journey came to the foot of a certain tree. When he had come there he instructed the venerable Ānanda saying, 'Pray (ingha),<sup>5</sup> Ānanda, arrange my outer-wrap (samghātīm)<sup>6</sup> fourfold;<sup>7</sup> I am tired, Ānanda, and will sit down.' . . . <sup>3</sup> See above §§ 1 [15] n, 2 [18] n, 3 [20] n. Rhys Davids (SBB, iii, p. 137) gives reasons for considering this to be a bulbous root and translates the word as 'truffles'; the Pāli Dict. prefers 'soft boar's flesh'. The word is a compound and must therefore represent a single though complex idea. It can scarcely be the equivalent of a noun and an adjective, e.g. tender swine-flesh.

<sup>4</sup> To the original text of the MPS (PTS, Digha-Nik. ii, p. 128) there is a Pāli footnote to the effect that these verses (A 2 a, Note) are not found in the Sinhalese Book (Sihala-pothake; Int. § 21, Ceylon). From this it may be inferred that the verses—or at least the last lines including mention of the sūkara-maddava—were introduced later from a northern source. Buddhaghosha has a note (SBB, iii, p. 139) to the effect that the verses were made by the reciters at the time of the Council [Sangiti] by which possibly may be meant a Council (Ch. 22 c) which met at a date considerably removed from the founder's death. Admitting clansmen as disciples Ālāra Kālāma can scarcely have been an orthodox Brāhman, though the yoga taught by him may have been monistic and Vedāntic (Ap. G 2 c, Note). But see Ch. 13 c § 10 [24] (texts).

'In one of them, Pukkusa,' he said, 'wrap me and Ānanda in the other.' Then the Blessed One together with a great assemblage of mendicant brothers went onward to the farther side of the river Hiraññavati to the Kusinārā Bend of the Mallans, the Sāl-tree Grove. When he had come there he instructed the venerable Ānanda saying: 'Pray (ingha),<sup>15</sup> Ānanda, arrange<sup>16</sup> for me the platform (mañcakam)<sup>17</sup> with its head to the north between the twin Sāl-trees; I am tired, saying this: "At times though rarely there arise in the world Tathāgatas,<sup>1</sup> saints supremely enlightened." Now this day in the last watch of the night the death of the devotee Gotama will befall. A state of doubt indeed has arisen in me; I have to this extent faith in the devotee Gotama—the devotee Gotama may be able to show me the truth<sup>2</sup> so far that I may cast off this state of doubt.' claim had full knowledge [of the truth] or have none had full knowledge; have some had full knowledge while some have not had full knowledge?' 'Enough, Subhadda. I will show thee the truth<sup>1</sup> (dhammam), Subhadda. Then hearken well, give attention; I will speak.' 'Be it so, revered sir', said Subhadda the Wanderer in assent to the Blessed One.

<sup>6</sup> Int. § 110. The awkward absence of the numeral 'first' both from the prose text here and from the last of the verses below suggests that the monkish redactor added the second, third, and fourth degrees, though out of respect for the original text (IN 6, Canon) he refrained from improving the word samāna. The doubtful clauses are here enclosed in brackets. Their omission gives the speech verisimilitude. The dying teacher may well have declared that every true religion must inculcate right conduct in thought, word, and deed, culminating in transcendence of selfhood; and he might truly add that at that time no system but his own taught this. The ill-fitting additions seem to have been introduced in favour of the rebirth doctrine which without them would find no place here (Int. § 30).

<sup>7</sup> These four degrees may be explained as the four stages ending in Arahatsip (Ap. D c § 4 [d]), but it is more accordant with Gotama's teaching to take them as meaning the four classes of the faithful so frequently mentioned, namely monks, nuns, laymen, and lay-women (see above § 2 [3]). Cp. Ap. H 1 § 6 (four pairs).

Nine and twenty years of age was I, Subhadda,
 Fifty years and more<sup>3</sup> have passed
 Since I went forth, Subhadda, Keeping the bounds of Method (ñāyassa),<sup>4</sup> of the Law (dham- massa); Beyond this [last] there is no devotee [at peace] (samaṇo n'atthi). . . .<sup>5</sup>

§ 17. [28] On this being said Subhadda the Wanderer spoke to the Blessed One thus: 'How excellent, revered sir, how excellent, revered sir! . . .<sup>6</sup> Let me receive from the Blessed One ordination as one who has gone forth (pabbajjam),<sup>7</sup> let me receive admission (upasampadam).'<sup>8</sup>

Cp. Ch. 1 § 6 (fifth day).

<sup>14</sup> Omitting repetition. The whole passage is found also in Samyutta xii of Sam. Nik. (PTS, ii, p. 21) with change of name and place, the scene being Rājagaha and the convert Kassapa the naked ascetic (acela, Ch. 12 a § 5 [15] n).

<sup>15</sup> Here only the renunciation-ordination is mentioned, but the admission-ordination may be implied. Ch. 7 b §§ 3, 7 [2]. Cp. § 19 below.

And Subhadda the Wanderer in the presence of the Blessed One received the renunciation-ordination, received admission.<sup>4</sup>

§ 20. [30 cd.] And thereupon shortly after being admitted the venerable Subhadda, dwelling alone, secluded, diligent,<sup>5</sup> strenuous, resolute,<sup>6</sup> ere long learnt fully for himself (sayam), realized in the present life and having attained abode in, the supreme fulfilment of the holy life<sup>7</sup> for the sake of which the clansmen<sup>8</sup> rightly go forth from the household to the houseless life; he perceived<sup>9</sup> fully—'Separate-existence (jāti)<sup>10</sup> is ended; the holy-life has been lived, what ought to be done has been done; there is no [individual state] beyond this state (n'āparam itthattāya).'<sup>11</sup>

Thus was the venerable Subhadda yet another saint.

He was the Blessed One's last own-disciple.<sup>12</sup>

§ 24. . . .<sup>3</sup> [5] Then the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'It may be now, Bhikkhus, that some mendicant brother may have a doubt or perplexity<sup>4</sup> regarding the Buddha or the Law<sup>5</sup> or the Community or the Path or [Middle] Road.<sup>6</sup> Inquire, Bhikkhus; be not hereafter full of regret saying: "The Teacher was present with us and we could not question the Blessed One when face to face."' On this being said the mendicant brothers were silent. . . .<sup>7</sup> Then the Blessed One instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'It may be now, Bhikkhus, that you do not inquire because of respect for the teacher; then let friend speak to friend.'<sup>8</sup> On this being said the mendicant brothers were silent. [6] Then the venerable Ānanda spoke to the Blessed One thus: "Tis wonderful, revered sir, 'tis strange;<sup>9</sup> thus do I believe, revered sir—in the assembly of mendicant brothers not even one mendicant brother has any doubt or perplexity regarding the Buddha or the Law or the Community or the Path or Road.' . . .<sup>10</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Ch. 8 d § 5 [1]; Ch. 8 e §§ 3, 5 n; Ch. 8 i § 1 [21] (chief rule); Ch. 23 b § 9. Or, disciplinary rules; cp. Ch. 8 e (Vinaya). It is not probable that Buddha wished to abolish rules instituted by himself. He may have wished to prevent the growth of unnecessary observances accumulated by local communities, and this would accord with his constant opposition to insignificant formalism (Ap. G 1 a, practices).

<sup>3</sup> Omitting [4] which attributes to Buddha an order that the brahma-danda penalty (Ap. H 3 b) should be laid upon the mendicant brother Channa, whom the Bhikkhus should not address, advise, or admonish, Ch. 15 b § 15 [12]. The abruptness of this order is not a reason against its validity, for the Teacher's long reverie may well be supposed to have been interrupted by brief sentences as his thoughts for the time became definite. But the Commentary states that Channa was punished for obstinately supporting the mendicant sisters against the mendicant brothers (SBB, iii, p. 172). This long dispute ended in the suppression of the Bhikkhuni-Saṃgha in Ceylon, and as the Bhikkhus seem not to have been above loading the scriptures to their own advantage elsewhere (Ch. 12 b § 2 [6] n) it is not impossible that they used the solemn narration of the Teacher's death to insert a text which might serve as a point in argument. The obstinacy of Channa is mentioned in Culla-vagga, I. xxv (Ch. 15 b § 13), IV. xiv, and his repentance in Culla-vagga, XI. i. 12, 15. The last passage includes the text here omitted. He figures also as a stock offender in the Sutta-Vibhanga (Vin. Piṭ. iii, pp. 155, 177, iv, pp. 36, 47, 113, 141). The scene in all these cases is Kosambi (Int. § 143). See also Thera-gāthā, lxix (Psalms of the Brethren, p. 70). He is not the Channa of Ch. 11 c § 6; nor apparently the thera of Ch. 15 a § 16 (Kindred Sayings, iii, p. 111). The name is common.

<sup>10</sup> Omitting a passage in which Buddha is represented as replying that whereas Ānanda merely believes this he himself has certain knowledge that none has any doubt and that all the 500 present (Int. § 121), even the most backward, having entered the stream will be no longer liable to birth in a state of punishment (Ap. B a § 6 [8]) and will assuredly attain complete enlightenment. The object of the passage is apparently to enhance the authority of the Canon as recently revised by a General Council (IN 6).

§ 25. § 28. [11] And then the venerable Anuruddha instructed the mendicant brothers saying: 'Enough, friends; mourn not, lament not. Has it not been announced by the Blessed One ere this<sup>1</sup> that there is in all . . . the principle of transience.<sup>2</sup> And how in this case, friends, is it possible that what is born, produced, compounded, dissolvable<sup>3</sup> by nature—that this indeed should not be dissolved? This state is not to be found. The spirits,<sup>4</sup> friends, are vexed.<sup>5</sup> ("But of what kind of spirits, revered sir, is the venerable Anuruddhā thinking?") ### c. THE OBSEQUIES

§ 1. [Pt. vi. 12.] And the venerable Anuruddha<sup>13</sup> and the venerable Ānanda passed the remainder of that night in discourse on the Law. Then the venerable Anuruddha instructed the venerable Ānanda saying: 'Go thou, friend Ānanda, enter Kusinārā and announce to the Kusināran Mallans, "The Blessed One is dead, Vāseṭṭhas,<sup>14</sup> now 'tis time] for what ye think seasonable."'<sup>15</sup> 'Be it so, revered sir', said the venerable Ānanda in assent to the venerable Anuruddha. . . .<sup>16</sup>

Mallans with scents and garlands and all the musicians and five hundred pairs of [upper] wraps,<sup>1</sup> went to the Bend (Upavattanaṃ)<sup>2</sup> of the Mallans, the Sāl-tree Grove, where the body of the Blessed One was. When they had arrived they . . . honoured<sup>3</sup> the body of the Blessed One with dances,<sup>4</sup> songs, music<sup>5</sup> (vāḍitehi), and garlands and scents; making awnings of the cloth, preparing circular enclosures<sup>6</sup> (maṇḍala-mālāni); and so they passed that day. And then the Kusināran Mallans thought thus: 'It is the wrong time to-day to burn<sup>7</sup> the body of the Blessed One; now to-morrow we will burn the body of the Blessed One. And then . . .<sup>8</sup> [so] also they passed the second day . . . and the third . . . and the fourth . . . and the fifth . . . and the sixth day.

§ 3. [14] Then during the seventh day the Kusināran Mallans thought thus: 'Let us . . . honouring the body of the Blessed One with dances,<sup>9</sup> songs, music and garlands and scents, carry it southwards to the south of the city, outside [the walls] to the outside of the city, and let us burn the body of the Blessed One at the south [side] of the city (nagarassa).'<sup>10</sup> And at that time eight leaders<sup>11</sup> of the Mallans, having bathed their heads,<sup>12</sup> clothed themselves in unsoiled garments<sup>13</sup> and then thinking 'We will lift the body of the Blessed One' were not able to lift it. . . .<sup>14</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Omitting details of this miraculous incident (Int. § 94, i). Anuruddha explains [15] that the spirits (devatā; IN 8 a) desire that the body should be carried to the north gate and through the city to the east gate and thence to Makuta-bandhana, a Mallan shrine (see § 4 below). On the Mallans complying the difficulty is removed and [16] a miraculous fall of heavenly Mandārava flowers (Int. § 79; Ch. 13 a § 4 n) ensues. The significance of this incident appears to be that the Buddha was to be treated not as a foreigner as was first proposed but as a citizen of Kusinārā.

§ 6. [19–20] . . .<sup>11</sup> [21] And at that time four leaders of the Mallans having bathed their heads<sup>12</sup> and clad themselves in unsoiled garments thinking, 'We will kindle the pyre of the Blessed One', were not able to kindle it. . . .<sup>13</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Mahā-Kassapa who is absent near Pāvā with 500 of the brethren hears the news of the Buddha's death; as in Ch. 13 a § 4. He immediately sets forth for Makuta-bandhana; see § 7 below. Curiously interposed in [20] is the incident of Subhadda the recruit (Ch. 22 b § 13 [23] n), who had been received into the Order in his old age and who now bids the brethren rejoice on being freed from the great Samana's restraint and on being able to do what they please (see also Ch. 23 b § 2).

<sup>13</sup> Omitting details regarding this miraculous incident (Int. § 94, i). Anuruddha explains that the spirits (IN 8 a) desire that the ceremony should wait till the arrival of Mahā-Kassapa to salute the feet of the Blessed One—Mahā-Kassapa became Buddha's immediate successor. He was absent at the time of the Buddha's death and the present miracle may have been introduced in the interest of his party (IN 6, Canon). He was a Brāhman and some of the depreciation to which Ānanda is frequently subjected in the Nikāyas may be due to a rivalry between the Sakyans of Gotama's immediate family and the Brāhman converts who supported the venerable and learned Kassapa (Ch. 11 d § 7 n; cp. Ch. 11 c § 25 n, and Ch. 23 b § 9 n; also Ap. H 2 § 4 n).

Also the five hundred Bhikkhus [who had come with him from Pāvā] having adjusted their robes over one shoulder, extended joined palms and so moving as to keep the pyre on their right [walked round it] thrice and saluted the feet of the Blessed One with their foreheads. And as the venerable Mahā-Kassapa and those five hundred Bhikkhus saluted [the feet] the pyre of the Blessed One caught fire. . . .<sup>5</sup>

'Therefore, O Brāhman,' they replied, 'do thou divide what relics of the Blessed One there are in fair division<sup>11</sup> making eight equal parts.' 'Be it so, sirs (bho)', said Doṇa the Brāhman in assent to those assembled parties (tesaṃ saṃghānaṃ ganānaṃ), and having divided the remains of the Blessed One in fair division making eight equal parts he spoke to those assembled parties thus: 'Give me, sirs, this vessel (kumbhaṃ),<sup>12</sup> and I will make a stūpa and a festival [in honour] of the vessel.' And they gave the vessel to Doṇa the Brāhman.

a. ĀNANDA<sup>2</sup> AND THE LAW AND DISCIPLINE

Vinaya-Piṭaka, Culla-vagga, XI.

§ 1. [XI. i. 1.] The venerable Mahā-Kassapa directed the mendicant brothers saying: ‘Once,<sup>8</sup> friends, I was in the course of a journey from Pāvā to Kusinārā with a great assemblage, five hundred mendicant brothers. . . .’<sup>9</sup> At that time a certain naked-ascetic . . . had reached half-way from Kusinārā to Pāvā. . . . Seeing the naked-ascetic I said to him “Dost thou, friend, know our Teacher?” “Yes, friend, I know him,” he said, “to-day the devotee Gotama has been dead seven days”. . . .’<sup>10</sup> Then I, friends, spoke to the mendicant brothers thus: “Enough, friends; mourn not, lament not. Has it not been announced already<sup>11</sup> by the Blessed One. . . . That which is born, produced, compounded, dissolvable by nature—that this indeed should not be dissolved, such a thing is not found.”

<sup>5</sup> Dhamma; Ch. 22 b § 21 (doctrine); cp. Ch. 21 § 8; and Ch. 23 b § 3 (Doctrine). The Law inculcates the attainment of Nibbāna of selflessness in this life (Ap. C b) by self-transcendence (samādhi; Ch. 5 b § 4 [18]) through the practice of holy living (brahma-cariya; Ch. 5 a § 10) and the exercise of the four holy or divinely harmonious qualities (brahma-vihārā; Ap. F 2 b); see IN 5 b (Essentials).

<sup>6</sup> Ānanda explains that each parish (‘as many of us as live in the neighbourhood of a village—ekaṃ gāmakkhettam upanissāya’; cp. Ch. 8 f; and Ch. 22 b § 11 [20]) governs itself in accordance with the Dhamma. The Sutta also deals with the ten qualities which inspire confidence (as in Ang. Nik. v, pp. 198–201) and with iddhi (Ap. I b § 3).

<sup>8</sup> The phrase ekaṃ samayaṃ (at one time) seems to imply a period somewhat remote and that Mahā-Kassapa is narrating events which are not recent. The time of the speech may perhaps be somewhat earlier than the first rainy season after the Buddha’s death (see § 5 [3] below). The scene is not stated, but may be assumed to be a preliminary session preceding the first General Council and to be in the neighbourhood of the Sattapaṇṇa Cave (Ap. A 1 b, 14) overlooking Rājagaha, the speech being Mahā-Kassapa’s introductory address.

§ 3. [1 cd.] Come<sup>4</sup> therefore, friends, let us [warned by Subhadda’s example] chant together both the Doctrine<sup>5</sup> and the Discipline<sup>6</sup> before un-law (a-dhammo) flourishes and the Law is thrust aside, un-discipline flourishes and the Discipline is thrust aside; before those who teach un-law become powerful and those who teach the Law become weak, those who teach un-discipline become powerful and those who teach the Discipline become weak.’

§ 4. [2] [The Bhikkhus who were present on that occasion thus replied]: ‘For this [purpose] indeed, revered sir, let the elder (thero)<sup>7</sup> choose mendicant brothers.’ Then the venerable Mahā-Kassapa chose five hundred<sup>8</sup> saints<sup>9</sup> less one; and the mendicant brothers spoke thus to the venerable Mahā-Kassapa: ‘The venerable Ānanda<sup>10</sup> here, revered sir, although [he is still] a learner (sekho)<sup>11</sup> is incapable of going astray (a-gatim) through liking,<sup>12</sup> through enmity, through misapprehension or through fear, and much (bahu) of the Doctrine and the Discipline has been mastered by him in the presence of the Blessed One; therefore indeed, revered sir, let the elder choose also the venerable Ānanda.’ And then the venerable Mahā-Kassapa chose the venerable Ānanda also.

§ 5. [3] Then the elder<sup>13</sup> mendicant brothers thought thus: ‘Where now should we chant together the Doctrine and the Discipline?’ And then the elder mendicant brothers thought thus: ‘Rājagaha (Rājagaham)<sup>14</sup> indeed is a good place for alms<sup>15</sup> with plentiful lodgings.<sup>16</sup> What now if we whilst spending the rainy season (vassam)<sup>17</sup> at Rājagaha should chant together the Doctrine and the Discipline and no other mendicant brothers were to enter upon<sup>18</sup> the rainy season [retreat] at Rājagaha. [4] Then the venerable Mahā-Kassapa put the

That the assembly should have repeated together the five Nikāyas in their present bulky and elaborate form is obviously impossible, but it is possible that they recited the outlines or headings of a large number of Suttas with their settings and occasions and that we still have these outlines inbedded in a mass of later commentarial or elucidatory matter. The word Sutta means a thread, and Sutta-Piṭaka means literally a basket or collection of threads or outlines. In the Suttantas (Ap. A 1 a, Note) of the Dīgha-Nikāya we have the Discourses finally elaborated by later generations of the devout. As regards the first four Nikāyas or Collections it is possible that the assembly arranged many of the chief discourses according to length and grouped some others according to kindred themes or according to the graduated numerical system popular for memorizing purposes among Buddhists. It is also more than likely that the chief rules of the Vinaya had already been formulated and committed to memory as a code of behaviour for the brethren. The Third Basket or Abhidhamma-Piṭaka (Int. § 14) consisting of exegetical treatises had not yet been composed.

<sup>3</sup> The Culla-vagga account makes the meeting proceed to charge Ānanda with negligence in omitting to request the Buddha to specify which were the greater and the lesser Rules (MPS, vi. 3) and in failing to persuade him to live on to the end of the Cycle (Ch. 11 c § 25 [43] n), as well as with errors of commission (Ch. 22 c 6 n). These charges come in so strangely that the passage may be put down as an interpolation (IN 6, Canon) reflecting the quarrel (Ch. 11 d § 7 n) between the scholastic, formalizing, and philosophizing party under the austere and ascetic Brāhman Mahā-Kassapa and the more practically ethical, secularizing and conservative party under the Kshatriya leader, the kindly, faithful, and nobly simple Ānanda. These dissensions reverberated more loudly at the time of the second General Council a hundred years later at Vesāli.

a. The Three Piṭakas<sup>3</sup> or Baskets (the Pāli Canonical Books)<sup>4</sup>

[Note. The following passage, on the 'Disappearance of (Buddhist) Learning', is taken from the uncanonical Anāgata-vamśa (Chronicle of Future Events). This book contains a narrative of a prophecy, attributed to Gotama Buddha, on the gradual decline of the religion founded by him. The passage gives a fairly complete list of the Books of the Three Piṭakas or Sacred Canon, and of their expected gradual disappearance. The Books which are considered the latest and least authoritative, apparently, are expected to perish first. On this basis it appears that the Abhi-dhamma Piṭaka,<sup>5</sup> or 'Metaphysical' section of the Canon, is reputed the most recent; the Suttanta- (or Sutta-)<sup>6</sup> Piṭaka, or Discourses, the next; and the Vinaya Piṭaka,<sup>7</sup> or Disciplinary section (which in its present form includes the valuable narratives of the Mahā-vagga), the most ancient portion of the Canon. Of the Suttanta- (or Sutta-) Piṭaka, similarly on this supposition, the oldest portions are reputed to be the Jātaka<sup>8</sup> or Birth-Stories (of Gotama's previous existences) in the Khuddaka Nikāya<sup>9</sup> (Collection of Short Pieces), and the Dīgha Nikāya (Collection of Long Pieces, including the famous and beautiful Mahā-parinibbāna Suttanta, or Discourse of the Great Decease). The nucleus of the Jātaka consists of moral tales in verses with an ancient prose setting.<sup>10</sup> Prose additions of an exegetical nature have been made to these at later dates, but the tales themselves undoubtedly, at least in many cases, are ancient, and some of them are illustrated in the carvings of the Mauryan stūpas at Bharhut and Sānci erected about the close of the third century B.C.<sup>11</sup> These moral tales, however, at least in their

<sup>6</sup> Sutta means literally 'thread' and thence connected or ordered discourse, and is common to Buddhist and Brāhmanic literature (Ch. 16 a § 1 [502]). In the word suttanta the termination -anta (end) seems generally to have very little force and any difference of meaning between the term suttanta and the shorter word sutta has often practically disappeared (Ch. 15 a § 11 [3]). A suttanta may be a fully expanded and exegetically expounded sutta. Buddhist dress, cannot be older than the nucleus of the Suttas (Discourses) in the Nikāyas, though they represent a more primitive and popular form of moral teaching. The Introduction<sup>1</sup> to the Jātaka (including a Life of Gotama Buddha) is non-canonical, but is based upon the Canonical Books, having been compiled probably in the fifth century A.D., in Ceylon. Being of comparatively late date, it has added many marvels to the simpler narratives of the Canon; but its marvels are far exceeded by still later Burmese, Tibetan, and Chinese narratives evidently based upon it or derived from the same source.<sup>2</sup> This would appear to justify the reverse process of simplification—the removal of exaggeration and of metaphysical intricacies—here attempted.]

As long as the text (pālī)<sup>5</sup> of the word of the Buddha in the Three Baskets (Te-piṭake Buddha-vacane) with the commentary (s'atthakathā) remains, so long indeed the disappearance of [Buddhist] learning (pariyatti antaradhānam) will not happen. As time elapses there will be rājas of no family (a-kulīno) and without religion (a-dhammikā); the courtiers and officials will be without religion; and then the inhabitants of the kingdom will be without religion. On account of their want of religion the sky (devo)<sup>6</sup> will not rain duly, so that the crops will not develop duly. Upon the failure of these the requisite-givers will not be able to give the requisites (paccaye)<sup>7</sup> to the mendicant-brothers' community (bhikkhu-saṃghassa); and the mendicant brothers not receiving the requisites will not hold classes of pupils (antevāsikanam).<sup>8</sup> As time elapses learning will fall away. As it perishes, first the Great Treatise (Mahā-pakarāṇam)<sup>9</sup> will perish. When this perishes the Yamaka, the Kathāvatthu,<sup>10</sup> the Puggalapaññatti, the Dhātukathā, the Vibhaṅga, and the Dhammasaṅgīṇī<sup>11</sup> also [will perish]. The Abhidhamma Piṭaka<sup>12</sup> having perished the Suttanta Piṭaka<sup>13</sup> will fall away. But the well-conducted will still preserve the Vinaya Piṭaka; as time elapses they not being able to preserve the Jātaka also, first the Vessantara Jātaka<sup>5</sup> will fall away; when the Vessantara Jātaka perishes . . .<sup>6</sup> the Aparaṇṇaka Jātaka<sup>7</sup> will fall away. The Jātaka having perished, they will still preserve the Vinaya Piṭaka.<sup>8</sup> As time elapses the Vinaya Piṭaka will fall away. As long as a four-lined verse (catu-ppādikā gāthā) shall be forthcoming among men so long the disappearance of learning will not happen. When a pious rāja has had a purse of a thousand [pieces] placed in a golden casket on the back of an elephant, and to the sound of the drum twice and thrice shall proclaim in the city 'Whosoever knows a verse spoken by the Enlightened Ones (Buddhehi),<sup>9</sup> let him take this sum of a thousand pieces (sahassa-kahāpanam)<sup>10</sup> together with the elephant,' and, not having found a single four-lined verse known, shall take back the purse of a thousand [pieces] into his palace, then the disappearance of learning indeed will happen.

b. The Great Councils<sup>11</sup>

[Note. According to the tradition the Books of the Pāli Canon were collected orally at the first Great Council held at Rājagaha immediately after the death of the Buddha; and were revised and enlarged at the second Great Council held at Vesālī a hundred years later, and further revised at later Councils. It seems likely that collections of the Vinaya or rules of the Order, and of the Suttas or discourses<sup>12</sup> of the Buddha, had been made already at Rājagaha and at Sāvattthi, and also at other large Buddhist centres, before the death of the Buddha; and it is probable that such collections of rules and discourses were collated and revised orally at the first Council. The details of the traditionary accounts of these transactions may not be exact,<sup>13</sup> but the general outline of facts recorded has every appearance of verisimilitude. According to the tradition the Books of the Pāli Canon were taken orally to Ceylon<sup>14</sup> by Prince Mahinda,<sup>15</sup> the son or younger brother of the Emperor Asoka, about the middle of the third

(7) Having questioned Upāli regarding the Rules and Ānanda regarding the Dhamma,<sup>1</sup> the mendicant brothers made the Dhamma Collection and the Vinaya (dhmma-saṅgahaṃ vinayaṃ cāpi).

(11) Having heard in the presence of the Blessed One (Bhagavato) and having received in his presence both the Doctrine (dhammaṃ) and the Rules (vinayaṃ) complete as shown by the Buddha.

(12) The Elders, preserving the Doctrine, preserving the Rules, all of them acquainted with the Traditions (āgat'-āgama),<sup>12</sup> reliable, sure, like to the Teacher, ever reverend.

<sup>18</sup> The words in square brackets are apparently an explanatory interpolation. They are not supported by the CV. From the context it would appear that the first Anga contained the first four Nikāyas of the Sutta Piṭaka, whilst the remaining eight Angas contained portions of what is now the Abhidhamma Piṭaka, as well as parts of what is now the fifth Nikāya of the Sutta Piṭaka. The fifth Nikāya, which differs markedly from the first four Nikāyas, was formerly included in the third Piṭaka (RDB, p. 18). The growth of the last Piṭaka may be compared with that of the Fourth Veda (Int. § 176).

(21) Thus [was] complete in every part the Collection of Dhamma and Vinaya (dhamma-vinaya-saṃgaham), well arranged and protected by the omniscience of the Teacher (Satthu sabbaññutāya).

(22) With Mahā-Kassapa as their head the Elders, Five Hundred [in number], knowing the doubt of the people, made the Dhamma Collection (dhamma-saṃgaham).

A 2. EARLY LEGENDS<sup>8</sup>

[Note. The following reflections of Sumedha,<sup>12</sup> the Bodhisatta,<sup>13</sup> who subsequently became Gotama Buddha,<sup>14</sup> are quoted in the Introduction to the Jātaka, and come originally from the Buddha-vamsa. They may well be attributed to Gotama, the occasion being similar.<sup>15</sup> The twenty-four previous Buddhas of this poetic chronicle are possibly a later elaboration of the fact that Gotama Buddha thought that his doctrine was no new revelation, but simple truth and reason, which others in previous generations might equally have taught,<sup>16</sup> and which future Teachers might have to rediscover. The poetic narratives recounting the life of Gotama Buddha, or the lives of the Buddhas preceding him and his own previous existences during their times, appear to be necessarily later in date than the prose accounts of the events of the life of the Teacher, which are to be found embedded in the early prose canonical books. Immediately after Gotama's death the disciples held a great Council to establish the Vinaya and Sutta Piṭakas. They must have had an accurate recollection of the living human Teacher, and embodied this in the form of the Piṭakas adopted by them. Great changes no doubt have been made in the Piṭakas since, but these have probably been rather by way of addition than of alteration of the second texts. The continuous poetic narratives, such as the Sutta-Nipāta

We have here a more or less continuous account of Gotama's life and doctrine rendered into verse (udāna and gāthā). It is to be remarked that CV, v. xxxiii. 1, records how two Brāhman Bhikkhus observing that 'the word of the Buddha' is being taught in varying dialects offer to render it into verse (chandaso), but are forbidden to do so (SBE, xx, p. 150 n; *Vin. (7) Sitting in seclusion I<sup>1</sup> then thought thus:<sup>2</sup> 'Full of sorrow indeed is repeated existence (puna-bhavo)<sup>3</sup> and the dissolution of the body.

(8) I am by nature subject to [earthly] existence<sup>4</sup> (jāti-dhammo), [that is,] subject to old age (jarā-dhammo) and to disease; therefore I will seek a safe Nirvāṇa (nibbutiṃ),<sup>5</sup> without old age (a-jaraṃ) and without death (a-maraṃ).<sup>6</sup>

(9) What if I should reject this foul body, this mass of corruption, and should go on without regret and without regard.

(10) There is, there must be, a way (maggo), it cannot but be that there is one; I will seek this way, that I may be released from [individual] existence (bhavato).<sup>7</sup>

(11) Just as where sorrow is found, there also joy is found, so where [individual] existence (bhave)<sup>8</sup> is found, its opposite (vi-bhavo)<sup>9</sup> must be looked for.

(12) Just as where heat is found, there, as opposite, cold is found, so where the triple fire<sup>10</sup> is found, Nirvāṇa (nibbānaṃ)<sup>11</sup> must be looked for.

(13) And just as where evil (pāpe) is found, there also good (kalyāṇaṃ)<sup>12</sup> is found, so also where [earthly] existence (jāti)<sup>13</sup> is found, one must look there also for its contrary (a-jātiṃ).

(14) Just as when a man having stepped into mire sees a brimming lake, if he does not seek the lake, that is not the fault of the lake;

(15) So where the lake of deathlessness<sup>14</sup> (amataṇṭale) is found, that washes away passion, if he does not seek the lake, the fault is not in the lake of deathlessness.

(16) Just as when a man is encircled by foes and a path of escape is found, if he does not flee, that is not the fault of the pathway;

(17) So when a man is encircled by passion<sup>15</sup> and a path to bliss (sive) is found, if he does not seek that way, the fault is not in the pathway to bliss.

(18) And just as when a man is diseased and a healer is found, if he does not ask him to heal the disease, the fault is not in the healer;

(19) So if one sorrowful and oppressed by the disease of passion does not seek the spiritual-teacher (ācariyaṃ),<sup>16</sup> that is not a fault in the instructor (vinayake).

(20) And just as a man might loathe and cast off a corpse fastened to his neck, and go forward glad, free, master of himself;

(21) Even so rejecting this foul body, this mass of corruption, let me go on without regret and without regard.

(22) Just as men and women leave excrement upon a refuse heap, and depart without regret and without regard;

(23) Even so will I reject this body, this mass of corruption, as one might leave filth in a foul place, and go forward.

(24) Just as the owners reject an old ship broken and leaky, and depart without regret and without regard;

(25) Even so will I reject this body, oozing from nine apertures, and go on my way, as those owning the derelict ship.

(26) Just as a man who carries wares, walking in the company of robbers, seeing the danger of losing his property, evades them and departs;

(27) Even so, this body [being] like a great robber, I will elude it, because of the danger of losing that which is good,<sup>1</sup> and go on my way.'

b. Gotama's Life foretold in summary in the Buddha-vamṣa<sup>2</sup>

[Note. The 26th part of the Buddha-vamṣa contains a summary of the Life of Gotama Buddha, the Sakya-muni,<sup>3</sup> in 25 slokas or couplets. This includes mention of Kapilavatthu<sup>4</sup> as the capital of the Sakyas, and names the Rāja Suddhodana<sup>5</sup> and Māyā Devī<sup>6</sup> as the future Buddha's parents, Bhaddakaccā as his wife,<sup>7</sup> and Rāhula<sup>8</sup> as his son, and also mentions among his followers his two chief disciples, whom it calls Kolita and Upatissa, these latter being alternative names of Moggallāna and Sāriputta<sup>9</sup> respectively, and the two chief among his women disciples Khemā<sup>10</sup> and Uppalavaṇṇā. After the names of the two chief disciples mention is made of Ānanda,<sup>11</sup> the 'ministrant' (upaṭṭhāka) or personal attendant of the Buddha; and after the names of the two chief women disciples there is mention of Nanda-mātā, that is Mahā-Pajāpati,<sup>12</sup> who was the mother of Nanda,<sup>13</sup> and the foster-mother of the future Buddha, and mention is also made of the chief lay followers<sup>14</sup> (upāsakā). A still briefer summary of the Life of Gotama appears in slokas 60–69 of the second part of the Buddha-

<sup>8</sup> Ch. 2 § 1. The thera Rāhula is called the 'own son of Gotama (Gotamassa Bhagavato atra-jo)' in the Apadāna (Ch. 1 § 8 n), but is not said there to be the child of Bhaddakaccā or Yasodharā. Cp. Ch. 13 c § 9 n.

Sāriputta and Moggallāna died shortly before the death of the Buddha, and therefore are not mentioned in the list of chief Theras, who had received their teaching direct from the Buddha, and who met together in the First Council (Ap. (65) Then with reverence he will walk round the seat of wisdom, and peerless, glorious, seated at the foot of the pipal-tree<sup>12</sup> he will attain Enlightenment (bhujjhissati).

[Note. The Chinese traveller, Fa Hian, in his account of his travels<sup>9</sup> in India in the fifth century A.D. states that the followers of Gotama's heretical cousin Devadatta, still established near Srāvastī (Sāvatthi) in that century, rejected Gotama and revered the three previous Buddhas, and especially Kāśyapa (Kassapa) Buddha, who was declared to be the latest of the line. These three Buddhas were Krakucchanda or Kakucchanda, Kanakamuni or (Koṇāgamana), and Kāśyapa or Kassapa.<sup>10</sup> These three alone were born in the present 'blessed age (bhadda-kappa)'.<sup>11</sup> The second of these three Kanakamuni (Koṇākamana) is mentioned in the Emperor Asoka's<sup>12</sup> inscription upon the Nigliṇa Pillar,<sup>13</sup> which states that the Emperor enlarged the stūpa of Koṇākamana and, after visiting the spot in person, erected a stone pillar in his honour. The cult of this Buddha therefore was firmly established by the time of Asoka. In the Mahā-parinibbāna Suttanta or Book of the Great Decease, in the form in which it has come down to us, mention is repeatedly<sup>14</sup> made of the previous and future Buddhas, but in each case the mention is merely general, without any particular names, and it is possible that the text refers rather to Leaders<sup>1</sup> or Sages than to Buddhas. In the Mahā-padāna Suttanta<sup>2</sup> specific mention is made of the six Buddhas immediately preceding Gotama Buddha, namely Vipassin, Sikhin, Vessabhū, Kakusandha, Konāgamana and Kassapa. In addition to these six and Gotama Buddha an eighth name is elsewhere mentioned, namely that of the coming Buddha, Metteyya.<sup>3</sup> It is stated in this Sutta, as also in the Buddhavaṃsa, that of the last six buddhas one appeared in the 91st world-age (counting backwards from the present), two in the 31st, and three in the present 'blessed-age', which is also that of both Gotama Buddha and the coming Buddha Metteyya.<sup>4</sup> In the poetical narrative of the Buddhavaṃsa names are given to the twenty-four immediate predecessors<sup>5</sup> of the historical Buddha, commencing with Dipankara. In the last sloka but one of this poem, at the close of the summary list of the twenty-four preceding Buddhas, mention is briefly made of Metteyya, the Buddha to come. The name Metteyya signifies Loving-kindness or Charity. That Gotama should have expressed the hope and belief that the spirit of charity would ultimately rule among men is inherently probable. That he should have believed that the doctrine of altruism, taught by him, was no new doctrine, but discoverable in part or in whole, in different ages, by great spirits among men, is equally probable. That from these beginnings his monkish followers should have elaborated long lists of Buddhas, their names, stature, and longevity, the names of their chief disciples and so forth, is as probable; and that such lists and descriptions should show no particular differences except in names is what could be expected of a process of this nature. Revealed dogmatic religions always necessarily figure as new departures, as peculiar and original. The theory of a succession of Buddhas, rediscovering independently the same doctrine age after age, is evidence that the doctrine, equally attributed to all of them, was purely rational.]<sup>6</sup>

(16) Ninety-one cycles (kappe) ago was the Lord (nāyako) called Vipassin,<sup>7</sup> and that merciful Buddha delivered beings from sin.

<sup>1</sup> The word used is Tathāgata (literally, so-goers), i.e. those who show the way; or perhaps, those who follow others. It is probable that the term in some passages means the faithful or disciples of the Noble Path in general (Ap. E c i § 3 [32]). If the word is derived not from tatha (thus, so) but from tatha = sacca (true), it would mean 'truth-attainer'. In Digha 29 (SBB, iv, p. 127) a Tathāgata is said to be a right speaker (Tathā-gada according to Buddhaghosha; cp. Ch. 19 d § 1 [2]). The word is evidently intended to be understood in divers ways. Sutta 23 of the Fours of Ang. Nik. (PTS, ii, p. 23) states four reasons for which the title is given. With all of these the general term Leader or Right-farer seems to fit; see Gradual Sayings, ii, p. 27 n. 'Buddhaghosa gives eight explanations', Pāli Dict. (s.v.). For further references see headline above. The title Tathāgata probably is not early; it is not found in the Asokan inscriptions; Ch. 22 b § 4 [8] n.

[Note. As is pointed out by Professor T. W. Rhys Davids in his Buddhist India (p. 219) two versified Suttantas<sup>6</sup> included in the Dīgha Nikāya, namely, the Mahā-samaya Suttanta<sup>7</sup> and the Ātānātiya Suttanta,<sup>8</sup> are especially valuable for the light which they throw upon the popular beliefs of the times. 'In the first of these two poems,' he writes, 'some unknown early Buddhist poet describes how all the gods of the people come to pay reverence, at Kapilavastu, to the new teacher, and to his order of mendicant recluses. . . . The poet of the Mahā-samaya (the Great Concourse) enumerates first the spirits of the Earth and of the Great Mountains. Then the Four Great Kings, the guardians of the four quarters, East and South and West and North. One of these four, Vessavaṇa Kuvera, is the god who in the second poem is the spokesman for all the rest. . . . Then come the Nāgas, the Siren-serpents. . . . Then come a goodly crowd of Titans, and sixty kinds of gods, of whom only about half a dozen are Vedic. . . . lastly, the great gods who dwell in the highest heavens (that is, are the outcome of the highest speculation), like Brahmā himself, and Paramatta,<sup>9</sup> and Sanam Kumāra.' In the Ātānātiya Suttanta certain spirits are said to have come to the Buddha and to have informed him of a spell capable of protecting the new religion against unfriendly spirits which are then enumerated. Both these poetical compositions are put into the mouth of the Buddha, who is represented as reciting them to his followers.

In the ancient treatise called the Sīla (Virtuous Conduct),<sup>10</sup> which is appended to each of the thirteen (or according to another arrangement twelve) Suttas forming the first section (Sīla-kkhandha Vagga) of the Dīgha Nikāya, there is included a long passage enumerating at length superstitious practices, which are denounced as unworthy of Buddhists. The whole treatise throws much light on the general life of the people of the period.<sup>11</sup> The passage below is taken from the Sīla, in the middle of the first part of the Brahmajāla Sutta, and similarly is interpolated between

a. Hindu and later Buddhist views: personal Karma<sup>3</sup>

[Note. The following later Buddhist ideas on Samsāra,<sup>4</sup> or the Round of Existences, are indistinguishable from the Hindu views, earlier and later, on this subject. They may probably without incorrectness be attributed to the youthful Gotama at the commencement of his search for Peace. They are, however, strongly individualistic, being closely interwoven with the idea of personal salvation, and are therefore thoroughly inconsistent with the Dhamma, based upon the Noble Truth<sup>5</sup> that personal desire is the origin of all sorrow, and upon the theory of the transience, if not the non-existence, of the self.<sup>6</sup> The potency of this wonderful ethical idea is well known; it has for ages influenced the world for good by its piercing personal appeal, its wonderfully organized scheme of rewards and punishments, 'sanctions' which are calculated to appeal to the self-interest of every intelligent and long-sighted individual who accepts the theory. But to one who found in self,<sup>7</sup> or individualism of every kind, the basis of all sorrow, no doctrine that induced by rewards or restrained by punish-

§ 4. Anguttara Nikāya, Tika-nīpāta (the Threes), Sutta 33 (Nidānaṃ). (PTS, i, p. 134.)<sup>12</sup> wherever it ripens, there he experiences the result<sup>1</sup> of that action, whether it arises (uppajje)<sup>2</sup> in the present world<sup>3</sup> or in another life.<sup>4</sup>

Desire<sup>15</sup> (lobho) is a condition of the origination of actions, hatred (doṣo) is a condition . . .<sup>16</sup> delusion (moho) is a condition. . . .

It is like seed, mendicant-brothers, which is uninjured, undecayed, unharmed by hot winds, and which is fresh, and properly set and planted in fertile and well-prepared ground. If the sky (devo) gives due rain the seed will grow, develop, and increase. In the same way, mendicant-brothers, when a man's action is performed through (desire . . . hatred . . .) delusion . . . has its origin in (desire . . . hatred . . .) delusion . . . wherever it ripens, there he experiences the result of that action, whether it arises in the present world or in another life. These, mendicant-brothers, are the three conditions of the origination of actions.

[2] There are three [opposite] conditions, mendicant-brothers, of the origination<sup>5</sup> of actions. And what are the three? No-desire (a-lobho) . . . no-hatred (a-doso) . . . no-delusion (a-moho). . . . When a man's action is performed without desire . . . hatred . . . delusion . . . then since (desire . . . hatred . . .) delusion has departed that action<sup>6</sup> is terminated<sup>7</sup> (pahīnam), cut-off-at-root (ucchinna-mūlam), like an up-torn palm-tree, deprived of separate existence (ana-bhāva-katam),<sup>8</sup> not able to arise<sup>9</sup> in the future (āyatim an-uppāda-dhammam).

It is like seed. . . . If a man burn it with fire and reduce it to ashes, and scatter it in the wind, or cast it into a rapid stream, then, mendicant-brothers, that seed will be terminated,<sup>10</sup> cut-off-at-root, like an up-torn palm-tree, deprived of separate existence, not able to arise in the future. In the same way, mendicant-brothers, when a man's action is performed without (desire . . . hatred . . .) delusion . . . then since (desire . . . hatred . . .) delusion has departed that action is terminated . . . not able to arise in the future. These, mendicant-brothers, are the three [opposite] conditions of the origination of actions.

<sup>9</sup> From the non-individualistic, i.e. social, point of view, good actions are as fruitful as bad. Compare Buddha's undoubted teaching of the Noble Eightfold Way, which in the Mahā-parinibbāna Sutta (Ch. 22 a) he declares to be the essential part of the true doctrine and discipline (Ap. G 1 b). In the passage here, logically, it is the egotism that is uprooted, not the actions; and it is the necessity of the uprooting of egotism, not that of actions, that Buddha points out in the First Sermon. If, however, 'action', in this passage were taken to mean 'individualistic (i.e. grasping, desire egoistic) action', we should have a rendering quite in accord with the teaching of the First Sermon (Ch. 5 b § 7). Individualistic or selfish action (with its consequent sorrow) is uprooted by the elimination of desire, hatred, and delusion, the characteristics of individualism (Ch. 2 § 2). It is not difficult to see how such teaching might be transmuted to suit the popular belief in re-birth, and how these changes might result in the utterly unbiased and illogical statement that 'actions performed without desire, hatred, and delusion, become non-existent and not liable to spring up again in the future'. They are fortunately for ever creative.

<sup>10</sup> Or, destroyed.

Born of desire and born of hate and born of delusion—O wise [Bhikkhu], Whatever act has been done from this [cause], whether small or great,
Must be experienced [again] even here [in this world]; no other ground exists.

Therefore desire and hate and delusion the wise Bhikkhu,
When knowledge arises, should leave and all ill-doing.<sup>1</sup>

Eightfold Path of selfless activity, the Buddha, according to tradition, proceeded to preach to them the Second Sermon, called the An-attalakkhana<sup>1</sup> Sutta, on the absence of any sign of a permanent self<sup>2</sup> in the individual. Whether or not we have the latter sermon in the original form in which it was preached, it seems clear that the object of the Buddha at this juncture was to impress upon his hearers the main lesson of his first discourse, namely sorrow's origin in personal desire, and this he now did by dwelling on the comparative insignificance of the individual, in whom on analysis no sign of any durability, and therefore no sign of a permanent soul, could be traced. Anything like self-importance in the individual therefore was entirely misplaced, and if this were removed the entrance to the Noble Eightfold Path, leading away from sorrow, would be cleared. This teaching is further emphasized in the discourse on the Three Characteristics<sup>3</sup> of the individual in the Anguttara Nikāya, in which discourse the an-atta doctrine is set forth. Of the following extracts the first two, taken from the Milinda-pañha, which though post-canonical is orthodox,<sup>4</sup> definitely declare that the soul does not transmigrate at death, though its influence passes on;<sup>5</sup> the third and fourth, including the well-known discourse which converted Siha, the General of the Licchavis, show that Gotama's view of the Karma doctrine differed markedly from that of his contemporary, the leader of the Jains, but that he held to the doctrine of Karma in a modified form; the fifth extract, from the Mahā-vagga of the Vinaya Pīṭaka, demonstrates that the Karma doctrine, that is the belief in the continuous moral consequences<sup>6</sup> of actions (of deeds, of words, of thoughts)<sup>7</sup> however greatly modified it may have become in his teaching, which was radically new because radically altruistic, was placed by him in the forefront of his dhamma. The Karma of his predecessors was individualistic, calculated to bring the travelling Soul at last to personal salvation; the Kamma of the Buddha was altruistic, calculated to raise suffering humanity together through the exercise of the divine qualities, the Brahmavihārā,<sup>8</sup> to higher levels. It is interesting to note that at a much

Men are merely the present and temporary links in a long chain of cause and effect. . . . There is a real identity between a man in his present life and in the future. But the identity is not in a conscious soul which shall fly out away from his body after he is dead. The real identity is that of cause and effect. . . . The good Buddhist cannot seek for any salvation which he is himself to enjoy in any future world. The result of his good actions . . . will survive when he is dead, and advance the happiness of some other being, or some other beings, who will have no conscious identity with himself.' (T. W. This statement might not appear arbitrary and unproven to a convinced transmigrationist seeking for a reconciliation between the doctrine of karma and the an-atta theory; but it is difficult to credit that the highly analytical mind of Gotama would not have perceived the lacuna in the reasoning and sought to bridge it, if it presented itself to him in this form. It plainly is not another 'name-and-form' (individuality), but another 'action', just as mango rises from mango, rice from rice, sugar-cane from sugar-cane, and fire from fire, in the following illustrations in the text. The bridge across the gap is not a karma connecting one individual with another, but a collective karma uniting the successive generations of men, which issue from, and are moulded by the deeds and thoughts of, their predecessors. The statement in the text would be logical enough if the word paṭisandahati could be translated as 'transformed (or influenced)'. Ap. B c § 4 [21] n; Ap. E c i, Note; and Int. § 11 (re-birth). § 3. Vinaya-Piṭaka, Mahā-vagga VI, xxi, 1-10.<sup>4</sup> (The Conversion of Siha<sup>5</sup> the General).

[1] At that time many eminent Licchavis<sup>6</sup> [at Vesālī]<sup>7</sup> having assembled sat together in the council-hall (santh-āgāre),<sup>8</sup> and were praising in many ways the Enlightened One (Buddhassa), his Law (Dhammassa), and his community (saṃghassa). <sup>3</sup> From these illustrations it would appear that Gotama must have taught that what passed on was influence (Ap. G 1 c § 5 [viii], § 6) and nothing more, and that thus the influence of a man continued endlessly from generation to generation. This is nothing else than the doctrine of 'collective' as distinguished from 'personal' Karma, which doctrine may thus be attributed to him. Whence did Nāgasena's version, which was not new or original, but orthodox, arise, if not from some distinction between Gotama's theory of Karma and the usual theory of personal Karma, which must necessarily be that of personal and non-personal (i.e. collective) Karma. To an idealist (māyā-ist or illusionist) another and more mysterious distinction (Ap. B c) might be possible, but Gotama was plainly no illusionist. To him the visible was real and its duties insistent, and unremitting exertion was the breath of his nostrils. Illusionary changes, taking place within a brooding bodiless mind, without accompanying real movement, transmigrating or otherwise, would for him have come within the limit of metaphysical subjects, with which he constantly refused to deal (Ap. G 1 a).

<sup>1</sup> See §§ 4 [12], 5 below; Int. § 41; Ch. 12 a § 4 [3]; Ap. G 1 a, Note; Ap. G 2 a, Note; Ap. G 2 c § 3 (i) [17]. Cp. Ch. 13 c § 18 [108] n (kim-vādin). The words kiriya-vāda and a-kiriya-vāda are usually translated as 'believing in the result of actions (according to their moral merit)' and 'denying the doctrine of Karma' (see [5] below; Ch. 9 c § 1 [93]). Gotama certainly never taught the doctrine of passivity (cp. the Noble Eightfold Path, 4th section, sammā-kammānta; Ap. F 2 d, Note); this rather was taught by the Jains themselves. The Jains taught the doctrine of the power (for evil) of action, and therefore the need of abstention from action (Ap. B a § 5). They were kiriya-vādins, i.e. believers in the doctrine of Karma. In teaching the transience of the self, Gotama seemed to the Jains to teach the non-consequence of actions. Being individualists they did not distinguish between consequences to the individual agent and consequences to all (Int. § 4). This and the succeeding phrases are further expounded in the Eights of Ang. Nik. (iv, pp. 174-5).

The exact repetition of such stock phrases of meeting and parting is evidence that the surviving indirect reports of the Suttas (very many of which begin 'Evam me sutam, thus I have heard') have been edited to a general uniformity (Int. § 3; Ch. 5 b § 9 n; Ch. 10 a § 6 [3] n; Ap. <sup>7</sup> See [2] above and [6] below; Int. §§ 8, 25. "The doctrine of non-action", and "the doctrine of action", taken in the ordinary sense of the words, are the doctrines that the actions of sentient beings receive not, or receive, their reward according to the law of moral retribution. In this discourse, however, a peculiar meaning is attached to these two terms; see § 6.' (SBE, xvii, p. 110 n). The point seems to be lost later in the discourse, [6], by the reporter; unless his object was merely to stress Gotama's preference for a middle position in all disputes. Gotama taught that the individual was transient and therefore could not be subject to Karma in a new life; but that Karma went on remorselessly (the result of deeds, words, and thoughts never ceased), and this was borne by all later generations of men (Int. § 43). That is Gotama taught the doctrine of Collective Karma, not of Individual Karma. In this sense he both taught and did not teach the doctrine of Karma; he was thus a kiriya-vādin and an a-kiriya-vādin, as he himself said. Cp. Ap. B c § 5 (majjhena) below.

But in this discourse the word is taken in a peculiar sense; comp. § 7.' SBE, xvii, p. 111 n. This point (annihilation of the individual soul) follows the previous one most oppositely. <sup>17</sup> See § 3 [2] above.

<sup>18</sup> SBE, xvii (p. 125) translates as 'teaches Dhamma without the doctrine of action'. The charge made against Gotama seems clearly to be the intelligible one that his teaching was opposed to the doctrine of Karma. The charge is not further explained here; and to state without explanation that Gotama was an inactionist (passivist) would have been to bring forward a charge both unintelligible and baseless. His Eightfold Path was plainly activist.

[Note. The following passages are placed in an Appendix and not in the main text of Gotama's Life because in their present form they are markedly metaphysical, illusionist,<sup>9</sup> and transmigrationalist, and it would appear as for the most part late additions to the tradition. Gotama himself decisively set aside metaphysical speculation and limited himself as much as possible to ethical and practical teaching.<sup>10</sup> It is perhaps possible to find at the basis of Paṭicca-samuppāda an ethical and psychological analysis of Egoism, rather than a metaphysical account of the five skandhas (Pāli khandhā; aggregations constituting individuality),<sup>1</sup> their origin without a First Cause, and how they are perpetuated<sup>2</sup> by the action of Karma. According to the Four Noble Truths, which are the foundation of Gotama's teaching,<sup>3</sup> there is but one source of sorrow in the transient life of man, namely Desire (Egoism).<sup>4</sup> This is the Law; but those who do not know the Law are blinded by their ignorance. Thus it follows that there must be two sources of sorrow, namely Desire (Egoism) and Ignorance.<sup>5</sup> And the roots of Desire are on the one hand the senses, and on the other hand the mind which is deceived.<sup>6</sup> Such ethical doctrines Gotama must have taught. We have all the terms recurring in a mystical dress here in the dogma of Paṭicca-samuppāda. It seems more than probable that the mysticism is due to others and not to Gotama.

The 'Causative Process' is apparently an attempt to expand Gotama's statement that the Individual is composite and transient<sup>7</sup> (and therefore only of secondary importance), and by the use of progressively vaguer terms to lead back to an illusionist origin of individual life. Thus earthly-existence (jāti, 'birth') is due to individual-existence (bhava, 'being'); the latter can be traced back to separate-being (nāma-rūpa, 'name and form'); that again to composite-unity (saṃkhāra, 'composites', 'individuality'); and that finally to misapprehension (a-vijjā, 'not-knowing', 'ignorance').<sup>8</sup> Nothing of course is explained by this derivation, except what Gotama had already emphasized, from a realistic standpoint, namely that the individual is derivative and his self-importance delusive as well as disastrous to himself and his surroundings.<sup>9</sup> The original of this formula has apparently been confused by Māyā-ist and Kamma-ist additions. From the resultant confusion three ideas stand out fairly clearly. These are: (1) The individualism which tortures mankind is based upon ignorance; (2) This individualism spreads and repeats itself; (3) With the eradication of individualism sorrow also is eradicated. In his first two sermons<sup>10</sup> Gotama showed the transitory nature of the Self, with the ethical object of proving the pettiness and futility of individualistic desires, and their foundation in ignorance and misconception. This ethical object appears to have been obscured by later metaphysical followers.

A not dissimilar attempt to derive the individual from a first origin (buddhi, intellect) through will or individuality (ahaṃ-kāra), the five subtle elements, the five organs of sense and the mind (manas), and other stages down to the subtle individual body (linga-sarīra), which transmigrates on

In the Samyutta Nikāya (collection of classified Suttas) the 12th Samyutta is called the Nidāna-Samyutta, i.e. the group of discourses dealing with the links of the Causative Process. It may be observed that the great bulk of the 81 discourses in this group comes from Sāvaththi (cp. Ch. 11 c, Rājagaha).

<sup>10</sup> Ch. 5 b § 4 and Ch. 5 c. If the first seven points of the Causative Process be taken as co-ordinate and the remaining five as dependent, a theory will be found which is consonant with the Second and First Sermons respectively.

separation from the gross body at death, figures in Sāṅkhya<sup>1</sup> philosophy, in the form in which it has reached us, and it is possible that the Buddha's successors borrowed to some extent in this as in other matters from early Sāṅkhya views (cp. Eliot, H. and B., ii, pp. 299-300).

It is not difficult to imagine Gotama teaching his followers that out of ignorance and our individuality, out of the separateness of our minds and bodily senses, arises the individual's habit of grasping, desiring, and craving, and from such craving come the pain and sorrow which accompany the individual from birth to death with all the ungraciousness of decay; and conversely, that with the eradication of egoistic desire begin the fading away of sorrow and the disappearance of the ignorant individualism of the unguided mind and senses. When the parallel links of the statement were re-arranged so as to form a lengthened chain the metaphysical confusion of paṭicca-samuppāda arose. A shorter and apparently rational form of the process of causation appears in the Samyutta Nikāya (Ch. 12 e § 7 [4] n), and the steps are reduced to four in Majjh. 75 (Ch. 16 a § 1 [502] n).]

<sup>8</sup> The causative-process, according to the Karma-ist view, is the process by which the individual soul is originally created; and the reverse of this process gives the stages of its extinction at the completion of its migrations. Transmigration is quite inconsistent with Buddha's doctrine of the impermanence of the individual soul. It is more than possible, however, that Gotama at this juncture, dwelling upon the nature of the universe, its oneness, its divineness, its endlessness, and pondering on the ceaseless self-assertion and insistency of the individual human soul, so sharply contrasted with its relative insignificance, may have striven to reconcile the two, and have found the reconciliation in the activity of altruism, which, denying to the self its permanence and self-importance, yet attributes to its deeds, words, and thoughts, an endless series of consequences to be borne by all succeeding generations, for good or ill; and finding all evil in the conflict of selfishness against unselfishness, may have meditated on the growth and decay of the egoistic spirit of man. The paṭicca-samuppāda is equivalent to the third vijjā (Ch. 9 c § 3 [1]), i.e. to the knowledge of emancipation, together with reasoning supporting the same. In this view it signifies that the knowledge of emancipation from sorrow depends on the sense of having overcome separateness and craving, the senses and the body, individuality, and ignorance.

That the devout narrators of these events should have been led to describe the harmonious rejoicing of the universe at the initiation of the gospel of love and good will among men and all things living (Ap. F 1 b) was natural. The words of Buddha's own lips, as he described to them his experience of that time, may indeed have seemed to justify them, though he filled the universe with his own feelings and they peopled it with rejoicing spirits.

Almost identical verses are attributed to the Elder Sivaka in the Thera-gāthā collection of sacred songs (clii). They may be contrasted with the verses attributed to the Buddha in the Mahā-vagga account of his meditation on the Causative Process during the 1st Watch of the night (§ 2 below). The ancient ballad verses, which are interspersed in the canonical accounts of Gotama's life, are composed in a popular manner, probably by persons outside the inner circle of the Elders, and attribute to the Buddha the beliefs of popular Hinduism.

The tenth, eleventh, and the first part of the twelfth steps, namely individual existence (depending on ignorance or illusion), earthly-existence and decay-and-death, belong to another and metaphysical series, intended to show the illusory nature of individual life. The remaining steps, namely ignorance or misapprehension, desire, grasping, and all the sorrows (the latter part of the twelfth step), constitute an ethical series exactly corresponding to Gotama's teaching in the first sermons leading up to the Noble Eightfold Path of conduct (Ap. At one time the Blessed One (Bhagavā) was staying among the Kurus [at] the Kurus' town (nigamo) called Kammāssa-dhamma.<sup>9</sup> Then the venerable (āyasmā) Ānanda<sup>10</sup> drew near to where the Blessed One was, and having drawn near and exchanged greetings with the Blessed One he seated himself at one side . . .<sup>11</sup> and addressed the Blessed One thus: 'It is surprising, revered sir, it is strange,<sup>12</sup> revered sir! How profound, revered sir, is the causative-process and its illumination how profound; yet to me it seems altogether clear.'

'Say not so, Ānanda. . . . The causative process indeed is profound and its illumination is profound. Through not understanding this law, through <sup>7</sup> This may perhaps mean that in the last analysis we come to matter and mind, which are mutually dependent and cannot be separated in reality; and beyond these it is impossible to proceed. This would be a realistic view of the causative-process and opposed to the idealistic attempts to get back through more abstract terms to thought as the absolute origin. Cp. Ap. E a, Note, Ap. <sup>1</sup> Or, belief in soul or self (atta-vada); see Ap. E c i. RDB, p. 52; Keith, B.Ph., p. 103. The second and fourth of these upādānas are plainly inconsistent with the rebirth doctrine, with which they are here associated. What Gotama really taught was that from grasping proceeds the individualistic spirit, which thus spreads continually from generation to generation. He taught that if individualism (due to ignorance) and craving were eliminated the personal sense of transience (Ch. 1 § 10) and sorrow would disappear and the holy-life would be led (Ch. 4 § 17); and that individuality was resolvable into fluctuating and transient compounds (Ap. <sup>6</sup> This theory resembles the Hindu view of transmigration, which assumes the perpetuation of the Ego; and is not attributable either to Buddha, who preached that there was no permanent-self, and therefore nothing to pass on save influence; or to those of his followers who endeavoured to reconcile by a mystery the doctrine of No-Ego with that of Samsāra by supposing the aggregate influence of one agent to migrate to a new agent in due succession as a flame to a new lamp. (atthitam)” and “not-being (natthitam)”. [5] Indeed, Kaccāyana, to one considering the origination of the world (loka-samudayaṃ)<sup>1</sup> according to fact with complete knowledge, there is no not-being<sup>2</sup> in the world (yā loke natthitā sā na hoti). [6] And, Kaccāyana, to one considering the cessation<sup>3</sup> of the world (loka nirodham), according to fact with complete knowledge, there is no being<sup>4</sup> in the world. This world in general is a bundle (nibbandho) of approaching, grasping, and inclination,<sup>5</sup> but one [who has right outlook] does not enter upon, does not grasp at, does not insist on, this approaching and grasping of the mind (cetaso), this insistence and inclination and attachment [of an egoism which says] “Myself (atta me ti)”.<sup>6</sup> He does not doubt or question that what arises<sup>7</sup> is sorrowful<sup>8</sup> (dukkham),<sup>9</sup> and what ceases is sorrowful. This knowledge is not from others, it is his own.<sup>10</sup> So far indeed, Kaccāyana, is there right outlook.

<sup>13</sup> Ap. A 2 c; see § 6 below. That this title, so constantly attributed to the Buddha in the Canon, was actually claimed by Gotama is scarcely established (cp. Ch. 8 h § 1 [14] n). It is to be taken in connexion with the epithet Su-gata (Well-farer), probably meaning ‘Good-Leader’, often used of the Buddha (Ch. 10 a § 8; Ap. C a § 2, 126); also with the majjhimā patipadā (the middle way), the ariya atthaṅgika magga (the noble eightfold path), along which he led (Ap. F 2 d).

Heaven and Hell*

[Note. The following passages describe Nirvāna as it appeared to the later Buddhists. Their view is almost indistinguishable from that of earlier and later orthodox Hindus, and may probably be attributed correctly to Gotama before the formation of his own distinctive doctrine. They are all characterized by the personal note, the joy in the triumph of reward, prospective or present, the desire to escape from personal loss or suffering. The note of impersonality,<sup>3</sup> of revulsion from egoism (ahamkāra), of altruism,<sup>4</sup> is absent. Buddhism perished in India because it failed to retain its original characteristics and relapsed into the popular, ritualistic, and individualistic beliefs from which it had arisen.<sup>5</sup> Among its losses was the ideal of heaven on earth, the peace of Nibbāna attained by the saint during this life.]

The Nibbāna of Buddha: Selflessness or Extinction of Individualism in this Life.<sup>13</sup>

The alternative offers a more popular substitute for the strictly altruistic theory which Gotama taught (Ap. C b § 10). It is to be observed that there is here no mention of lower stages (Ap. D c).

this life. It was altruistic in its nature and implied active social well-doing,<sup>1</sup> very different from self-centred isolation on earth or the enjoyment of bliss hereafter. The use of the words pari-nibbāna and pari-nibbāyati<sup>2</sup> for 'death' and 'die' in the Mahā-parinibbāna-suttanta shows that the word nibbāna, without the prefix pari- (indicating completion) denotes a state attainable before death. Later the words nibbāna and pari-nibbāna apparently were frequently used as synonyms<sup>3</sup> indicating a state after death, higher than the Brahmā-world<sup>4</sup> at the summit of the Rūpa-loka, and perhaps beyond and above the Arūpa-loka.<sup>5</sup> They sometimes, however, indicated apparently successive transcendental states, of which pari-nibbāna, or complete extinction, was the higher.

Among the Buddha's followers the word nibbāna was also sometimes synonymous with sagga, used both of a future state<sup>6</sup> after death and of a state of peace during this life.<sup>7</sup> While some passages in the Dhammapada, which is a handbook of sacred verses,<sup>8</sup> classified according to subjects, and collected from many sources in the Canon, mention Nibbāna as a state of bliss attained in this life, the language of others is ambiguous<sup>9</sup> and may refer to Nibbāna as a state of bliss attainable hereafter. This ambiguity of language may indicate how the one idea was developing into the other. Similarly there are four references in the Dhammapada to Sagga (heaven).<sup>10</sup> The word also appears in several of the inscriptions of the Emperor Asoka.<sup>11</sup> If the Dhammapada was in existence in the time of Asoka, as is probable,<sup>12</sup> it would appear that within two and a half centuries after the death of Gotama his followers had adopted the future individual reward<sup>13</sup> and punishment, without discarding Gotama's own teaching of the immediate bliss of self-forgetfulness in the extinction of individual desires.<sup>14</sup>

The numerous accounts of conversions in the canonical books, as well as in the Nidāna-kathā of the Jātaka, show clearly that the converts<sup>15</sup> of the Buddha became Arahats,<sup>16</sup> that is attained to Nibbāna during their life on earth. The Buddhist tradition<sup>17</sup> considers that the Saṅgha,<sup>18</sup> or community of mendicant brothers, at first consisted exclusively of Arahats, and large bodies of men attained to this state at the same time.<sup>19</sup> The Note; Ap. Samgha was not a society of self-centred ascetics seeking personal salvation; it was an association naturally formed by a great organizing mind for the perpetuation and propagation of his doctrine and to set a clear example of holy living to the Hindu people to whose service he deliberately devoted his own self-forgetful and laborious life. That his followers would ultimately lose sight of this self-forgetfulness and return to the older path, more natural to simple minds, he seems to have foreseen.<sup>1</sup> It had no exclusive claims to righteousness. Oldenberg points out that Yasa attained salvation as a layman,<sup>2</sup> but thereupon became a mendicant brother. It may be pointed out further that in the Mahā-vagga narrative Yasa's father, the merchant prince, similarly attained salvation, but remained a layman. The Mahā-vagga describes the conversion of King Bimbisāra in practically the same terms.<sup>3</sup> The case of Gotama's father, Suddhodana,<sup>4</sup> is similar. The idea that salvation was the monopoly of the mendicant brothers was evidently a later notion, cultivated for priestly reasons, natural enough to a clerical order, but foreign to the mind of Gotama. Gotama did not call men to be mendicants in order that they might secure the prize of Nibbāna or any heavenly reward, but in order that they might serve the world,<sup>5</sup> by teaching the truth regarding individualistic desire and its destruction, which when rightly explained all men might learn at once and, like Yasa's father, without further reliance on others (a-para-ppaccaya).<sup>6</sup>

[Note. The essential tenet<sup>9</sup> of the Buddha's doctrine is that individualistic desire, or selfhood, is the origin of sorrow. Every part of his supposed teaching should be tested by it. That which is discordant with it must either have passed into his doctrine through failure on his part to notice the inconsistency, or must have been added by later followers. As there are ample reasons to believe that he possessed a powerfully analytic and constructive mind,<sup>10</sup> the latter hypothesis appears to be far more likely. In his First Sermon (Dhamma-cakka-ppavattana Sutta),<sup>11</sup> the very basis of his teaching, he states the case against egoism most emphatically, in the first three Noble Truths (the nature, the cause, and the removal of sorrow). In the first Noble Truth he sets forth the nature of sorrow and summarizes it in the words—'briefly, the five-fold grasping-aggregate is sorrowful (pañc' upādāna-kkhandhā)<sup>12</sup> pi dukkhā'—and this 'aggregate' is none other than individuality or egoism. This is something more subtle than mere selfishness, more insidious, and more difficult for characters above the ordinary to detect and throw off. In the second Noble Truth, or the Truth of the origin of sorrow, he lays down that thirst (taṇhā), or individualistic desire,<sup>13</sup> is the cause. And the third Noble Truth, that of the cessation of sorrow, finds relief for the sufferer only in the utter abandonment of all thirst. On the other hand well-being or good consists in denial of the self and in active well-doing. In the sermon which he preached to his first lay convert, Yasa, at Benāres almost immediately after the great discourse which converted his first five disciples, the opening section is expressly called a discourse dealing with the virtue of charity (dāna-kathā).<sup>1</sup> Thus loving-kindness to all men is placed in the very forefront of Buddha's teaching. The tradition of this was not lost to his later followers. The most characteristic of the attitudes of Gotama, figured in devout Buddhist statuary, is the Earth-touching attitude,<sup>2</sup> in which he stretches forth his hand to the Earth to call upon it as witness of his deeds of generosity in his Vessantara existence. The Jātaka stories<sup>3</sup> themselves are a long series of narratives of which the characteristic note is the self-forgetful generosity of the future Buddha (see the Story of the Wise Hare, No. 316).<sup>4</sup> Of the Ten Perfections which are the conditions of the attainment of Buddhahood laid down in the Buddha-vamśa<sup>5</sup> the very first is charity. The selflessness preached by Gotama, however, is not in any sense a passive virtue; it is intensely active,<sup>6</sup> as is shown by Gotama's own long and tireless life of labour for others. It is, in another aspect, Mettā, Love;<sup>7</sup> and is consistent with Right Aspiration (sammā-saṃkappā)<sup>8</sup> and endeavour or effort (sammā-vāyāma). In the conviction that egoism lay at the root of misery a sufficient, and probably the sole sufficient, reason can be found for Gotama's sudden and disconcerting abandonment of asceticism.<sup>9</sup> In the intense desire of the ascetic he found once more, however transmuted and freed from earthly purposes, the assertion of the Ego. Thus in forgetfulness of self and in thought of others lies Gotama's solution of the ills of the world.

<sup>13</sup> 'One might express the central thought of this First Noble Truth in the language of the nineteenth century by saying that pain results from existence as an

The famous verses, 'O builder of the house',<sup>10</sup> attributed to the Buddha at the moment of his Enlightenment, point to desire as the builder not only of misery but of the Ego itself, and thus enter into the region of metaphysics, where the Buddha definitely refused to tread.<sup>11</sup> Distinction must be drawn between the metaphysical transcending of the Ego and the ethical escape from selfishness. The former is self-regarding and passive, the latter is altruistic and active.

Buddhism abounds in synonyms for personal desire, and in metaphors and similes illustrating the dangers and misery of this passion and the happiness of escaping from it—the fires, the fetters, the bonds, the obstacles, and the peace and bliss<sup>12</sup> of liberation therefrom.]

individual. It is the struggle to maintain one's individuality which produces pain—a most pregnant and far-reaching suggestion', SBE, xi, p. 148 n.

[Note. The Mahāyāna sect of Buddhism did not arise till about the commencement of the 1st century, A.D.,<sup>6</sup> but the tendencies which gave rise to it were in existence long prior to that date, and themselves arose out of the Māyā (illusion) doctrine of the Vedānta<sup>7</sup> school of Hindu philosophy, to which apparently Gotama's teachers belonged. Distinction must be drawn between the realist Hīnayāna tenet of 'delusion' (moha,<sup>8</sup> delusion regarding the position of the individual) and the idealist 'illusion' of the māyā theory which subsequently developed into the Mahāyānist doctrine; between the false opinion, or micchādiṭṭhi,<sup>9</sup> of selfishness and that metaphysical avijjā,<sup>10</sup> or ignorance, from which ultimately arises separate existence; and between ethical liberation (mutti)<sup>11</sup> from the passions of individualism and metaphysical escape from individuality itself together with rebirth. These realistic and idealistic views of the phenomena of the world constantly fade into each other. The idealistic view came to prevail in the Buddhist schools of northern India, and still more so in the countries of middle and northern Asia to which Buddhist missionaries from India proceeded overland. The process, however, by which the idealist or illusionist theory came to prevail over the natural and unsophisticated realism of the Hīnayāna was gradual, and marked a return to a Hindu philosophic theory from which the Founder had departed.<sup>12</sup> Some four centuries after the period of the founders of Mahāyānism the famous Buddhist commentator Buddhaghosha,<sup>13</sup> who is the greatest exponent of the Hīnayāna doctrine, expressed himself in terms which often can hardly be distinguished from the language of Mahāyānism. The somewhat mystical, though not altogether unrealistic, idea of a fundamental divine unity and of the fleeting nature of individual life leads to expressions which can easily be interpreted as implying the unreality of the individual and a strict monism admitting mind alone.

The teaching of the new sect, self-styled the Mahā-yāna or Greater Vehicle, was a revolt against the particularism, or effort after personal salvation, into which the older Buddhist schools, collectively called by the Mahāyānist doctors the Hīna-yāna or Lower<sup>14</sup> Vehicle, had relapsed, and

Here the statement is that the continuous re-existence of the samkhāra or individuality, lying behind all sorrow, is caused by craving. This fades elsewhere into the extreme idealist theory that existence itself, not merely re-existence, is an illusion originating in that ignorance which lies behind all desire. Cp. Ap. D c, Note.

[Note. The Arahat or Saint is one who by successive stages has rid himself of the defilements<sup>8</sup> or fetters,<sup>9</sup> and attained in this life to freedom, to selflessness, to joy, to Nibbāna.<sup>10</sup> The selfhood which the Arahat casts off in this life is necessarily ethical not metaphysical, selfishness not the Ego. The Buddhist idea of Nibbāna being realizable during this life by the Arahat must be an ethical escape from individualism, not a metaphysical liberation from individuality, the latter liberation during lifetime being an obvious impossibility. Thus the Hindu doctrine of Saṃsāra, with personal Karma<sup>11</sup> succeeded by Nirvāna after this life, becomes at least a superfluity<sup>12</sup> if not incongruous with other essential doctrines of the Buddha. The essential step to Arahatship or the attainment of Nibbāna in this life is some form of conversion or 'stream-entrance'.<sup>13</sup> Later ingenuity subdivided this process.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Literally, 'not returning'. The idea is non-Buddhist; cp. 'He who studies the Vedas rightly . . . he attains the Kingdom of Heaven; he never returns', Chandogya-Upanishad, viii, 15 (Ten Principle Upanishads, tr. Shree Purshit Swāmi and W. B. Yeats, 1937, p. 117).

<sup>2</sup> Or, non-returning; Ap. B a § 6 [7]; cp. Ch. 16 d § 5 [4] n. According to mediæval Hindu belief such 'non-returners' having entered the Brahmā-world were ultimately re-absorbed together with it and Brahmā into the primæval universal Soul or Brahman (cp. A. Schweitzer, Indian Thought and its Development, 1936, pp. 161, 163-4). The purgatorial stages apparently were borrowed and artlessly incorporated by later Buddhism from mediæval Brahmanic and popular ideas of ultimate salvation through rebirth.

<sup>3</sup> This is plainly inconsistent with the fact that the Arahath is a saint in this life upon earth. Similarly the second of these stages is plainly inconsistent with the an-atta doctrine, which figures in the first and other stages. Thus the second and third stages do not join, but disunite, the first and fourth, between which they have been thrust. Ch. 5 b 2; Ch. 12 b § 2 [3]. Cp. a. The Transience<sup>8</sup> of the Saṃkhārā<sup>9</sup> (Individuality); the Skandhas or Khandhā<sup>10</sup> (Aggregates composing the temporary individuality)

[Note. The object of Gotama in teaching the doctrine of the transience of the Ego (the non-existence of a permanent Ego) is not pessimistic, nihilistic, or destructive; it is purely ethical. Conceiving that the Ego, with its abnormal outlook and its perpetual craving, is the basis of all sorrow, Gotama asks whether, after all, this ravaging Ego is real or imaginary. The conclusion that it is illusory seems to him a happy discovery, enabling man (not to plunge safely into a self-centred life of non-moral irresponsibility but) to free himself from monstrous errors regarding the relative importance of himself and the rest of the world, and so to overcome and ultimately annihilate the tormenting desires of egoism. And as he avoids Hedonism on the one hand, he escapes the more refined doctrine of enlightened self-interest on the other, and finds peace in an active self-forgetfulness.<sup>1</sup> It may be objected that his argument does not prove the non-existence, or even the transience, of the soul, but only that the survival of the soul is unproved. This conclusion would quite suffice for Gotama's purpose, which evidently was to diminish the exorbitant importance attached by his contemporaries<sup>2</sup> to the soul-theory and the consequent egoism and individualism of current thought.

There is a highly elaborate psychological literature on the khandhas,<sup>3</sup> or factors of which individuality is composed, but it shows every sign of having been developed long after Gotama's death. The manner of mention of the Khandhas in the First and Second Sermons at Benāres suggests that the fivefold division was familiar to the hearers and was a current pre-Buddhist analysis.<sup>4</sup> Possibly the analysis was made by Gotama and taught to his first disciples during the years of his asceticism, but there is no hint of this in the texts; and it may be observed that the philosophically trained Sāriputta and Moggallāna apparently before their conversion<sup>5</sup> were familiar with the idea, and possibly with the actual terms, of the analysis. Finally it may have been elaborated later, by Gotama or others, and added to the narrative as an expansion of the essential term saṃkhāra in order to emphasize the lesson of the transience of individuality. It seems desirable to translate these terms in a simple and popular manner, rather than with any attempt at the precision of psychology. Exact psychology can scarcely have been within the purpose of Gotama, who none the less may well have been, along with his hearers, accustomed to the idea of the individuality as a composite capable of some analysis. The more elaborate and pretentious the analysis the less likely it is to have been made by Gotama, and the more likely to have been added exegetically by his successors. It may be observed that the first three Khandhas seem to fit the case of animal natures; and the last two apply to human nature, which, with the acquisition of a pronounced personality, adds the faculty of knowledge to the humbler characteristics shared with lower natures.

The word saṃkhāra<sup>6</sup> is plainly the most important of the terms, for it is not only used to designate the fourth subdivision, but is also used comprehensively to connote all the five Khandhas, i.e. not only as individual character, will, or personality, but also as individuality in general, an individuality which is both composite and dependent and therefore perishable. There seems ample justification for translating saṃkhāra as 'will' or 'personal will'. This rendering makes the fivefold analysis of the Khandhas intelligible. Further it is supported by independent passages<sup>7</sup> in the Canon. In Mahā-vagga VI, xxxi, 2,<sup>8</sup> of the Vinaya Piṭaka, it is stated that Sīha the General, who desired to meet the Buddha, heard unfavourable reports concerning him, and thereupon his wish (will, saṃkhāra) to visit the Blessed One subsided; and again it is stated in MPS, iii, 10, that when the Buddha in extreme old age took the resolution to let his life come to an end he knowingly and consciously rejected the 'will to live (āyu-saṃkhāram)'.<sup>1</sup> This meaning is not inconsistent with 'individuality' or 'composite unity', the individual being primarily will and desire.

In the Chain of Causation viññāna and rūpa are universal; they are here in the Khandhas individual. It is not stated in either context, however, that the individual loses entirely these universal qualities, or that there is not a subconscious and universal substratum<sup>2</sup> below that which is particular in the individual. All that is particular and derivative is liable to suffering and deterioration; the All, the Self-same (Ātman), changes but does not suffer alteration, that is does not become other than it was, is not diminished or destroyed. It seems possible that the traditionary account of Gotama's Enlightenment<sup>3</sup> and the obscure theorizing of the Paṭicca-samuppāda<sup>4</sup> misrepresent a theory, which may without improbability be attributed to Gotama, that in kalpa after kalpa<sup>5</sup> there arise from the divine primæval source intelligent social beings and ultimately leaders<sup>6</sup> having the clear conception of the law of unity. The somewhat puzzling and difficult word amata,<sup>7</sup> which occurs in various parts of the Canon, may perhaps be rendered 'the impersonal (Eternal)'. It is this impersonality which remains when the personal, superimposed upon the impersonal, perishes. As one reads the Suttas one becomes conscious that in Gotama's theory the Soul, though individually it is transient, is essentially divine, arising as a flame<sup>8</sup> and passing away mysteriously. It is a compound of two parts, the individual or personal, which is mortal, and the impersonal, which is eternal. Life moulds and stamps the coin; death obliterates the superscription and releases the mysterious substance. Buddhism is not atheistic. To the Buddha the divinity is not a person<sup>9</sup> but a mystery, a spirit, and eternal substance, an impulse<sup>10</sup> pervading matter, informing and transcending<sup>11</sup> transient individuality—which in opposing its limitations to the Universal is the origin of all sorrow and ill<sup>12</sup>—and dwelling<sup>13</sup> in good-will, in pity, in sympathy with joy, and in serenity, and finding expression in beauty<sup>14</sup> and in truth].<sup>15</sup>

'I would answer thus: "This fire which burns before me depends on fuel of grass or wood." 'But if ... the fire should become extinguished (nibbayeyya) wouldst thou be aware that it was extinguished (nibbuto)?'<sup>8</sup> '... I should be aware that it was extinguished.' The later forms of Buddhism are difficult to grasp on account of their metaphysical subtlety. Difficulty in grasping the earliest form was due not to such subtlety, for the Four Noble Truths are simple enough, but to the individualism which is deeply rooted in human nature, though not more deeply than the social instinct. 'If there is no permanent-self,' says the excellent King Milinda in the post-canonical book Milinda-pañha (ed. Trenckner, p. 25, tr. Warren, Bm. in Tr., 1922, p. 130; see Ap. B b § 1 n), 'in that case, there is no merit; there is no demerit; there is no one who does or causes to be done meritorious deeds; neither good nor evil deeds can have any fruit or result.' That is, the convinced individualist, being released from hopes and fears of adequate reward and punishment, will cease to strive after good and to avoid evil, regardless of the inevitable effects of his actions, words, and thoughts upon others, the welfare of society, and the irrefragable unity of the whole into which all individuals are woven. To give up the egoistic point of view is necessarily supremely difficult.

b. Sorrow<sup>12</sup>

[Note. Selfish desire<sup>13</sup> is the root of all sorrow and ill; but that there is a 'noble craving',<sup>14</sup> which leads to joy,<sup>15</sup> was also taught by Gotama. That noble craving is to be rid of selfishness, to extinguish it in Nibbāna,<sup>16</sup> the selfless life on earth. It may be objected that in holding out to his followers the eradication of sorrow, Gotama was teaching a refined type of Epicureanism,<sup>17</sup> that is a system based ultimately upon egoism. In reply it may be asked how else could the Teacher have begun his appeal to an egoistic world than through that ego which is its sensitive point. He offers to a restless world the joy of peace, and so obtains a hearing. He proceeds to show that the pain which dims the world and casts a shadow over its pleasures has its root in the desires of the self,<sup>18</sup> and that if these personal and individualistic desires can be uprooted then sorrow will be up-rooted with them. His call to the self has now become a call to forget the self. The First Sermon promises the destruction of sorrow. The last stage of the Sermon proper is an appeal for an eightfold self-forgetful activity, and this appeal is accompanied, as in the earlier part of the Sermon, but with a difference, by a promise of the ensuing joy of peace. Some apparent contradiction is inevitable, since it corresponds with the natural fact, doubtless dependent on man's social nature,<sup>1</sup> that as self-forgetfulness increases so in the same degree does joy. Such joy follows as an inevitable effect; but if it is thrust forward as the object it vanishes, in accordance with the first Truth. The joy of Gotama's Nibbāna is an effect, not an object, though at first as he speaks it may gleam for a moment before the eyes of the selfish world as a lure. But the joy is real; there is no gloom in Gotama's Nibbāna; it is frankly and naturally glad. It may be remarked that gladness distinguishes the peoples who follow his creed; the pessimism attributed to it is visible only from the perhaps radically individualistic view-point of the West, which seeks the perpetuation of the perfected self and sees blank despair in ultimate, or present, self-oblivion.]

i. No Permanent Individual-Self (or permanently separate Self); the epithet an-atta or an-attā.

[Note. In stating, as he insistently does, that the individual has no attan (or atta; Sanskrit ātman) or Ego, Buddha necessarily means that the individual has no permanent Ego or radical individuality. That there are temporary Egos or individualities is self-evident; he necessarily speaks of himself and of his interlocutors as individuals. His whole mission was directed against the dangerous error of egoistic<sup>12</sup> or individualistic desire. The pursuit of the apparent interests of the temporary self, he showed, is delusive and absurd, because each Ego is a transient phenomenon arising momentarily out of and subsiding swiftly back into the Whole.<sup>13</sup> This doctrine is characteristic of the teaching of Buddha and distinguishes it from that of Hinduism, which in accepting Saṃsāra (transmigration) and (personal) Karma<sup>1</sup> attributes a lasting though not everlasting individuality to the soul. The ultimate escape from that individuality through the purgation of many lives is the object of Hinduism and of ordinary modern Buddhism; the immediate escape from it through the abandonment of selfishness in the present life,<sup>2</sup> and through the perception of the illusoriness of the self and consequently of all self-interest, is the object of the teaching of Gotama.

That orthodox Buddhism presents a reconciliation of these objects is due to the efforts of teachers later than Gotama. The formula of this reconciliation lays down that though there is no attan (permanent self or individuality), yet kamma (consequence of actions) passes on from one living being to another at the moment of death,<sup>3</sup> as a flame<sup>4</sup> is passed on from one lamp to another, until at last the force of Karma is extinguished by refinement. Of this mystical hypothesis the object doubtless was to secure the moral responsibility of the agent. But such responsibility is fully secured without recourse to the mystery of transmission of kamma at the death of one person to another single individual. Such transmission of the consequence of actions, including deeds, words, and thoughts, takes place momentarily, and not to one individual only but to many in unlimited succession. To the convinced egoist such consequence is doubtless a matter of indifference, but Gotama's whole teaching was devoted to the elimination of egoism, to proving its misery and its absurdity. To him the fears and rewards of the doctrine of personal Karma could make no appeal, but the extended moral effects of every deed, word, and thought were plainly evident.<sup>5</sup>

A later school of metaphysical Buddhism found in the Buddha's denial of the attan or Ego a proof of his purely idealistic or illusionist outlook;<sup>6</sup> but Gotama's aversion from metaphysics is well established,<sup>7</sup> as is his practical ethical interest in this world, with which and with whose inhabitants he busied himself daily for forty-five devotedly laborious years, after rejecting the isolation of the recluses. Gotama does not attempt to prove that there is neither a permanent Ego nor a transitory Ego, and that the world consequently is entirely illusory. He holds that the individual has no durable self, and that the selfish desires and supposed advantages of an Ego which is merely transitory are therefore trifling. But he takes much pains to lay down rules of conduct for all men, which he would certainly not have done if he had held that the individual had not even a transitory Ego. The Eightfold Way of Conduct is the very centre of his teaching;<sup>8</sup> right deed, word, and thought are of the first importance. Hindu predecessors of Gotama and his own later followers took up the extreme idealist position and taught the doctrine of Māyā or illusion. His own attitude towards them was much that of the Stoics towards the extreme idealism of the Academics and Sceptics.<sup>9</sup> Logic and metaphysics, in fact, so largely developed by his successors, did not appeal greatly to Gotama. He had the strong common sense of a man to whom a career of activity<sup>10</sup> was natural. He did not question the facts of which he had direct and instinctive knowledge. He would not trust his powerful reasoning faculty when it went beyond that immediate knowledge; but he reconciled the two. Not finding in the individual a lasting Ego, he did not decide that there was no Ego, for instinctive knowledge will not accept this extreme theory; but he concluded that the individual Ego is a transient phenomenon. Similarly he did not decide that the actions of this transient individuality are unimportant, for direct instinctive knowledge says the exact contrary; but he concluded that selfish interests are trivial, though so far as they affect the whole, which is lasting, they are of high import.<sup>1</sup>

tion"; or . . . he deems "Sensation is not myself, but myself is not without sensation, my self feels, my self has by nature sensation" (vedanā-dhammo).

[28] In that case, Ānanda, whoever says "Sensation is my self" must be answered thus: "There are three sensations,<sup>2</sup> friend (āvuso), pleasant (sukha) sensation, painful (dukkha)<sup>3</sup> sensation, and neither painful nor pleasant sensation. Which of these three sensations dost thou regard as the self?" Whenever, Ānanda, one feels a pleasant sensation one does not at the same time feel a painful sensation, nor does one feel a sensation neither painful nor pleasant, one feels at that time only a pleasant sensation. Whenever one feels a painful sensation . . . one feels at that time only a painful sensation. Whenever one feels a sensation neither painful nor pleasant . . . one feels at that time only a sensation neither painful nor pleasant.

[29] But pleasant sensations . . . painful sensations . . . sensations neither painful nor pleasant, Ānanda, are transitory (a-niccā),<sup>4</sup> made up<sup>5</sup> (saṃkhatā), originated by dependence (paṭicca-samuppannā),<sup>6</sup> are by nature decaying, perishable (vaya-dhammā),<sup>7</sup> fading away, and have by their nature cessation (nirodha-dhammā).<sup>8</sup> In him<sup>9</sup> thus feeling a pleasant sensation . . . a painful sensation . . . a sensation neither painful nor pleasant there arises the thought 'This is my self (me attā)'. After the cessation of this same . . . sensation the thought [necessarily] arises "My self has passed away"<sup>10</sup> (vyāgā). Thus the theorist who regards sensation as the self deems that even in this life (diṭṭhe va dhamme)<sup>11</sup> the self is transient, is pleasant, painful, and mixed, and has by nature rise and ending. Therefore, Ānanda, it is unsound for anyone to deem "Sensation is my self".

[30] In this case, Ānanda, whoever says "Sensation is not my self, my self is without sensation", must be answered thus: "But, friend, where there is no sensation at all, would there be any 'I am (asmīti)?' "<sup>12</sup> 'No indeed, revered sir'. Therefore, Ānanda, it is unsound for anyone to deem "Sensation is not my self, my self is without sensation".

[31] In that case, Ānanda, whoever says "Sensation is not my self, but my self is not without sensation, my self feels, my self has by nature sensation", must be answered thus: "If, friend, sensation were to cease completely, absolutely, and without remainder, when there was altogether no sensation, after the cessation of sensation would there be any "This am I" (ayam aham asmīti)?" "<sup>13</sup> 'No indeed, revered sir.' Therefore, Ānanda, it is unsound for anyone to deem "Sensation is not my self, but my self is not without sensation, my self feels, my self has by nature sensation."

<sup>13</sup> i.e. personal (feeling) self. See [30] above; cp. Ap. D b § 1. The argument has proved that the personal (feeling) self is transitory. There is nothing in this contrary to the Buddha's teaching, though a contradiction is here implied. The metaphysics here savour more of his followers than of the Teacher (Ap. G 1 a). It is to be observed that the argument assumes that there is a universal impersonal Self and that it cannot be extinguished, and also that it has no (personal) feelings (Ap. G 2 a). The dual nature of the individual, the personal and mortal, the universal and immortal (amata; Ap. C b § 2), as of a wave upon the ocean and of fire in the sunlight (Ap. E a ii § 4, 4) is here a cause of confusion.

[32] From the time that a mendicant brother neither deems that sensation is the self, nor deems that the self is without sensation, nor deems "My self feels, my self has by nature sensation", he no longer grasps at (upādiyati)<sup>1</sup> anything in the world, and not grasping he is not perturbed, and being unperturbed he attains complete Peace (pari-nibbāyati) even in himself (pacc-attam),<sup>2</sup> . . .<sup>3</sup> Now it is unsound that one should say of a mendicant brother thus liberated in mind (vimutta-cittam),<sup>4</sup> Ānanda, that his view<sup>5</sup> is that "The Follower (Tathāgato)<sup>6</sup> exists (hoti)<sup>7</sup> after death"<sup>8</sup> . . . § 8. Samyutta Nikāya, Khandha-vagga, Khandha-samyutta (Sam. xxii), Sutta 1 (Nakulapitar) 18-25.

<sup>6</sup> The scene is laid among the Bhaggas (Int. 164), on the Sumsumara Peak (Int. § 148, iv) in the Bhesakalā Wood in the Deer Park (see Ch. 5 a § 9 n). The householder having spoken with the Blessed One has approached the great disciple Sāriputta (Ch. 7 a § 18 [1]; Ch. 13 b § 4 [4] n). On the rebirths of Nakulapitar the Anguttara Commentary adds many strange details (ThB. p. 115; Ap. B a).

<sup>9</sup> Or, about this point; Ch. 12 c § 5 [3]; Ch. 12 e § 3 [2]; Ch. 13 c § 10 [24]; Ch. 14 b § 7 [3]; Ch. 15 a § 3 [13]; Ch. 16 a §§ 4 [9], 5 [3]; Ch. 16 d §§ 2 [8], 7 [5]; Ap. G 2 c § 3 (i) [19]. Contrast Ap. E c ii § 6 (20). Compare Ch. 13 c § 20 [7]; and Ch. 21 § 7 [25] (tattha).

'... He then sees clearly, in the light of the highest knowledge, [sammappaññāya], that when a cause is acting, or the fruit of an action [vipakapavattiyā] ripens, it is merely by a conventional form of speech [samaññā-mattena] that the wise speak of an actor or of any one as experiencing the fruit of an action. Therefore have the ancients said,

'No doer<sup>3</sup> is there does the deed,
Nor is there one who feels the fruit;
Constituent parts<sup>4</sup> (suddha-dhammā) alone roll on;
This view alone is orthodox.

'And thus the deed, and thus the fruit<sup>5</sup> [vipāke]
Roll on and on, each from its cause;
As of the round of tree and seed,
No one can tell when they began.

'Nor is the time to be perceived
In future births [samsāre] when they shall cease.
The heretics [titthiyā] perceive not this,
And fail of mastery o'er themselves.

'“An Ego”, say they, “doth exist [sattasaññaṃ gahetvā], Eternal, or that soon will cease”;
Thus two-and-sixty<sup>6</sup> heresies
They 'mongst themselves discordant hold.

'Bound in the bonds of heresy,
By passion's flood [taṇhā sotena] they're borne along;
And borne along by passion's flood,
From misery find they no release.

'If once these facts he but perceive,
A priest whose faith on Buddha rests,
The subtle, deep, and self-devoid
Dependence<sup>7</sup> then will penetrate.

'Not in its fruit<sup>1</sup> (vīpākamhi) is found the deed
Nor in the deed finds one the fruit;
Of each the other is devoid (suññā),
Yet there's no fruit (phalaṃ) without the deed.<sup>2</sup>

'Just as no store of fire is found
In jewel [mañhi],<sup>3</sup> cow-dung, or [the rays of] the sun,
Nor separate from these exists,
Yet short of fuel no fire is known [sambhārehi ca jāyati];<sup>4</sup>

'Even so we ne'er within the deed
Can retribution's fruit descry,
Nor yet in any place without;
Nor can in fruit the deed be found.

'Deeds separate [sunnam] from their fruits exist,
And fruits are separate from the deeds:
But consequent [upādāya] upon the deed
The fruit doth into being come.

'No god of heaven<sup>5</sup> or Brahma-world<sup>6</sup>
Doth cause the endless round of birth;<sup>7</sup>
Constituent parts<sup>8</sup> alone roll on,

ii. The Temporary Self,<sup>11</sup> Buddhist Self-reliance and Self-training.<sup>12</sup>

[Note. The emphasis which Gotama lays upon the necessity of self-reliance and self-training, as shown in the following extracts, is sufficient evidence, if evidence be needed, that by his an-atta doctrine he intends only that there is no permanent individuality, not that there is no temporary present Ego or that this life is in any sense unreal. The Brāhman idealistic doctrine of maya<sup>13</sup> or the illusoriness of this life can have made no appeal to the Teacher of the Noble Eightfold Path of duty.<sup>14</sup> Throughout Gotama's teaching it is implied that the self is real, however transient the individual,

THE ETHICAL SYSTEM<sup>1</sup> OF GOTAMA

I. ETHICS OF ACTION<sup>2</sup>

‘To do no harm, to be active in well-doing,
To purify one’s mind; this is the Law of the Enlightened Ones’, Dh. 183.

[Note. In promulgating the an-atta doctrine,<sup>3</sup> which emphasizes the impermanence of the individual soul, Gotama by no means advocated a negative or passive attitude towards the duties of this world. With the self-importance of the individual there disappear the exaggerated values and turmoil of life, but not the duties of life. Gotama’s ideal resembles the ‘imperturbability’ and the ‘indifference’ of Stoicism<sup>4</sup> towards individual interests; but as the Stoics inculcated a strong sense of social or ‘common’<sup>5</sup> duty, so Gotama taught an intense altruistic activity. The Teacher’s last words<sup>6</sup> inculcate strenuous endeavour and afford a fitting close to his own long life of arduous and masterly labour. The well-known Buddhist list of the ‘seven constituents of enlightenment’<sup>7</sup> includes the active virtues of heroism (or energy) and joy, as well as the passive virtues of tranquillity (or repose) and indifference (or serenity). These and other active virtues are also prominent among the Ten Perfections<sup>8</sup> which sum up the characteristics of a Bodhisatta. The classes to whom specific duties should be actively rendered are enumerated in the Sigālovāda Sutta.<sup>9</sup>

In the ‘graduated discourse’ which converted Yasa<sup>10</sup> the first section was a dāna-kathā, or discourse on giving,<sup>11</sup> and the second a sīla-kathā, or discourse on virtuous action.<sup>12</sup> This sermon was evidently repeated constantly. It is natural that in the forefront of a religion of altruism such as Gotama’s there should be placed spontaneous giving of alms or material charity as first of all the practical virtues. Along with it must be placed the

THE HARE BIRTH

[p. 51] . . .<sup>6</sup> 'Long ago when Brahmadata was ruling in Benāres<sup>7</sup> the Bodhisatta<sup>8</sup> came to birth again as a hare, and lived in a wilderness. On one side of this wilderness there was mountain country, on one side a river, and on another a frontier village.<sup>9</sup> And there were three others—a monkey, a jackal, and an otter—his friends. These four wise beings living together took their food each in his own feeding place, and in the evening used to assemble together. The wise hare by admonition to the three animals

The verses which are comprised in the Birth Stories contained in the Jātaka Commentary form together one of the Parts or Books of the 5th Nikāya (Ap. A 1 a, Note) of the Sutta Piṭaka, but they are scarcely intelligible by themselves. The necessary prose setting has for the most part come down to us only in the Jātaka Commentary, but the extent of the changes made during the process (Ch. 14 b § 7 [3] n) cannot be ascertained. The Commentary, or at least the nucleus of it, most probably was translated from the archaic Sinhalese (Int. § 21). Gotama is supposed to be the narrator of the Stories. Many of the tales are probably in germ more ancient than the time of the Buddha, and were altered and attributed to the great moral teacher apparently by later generations because of their ethical nature. They all assume the verity of the doctrine of transmigration in the literal Hindu sense (Ap. B a). The morality of these Birth Stories is sometimes decidedly dubious and childish, and not at all in character with the Teacher; for example in No. 208 the Bodhisatta, or future Buddha, in monkey form gets the better of his deceitful crocodile opponent by telling an even bigger falsehood than his adversary and then jeers at him for his size and stupidity.

would make known the Law, saying "Alms<sup>1</sup> must be given, duty<sup>2</sup> must be kept, holy-day observances<sup>3</sup> must be practised". They having accepted his admonition would enter each his own dwelling-place in the thicket and stay there. [p. 52] Thus time passed and one day the Bodhisatta looking at the sky and observing the moon and perceiving "To-morrow will be holy-day" said to the three others: "To-morrow will be holy-day; do you three observe your duty and keep the day. Almsgiving, based on duty,<sup>4</sup> is very fruitful; therefore if any beggars arrive you should feed them, giving them the food which was to be eaten by yourselves." They saying "Good" assented, and each then stayed in his own dwelling-place. On the next day very early the otter, saying "I will search for food", having gone out went to the bank of the Ganges. Now a fisherman had caught seven red fish and strung them on a rush string, and having buried them in the sand on the bank of the Ganges, had gone down the Ganges fishing. The otter scenting the smell of the fish removed the sand and seeing the fish took them out. Having called out three times "Is there any owner of these" and seeing no owner, he gripped the rush string with his teeth and put the fish in his own dwelling-place in the thicket, and thinking "I will eat these at the right time" he lay down and reflected on his own duty. The jackal likewise went out in search of food, and saw in the hut of a field-watcher two spits of meat, a large lizard, and a jar of curds. Having called out three times "Is there any owner of these" and seeing no owner, he put the string handle of the jar over his neck and gripped the spits of meat and the lizard between his teeth and taking them away he put them in his own lair in the thicket, and thinking "I will eat these at the right time" he lay down and reflected on his own duty. [p. 53] The monkey likewise going into the woodland fetched a heap of mangoes and put them in his own dwelling-place in the thicket, and thinking "I will eat these at the right time" he lay down and reflected on his own duty.

But the Bodhisatta lay in his own thicket, and he thought: "At the right time I will go out and eat sweet grass. It is not possible to give grass to beggars who may come to me, but I have no sessamum, rice, and such like; if a beggar comes to me I will give him my own body to eat". Through the radiance of his duty the throne of Sakka,<sup>5</sup> made of pale precious stone, glowed like embers. Sakka pondering on this perceived the cause and thought "I will test the king of hares".

First he went to the dwelling-place of the otter and stood there in the form of a Brāhman.<sup>6</sup> And on being asked "Brāhman, why standest thou there?" he replied "Pundit,<sup>7</sup> if I obtain some food, then keeping the holy-day I shall perform what is ordained for a devotee".<sup>8</sup> The other said

The Brāhman said "It is right early,<sup>2</sup> let it be for a while; I will decide later", and went to the jackal; and on being asked "Brāhman, why standest thou there?" he replied in the same way. [p. 54] The jackal said "Good, I will give", and in conversation with him uttered the second verse:

"I have carried away the evening meal of a certain field-watcher,

This, O Brāhman, is what I have; eat it and stay here in the grove".

The Brāhman said "It is right early, let it be for a while; I will decide later", and went to the monkey; and on being asked "Brāhman, why standest thou there?" he replied in the same way. The monkey said "Good, I give", and in conversation with him uttered the third verse:

"Ripe mangoes, cold water, and cool delightful shade,

This, O Brāhman, is what I have; eat and stay here in the grove".

The Brāhman said "It is right early, let it be for a while; I will decide later".

Then he went to the wise hare, and on being asked "Brāhman, why standest thou there?" he replied in the same way. Hearing him the Bodhisatta was delighted and said: "Brāhman, thou hast done well in coming to me for food; to-day I will give a gift which I never gave before, yet thou dutifully wilt not have caused destruction of life. Go thou, friend,<sup>3</sup> collect sticks, make a fire and inform me. I will give up myself and leap into the midst of the fire, and when my body is cooked eat thou the flesh and perform what is ordained for a recluse". [p. 55] And in conversation with him he uttered the fourth verse:

"A hare has no sessamum, no beans, no rice.

Sakka having heard his words built a heaped-up fire by his own power and informed the Bodhisatta. The latter rising from his lair of sweet grass went to the fire, and saying "If there are insects in my fur they must not be killed" shook his body three times. Then giving his own body as a gift he leapt and fell upon the heaped-up fire as greatly delighted in mind as a royal swan amidst a cluster of lotuses.<sup>4</sup> But the fire was not able to make hot even a pore of the skin of the Bodhisatta's body, and he felt like one who has plunged into the midst of snow. Then addressing Sakka he said: "Brāhman, the fire made by thee is very cold and is not able to make hot even a pore of the skin of my body. Why is this?" "Pundit," said he, "I am no Brāhman; I am Sakka, come to test thee". Then the Bodhisatta cried a cry of exultation:<sup>5</sup> "O Sakka, stay I pray! If the whole company of the world should put me to the test through giving it would not see in me

Then Sakka said to him "Wise hare, let thy merit become familiar to the whole of this age",<sup>1</sup> and having pressed a mountain and taken its essence he painted on the circle of the moon the sign of a hare; and having addressed the Bodhisatta he laid him upon tender sweet grass in that woodland in the thicket, and was gone to his own divine abode. Between selfish desire, based on individualism, and an ardent desire for the welfare of others, such as the Teacher himself exhibited throughout his long life, there is all the difference in the world.<sup>11</sup> The inculcation of goodwill, charity, and universal love, is an essential part of Gotama's teaching. So greatly did this virtue figure in the Buddhist view that ultimately, in Mahāyānist Buddhism, it became personified as Metteyya<sup>12</sup> or the Loving Spirit, the coming Buddha, who after the age of Gotama Buddha would in due course come to enlighten mankind anew. Mettā is the first of the Divine Qualities (Brahma-vihārā),<sup>13</sup> and the ninth of the Ten Perfections,<sup>14</sup> both of these lists culminating in serenity (upekkhā),<sup>15</sup> a virtue based upon, not contrary to, well-doing.]

These two virtues are magnanimous tolerance and balance of mind rather than indifference. Upekkhā is unshaken calmness, not apathy or impassivity. Compare the Stoic 'unperturbedness' (Int. § 101). Ch. 20 § 5 (7); Ap. F 2 b (upekkhā); cp. Ch. 16 a § 5 [3] (vii), (viii).

[Note. In the first part of the Tevijja Sutta<sup>3</sup> the Buddha ridicules the idea of union with the God Brahmā since that deity has not been seen by anyone and is not known to anyone. Suddenly the Teacher enumerates the beautiful Brahma-vihāras or Divine Qualities. The word brahma-vihāra means literally not only holy states or stations but holy abiding places, and this meaning may be interpreted as signifying that the fundamental divine impersonal spirit<sup>4</sup> pervading and unifying all things abides especially in these beautiful unifying virtues. The suggestion may be ventured that these four 'divine' feelings can be found to be the four principal moods of music, which may be regarded as the most beautiful, because the most harmonious, expression to which the human spirit can be impelled.

The passage below sets forth the Brahma-vihāras though it does not give them that title, but calls them the brahma-uccāsayana, the holy 'high-seat' or 'throne'.]

[Note. In the poetic use of the term Brahman, signifying 'a Brāhman indeed' or 'a true Brāhman', we see apparently the original meaning of the title, namely one who participates in the nature of the Divine One, Brahman,<sup>13</sup> not a priest of the personal God Brahṃā,<sup>14</sup> nor necessarily a caste man. The root idea of a Brāhman caste is that of unity with and power over a fundamental impersonal force, Brahman (Sanskrit, neuter), through spiritualistic and magical knowledge, inherited and kept strictly secret in a limited circle. Against this idea Gotama habitually protested, declaring that true priesthood or superiority lies in right thought, word, and act. Thus Gotama may safely be considered to have been familiar with the idea of an impersonal all-pervading Brahman, an All-One, a fundamental force underlying the phenomenal world, the universal soul (Param-ātman, Ātman, Sanskrit; attan or atta,<sup>15</sup> in Pāli) resembling and connected with the personal soul (ātman, Sanskrit; attan or atta,<sup>16</sup> in Pāli) of the individual, as

[Note. It is to the Fourth Noble Truth, that of the Noble Eightfold Path or Way, that the first three Noble Truths of Gotama's teaching lead. Without this final Truth his teaching would have remained negative and passive; with it the doctrine of the first three Truths becomes positive and active.<sup>22</sup> Without it the doctrine would have been, what it is so often charged with being, pessimistic; with it the Dhamma still is, what so many critics are surprised to see it in practice, a religion of cheerfulness and of something more than resignation, namely courage and well-doing. <sup>22</sup> Ap. F 1.

Eightfold Path is the practical way of right thought, right speech, and right act,<sup>1</sup> based upon the theory of the first three Truths, namely that in selfishness or individualism is the root of all sorrow and evil. Uproot selfishness and life will no longer be sorrowful, but full of gladness.<sup>2</sup>

The fourth Truth is the core of Gotama's teaching. The eightfold division, though it may not be scientific, is practical enough, and covers the whole duty of man, who must look at the world rightly, that is unselfishly, and train his wishes accordingly, speak and act accordingly, earn his livelihood and exert himself actively in accordance with the same principle; and finally live thoughtfully and practise a deep religious feeling, surveying worthily the underlying mystery of life.

The nature of the Way shows clearly the nature of the liberation<sup>3</sup> which it offers. The freedom offered was not the philosopher's or Yogi's escape from an illusory world,<sup>4</sup> not the ascetic's aloofness<sup>5</sup> from the world of labour and duty, but the plain and kindly man's emergence from the dominion of self-interest, out of which he is guided by his fellow-traveller, the mendicant-monk. From the beginning the dutiful layman and laywoman figured prominently in Gotama's following.<sup>6</sup> The mendicants or friars were the chosen agents for spreading the faith broadcast; the best examples of dutifulness, not a grade through which it was necessary to pass in order to obtain personal salvation.<sup>7</sup> It is to be noticed that the Noble Eightfold Way is not represented as leading to any personal reward. It merely leads away from selfish individualism, and only thus leaves sorrow behind. Sorrow will only be out-distanced when self is forgotten and no reward is claimed.<sup>8</sup>

The 'graduated discourse'<sup>9</sup> of the Conversion Sermons and the 'comprehensive religious discourse'<sup>10</sup> of the Mahā-parinibbāna Sutta are re-statements of the Eightfold Path. The Ten Prohibitions<sup>11</sup> and the Eightfold Path are respectively negative and positive developments of the first Three Truths or rather of that third Truth which requires the destruction or renunciation of egoistic desire. The Ten Fetters<sup>12</sup> and the Ten Perfections<sup>13</sup> are similarly negative and positive extensions of the same. The prefix sammā-,<sup>14</sup> attached to the title of each section of the Path, is not quite satisfactorily translated by the word 'right' which in this context has no very precise meaning. The prefix probably has much the same generally eulogistic signification as the epithet ariya (Noble) attached to each of the Four Truths.

Like other parts of Gotama's doctrine and practice the Eightfold Path may have been suggested to him by the teaching of his contemporaries. It is possible that the Path is an adaptation and spiritualization of an earlier Sāṅkhya<sup>15</sup> octave intended to induce trance and so to liberate the spirit from the entanglement of matter.]

I. THE LIMITATIONS OF THE DHAMMA

a. Gotama's positivism, realism, and rationalism;<sup>2</sup> his purely ethical outlook;<sup>3</sup> his opposition to transcendental, idealistic, and metaphysical views,<sup>4</sup> and to formal or ritualistic practices.<sup>5</sup>

[Note. The first two extracts below<sup>6</sup> state emphatically the positive outlook of the Dhamma.<sup>7</sup> The succeeding extracts<sup>8</sup> declare the Buddha's marked opposition to metaphysical speculation as leading the mind into regions of unprofitable turmoil and unease, away from the essentials of religion, the cessation of desire and passion, the ethical problem of the removal of egoism. Such metaphysical subjects are the themes of the philosophic schools<sup>9</sup> described in the Brahmajāla Sutta.<sup>10</sup> These passages declare that the doctrine of the Noble Truths concerning the eradication of Egotism is all-important, and that its metaphysical background may be left out of account. That Gotama himself examined the background is, however, practically certain, his long course of training, previous to his enlightenment, ensures it. That background<sup>11</sup> is the reality of things and their fundamental unity. The refusal to enter upon metaphysical discussions implies (1) that average persons cannot reason metaphysically with any clearness or advantage; (2) that the world is what it appears to be, no illusion but real. No māyā-ist (illusionist) could have consistently refused to discuss the questions which Gotama pushed aside. The last two extracts<sup>12</sup> repudiate dogmatic authority and insist on self-reliant reasoning, and override the assumptions of Hindu dogmatic orthodoxy. The highest wisdom for Gotama is not mystical knowledge or supernatural acquaintance with the past or future,<sup>13</sup> as might sometimes be supposed from the later texts; it has nothing to do with secret knowledge or magic<sup>14</sup> of any kind. It is simply, as here stated, a knowledge of the Four Noble Truths, implying as these do the perception of the transience<sup>1</sup> of the ego and the error of selfishness. The attitude shown in these extracts agrees remarkably with the decisive, realistic, judicial, and serenely moderate and practical character<sup>2</sup> illustrated by the many rulings of the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga of the Vinaya Piṭaka. From the purely ethical foundation of his beliefs there would naturally arise that toleration of other creeds which was a marked characteristic both of the Teacher and of his imperial follower Asoka.<sup>3</sup> All creeds which arise from the altruistic ideal must be akin.<sup>4</sup>

It seems altogether improbable that these passages should mean that the Buddhist must ignore all other speculative theories and accept only the belief that the uprooting of desire will lead to ultimate escape from the otherwise endless succession of rebirths,<sup>5</sup> by means of steadily improving stages of existence, a belief which seems to imply a fiercely tenacious egoism<sup>6</sup> entirely opposed to the destruction of desire. In the fourth extract Uttiya characteristically does not ask the reasons for Gotama's refusal to solve the metaphysical problems put to him, but proceeds to ask the irrelevant and futile karma-ist question whether the whole of the world, or half, or a third part, will be saved by the Law which he preaches. The Teacher naturally meets this question with silence; and here doubtless the Sutta should properly end. It seems justifiable to conclude from Gotama's silence his indifference to the whole theory of the salvation of the world by purification during transmigration. That he did not wish to attack it seems clear enough also from the fact that such attacks by the Teacher are not recorded, though he certainly was accused of being an a-kiriya-vādin<sup>7</sup> or opponent of the doctrine of Karma. But whilst he did not accept he plainly did not desire to assail a doctrine which so strongly taught the moral responsibility of the individual.<sup>8</sup> The reporter or compiler who attributed this closing passage of the Sutta to Ānanda<sup>9</sup> evidently felt that Uttiya's last question was no more irrelevant than his earlier questions. But it would seem that in this he missed the point of the positive part of Gotama's answer, namely 'I reveal the Law for the removal of sorrow and the realization of Nibbāna'. The Law is the way or path to freedom. Whether all the world or only a portion of the world shall travel by it is a separate question altogether; very important doubtless to believers in the doctrine of transmigration, but of secondary importance to Gotama and to those who feel with him that the problem of life is the attainment of selflessness and the showing of the Way, so that in each generation those following it may increase in number as far as possible.<sup>10</sup> In the former case, those who do not follow now the right path to liberty must wander through the ages till they find it hereafter. In the second case, there is no wandering except in this life of the temporary ego, whose sorrows may be assuaged by finding and following the Path. The reason for his blank and repeated refusal to solve metaphysical questions is that whatever the answers to them the fact of sorrow remains, and sorrow arises only from selfishness and individualism, the removal of which alone is Gotama's mission. It seems quite impossible to reconcile the attitude here taken by Gotama either with the doctrine of transmigration or with the orthodox Buddhist modification of that belief.<sup>1</sup> In rejecting metaphysics he can scarcely have intended to advise his followers to abandon such speculations only in order to favour a similar method of his own for curtailing the fatigue of recurring existences.

With this attitude of Gotama before the great problems of metaphysics may be compared that of Marcus Aurelius,<sup>2</sup> who finds that whatever their solutions a man can still hold his soul firm and live the natural, that is, the social, life of duty and happiness.]

(1) [p. 426] Thus was it heard by me. Once the Blessed One stayed at Sāvaththi<sup>3</sup> in the Jeta Grove, Anāthapiṇḍika's garden.<sup>4</sup> At that time whilst the venerable Māluṅkyāputta<sup>5</sup> was alone and quiet<sup>6</sup> a reflection arose in his mind thus: "These theories<sup>7</sup> which are unexplained, set aside, and rejected by the Blessed One: "the world (loko)<sup>8</sup> is eternal<sup>9</sup> (sassato)", "the world is not eternal"; "the world is finite (antavā)", "the world is infinite"; "the soul (jīvam)<sup>10</sup> is [the same as] the body (sarīram)",<sup>11</sup> "the soul is other than the body"; "the Right-farer (tathāgato)<sup>12</sup> continues to be after death . . . does not continue . . . both continues and does not continue . . . neither continues nor does not continue to be after death (paraṃ maranā)":<sup>13</sup> these the Blessed One does not explain to me; and that the Blessed One does not explain them to me does not please me, does not seem fitting to me. . . ."<sup>14</sup>

In the theory called the dhamma-cakkhu and in the khandhā and an-attā doctrines Gotama seems to infringe his rule of silence on metaphysical subjects. He states in the first that all things originated or caused have a cessation (Ch. 5 c § 7), in the second that the individual self is compounded (Ap. E a ii), and in the third that the individuality is not the permanent Self (Ch. 5 c § 3 [45], Self; Ap. E c i). These three points amount to the dual inference that the individual self is transient and the uncaused Self endures (Ch. 7 a § 19 n; Ap. G 2 a). In any case, whatever the answers to metaphysical problems, the practical and social need of overcoming individualistic desire remains (Int. § 10).

<sup>26</sup> Whether escape from rebirth or merely from sorrow is not made clear. If Uttiya is a mere sceptic, either of these meanings would suit the purpose of his question, namely to force a confession of ignorance. If the first interpretation be accepted Gotama ignores rebirth; and if the second, both Gotama and Uttiya do so.

[3] Then to the venerable Ānanda<sup>1</sup> this thought came: 'Let not Uttiya the Wanderer receive from this the wrong opinion (dāṭṭhi-gataṃ):<sup>2</sup> "Strange indeed that the recluse Gotama, when asked a question, is overwhelmed and does not reply; it is evident that he cannot": for this would be to the disadvantage and sorrow of Uttiya the Wanderer for a long time.' Then the venerable Ānanda thus addressed Uttiya the Wanderer:

[4] 'As regards this, friend Uttiya, I will make thee a comparison; for some wise men learn by comparison<sup>3</sup> the meaning (attham)<sup>4</sup> of a statement. It is as if,<sup>5</sup> friend Uttiya, a king has a border town<sup>6</sup> (nagaram), with strong foundations, walls, and gates and but one entrance. Of this there is a door-keeper, wise, sagacious, intelligent, turning back anyone not known and admitting anyone known to him; and he, going along the path encircling that town on all sides, can observe no joint or hole in the walls large enough for even a cat to get out by. Now he does not reason thus, "Just so many beings (pāṇā)<sup>7</sup> either enter or leave this town"; but his reasoning on the matter is thus, "Whatsoever beings of any considerable size either enter or leave this town, all of them enter or leave by this door". And thus, friend Uttiya, the Tathāgata's desire is not "All the world (loko) shall escape by this way, or half the world, or a third-part"; but he thinks regarding the matter thus: "Whatsoever persons have escaped from this world (lokamhā),<sup>8</sup> or are escaping, or shall escape, all of them, having rid<sup>9</sup> themselves of the five<sup>10</sup> hindrances (nivāraṇe),<sup>11</sup> those passions of the mind (cetaso upakkilese)<sup>12</sup> causing weakness of understanding (paññāya),<sup>13</sup> and by means of the four meditations (sati-paṭṭhānesu)<sup>14</sup> having become firm-minded, having developed truly (yathā bhūtaṃ) the seven faculties (bojjh-āṅge)<sup>15</sup>—these persons have escaped from the world thus, or are escaping, or will escape". When therefore, friend Uttiya, thou askedst this question of the Blessed One, thou really askedst the [previous] question<sup>16</sup> in another manner. Therefore the Blessed One did not explain to thee.'

The paragraphs following are given here as illustrating the way in which additions to the Canon probably occurred (IN 6, Canon). Feeling that the Buddha should not be made to seem non-plussed, a later redactor, as it would appear, has put a defence of Gotama's silence into Ānanda's mouth; as though the brilliant intellect of the Master required assistance from his good, loving, and faithful, but avowedly backward, cousin and disciple, Ānanda. ### b. Essentials of the Dhamma<sup>11</sup>

[Note. Of the enthusiasm aroused by Gotama's teaching there is abundant evidence.<sup>12</sup> The message must have been new and of a singularly lofty nature. The doctrine of samsāra<sup>13</sup> was not new; similarly the theory of a gradual escape from the pains of samsāra through Karma<sup>14</sup> is old, and it has always aroused patient endurance rather than enthusiasm. The novelty lay in the sense of sudden escape through the doctrine of Non-Ego,<sup>15</sup> or realization of the transience of the individual ego; but this in itself would have been in no sense lofty, and little liable to arouse moral enthusiasm, without its correlative, the doctrine of altruism, self-sacrifice, and service<sup>16</sup> implied in the Eightfold Way,<sup>17</sup> as that of Non-Ego is in the first three of the Noble Truths. Whatever view of the nature of Buddha's doctrine be taken, it must be sufficient to account for the enthusiastic reception which quickly gave it religious pre-eminence in India. It is not sufficient to attribute to it mere re-arrangement of the subtleties of Hindu metaphysics, for these do not supply the necessary moral vigour to account for its rapid growth.

In many passages<sup>18</sup> in the Suttas Gotama declares that his essential message is the four Truths. In some of the following extracts the theme is stated somewhat more fully, but the basis of these amplifications remains always the Truth of the sorrowfulness of individuality, the Truth of the origin of that sorrow in individualistic craving, the Truth of the cessation of craving and of sorrow, and the Truth of the way to that cessation. In the fourth passage below, quoted from the Mahā-parimibbāna-Sutta, the Buddha is represented as answering his own question 'What is the Dhamma?' All the points mentioned in his answer are explained in the long summary of the Dhamma called the Mahā-satipatthāna-Sutta,<sup>1</sup> except the four 'efforts',<sup>2</sup> the four roads to iddhi (power) and the five 'moral forces'. As regards the four roads to iddhi (iddhi-pādā),<sup>3</sup> these are merely concentration (1) of purpose, (2) of energy, (3) of mind, (4) of thought. And the five 'moral forces' (balāni or indriyāni)<sup>4</sup> are (1) faith (saddhā),<sup>5</sup> (2) energy (virīya), (3) recollection (sati), (4) contemplation (samādhi), (5) intuition (paññā), three of which are also included in the next group, the seven 'parts of wisdom' (bojjh-anga).<sup>6</sup> Thus, apart from the possibly, but not necessarily, mystical meaning of iddhi, the 'Law' resolves itself into first, meditation on, or realization of, the transient nature of the body, sensations and mind, and of the conditions of existence, and last, the eightfold path of duty, the intermediate points being merely links between the two. Nothing is said here of the doctrine of rebirth.<sup>7</sup>

In the first passage<sup>8</sup> below, quoted from the Culla-vagga of the Vinaya Piṭaka, the Buddha is represented as declaring that the one savour of the Law is 'liberation', that is the peace of liberation<sup>9</sup> from egoistic desire. Such liberation is the Buddha's Nirvāna,<sup>10</sup> which is thus the very centre of the teaching of Gotama; but this Nirvāna is the present peace of self-forgetful activity, not the attainment of an individual advantage hereafter. With this Nirvāna the four beautiful divine virtues (Brahma-vihārā)<sup>11</sup> of Love, Pity, Sympathy, and Serenity fully accord, as being themselves various aspects of one harmonious end, and not mere means to personal gain. The Eightfold Path is directed to the attainment of nibbāna,<sup>12</sup> and the Ordination formula promises the complete end of sorrow.<sup>13</sup> The end of sorrow is nibbāna in this life, the state in which one no longer thinks "Such an one is superior to me".<sup>14</sup> The enthusiasm with which the teaching of Gotama was early received was due evidently not to its adoption of the ancient and sorrowful doctrine of rebirth, but to its offering an immediate escape from that sad and egotistical process. Doubtless the Buddha's present Nirvāna was often popularly mistaken for an immediate heaven,<sup>15</sup> self-interest thus creeping back.]

c. The Dhamma as summarized in the Edicts of the Emperor Asoka<sup>10</sup>

[Note. An examination of the Edicts of the famous Buddhist emperor Asoka, issued about two and a half centuries after the closing years of Gotama's ministry, seems to bear out the contention that the ethics of the Truths<sup>11</sup> and the Way<sup>12</sup> are the sole essentials of the Dhamma. Though the Four Truths are not specifically mentioned they are implicitly referred to throughout the Edicts, which breathe a spirit of active altruism and self-control. 'The welfare of all folk is what I must work for', writes that pious monarch, 'and the root of that, again, is in effort and the dispatch of business.'<sup>13</sup> "The Law of Piety is excellent", he quotes, and then proceeds to summarize the Law: 'but wherein consists the Law of Piety? In these things, to wit, little impiety,<sup>14</sup> many good deeds, compassion, liberality, truthfulness, and purity.'<sup>15</sup> He enjoins his officers 'to give instruction in the Law of Piety, to wit: "A meritorious thing is the hearkening to father and mother,<sup>16</sup> a meritorious thing is liberality to friends, acquaintances, relatives, Brāhmins,<sup>17</sup> and ascetics; a meritorious thing is abstention from the slaughter of living creatures;<sup>1</sup> a meritorious thing is small expense and small accumulation.”<sup>2</sup> And similarly he writes that upon persons of various denominations, or householders is laid ‘this duty of hearkening to superiors, hearkening to father and mother, hearkening to teachers, and proper treatment of friends, acquaintances, comrades, relatives, slaves, and servants, with fidelity of attachment.’<sup>3</sup> The Emperor, according to the usual but not necessarily correct rendering of the Edicts looks to ‘the next (or other) world’ and to ‘heaven’.<sup>4</sup> ‘Whatsoever exertions I make’, he announces,<sup>5</sup> ‘are for the end that I may discharge my debt to animate beings, and that while in this world I make some persons happy, they may win heaven in the world beyond.’<sup>6</sup> ‘The Ceremonial’<sup>7</sup> of Piety [the Dhamma], he declares, ‘is not temporal; because even if it fails to attain the desired end in this world,’<sup>8</sup> it certainly produces endless merit in the world beyond.<sup>9</sup> If it happens to attain the desired end here, then both gains are assured, namely, in this world the desired end, and in the world beyond endless merit is produced by that Ceremonial<sup>10</sup> of Piety.’<sup>11</sup> Thus, according to this interpretation, Asoka is not able to dispense with religious sanctions, and heaven and the next world are held forth as rewards for right conduct here; but no mention whatever of transmigration<sup>12</sup> is made in the Edicts. It may be that the present peace of the Nibbāna of Gotama’s teaching, in the two and a half centuries which elapsed between his ministry and the period of the Edicts, had become the more easily comprehended and popular future ‘Heaven’ to his imperial follower,<sup>13</sup> and was to be lost, at some later period, in that anxious succession of past and future states preliminary to total extinction, which constitutes the main feature of ancient and modern Hindu belief.<sup>14</sup> The doctrine of rebirth or personal Karma, already common in Indian thought, thus apparently was introduced into Buddhism subsequently to the period of Asoka’s Edicts, since the pious Emperor ignores it, whereas ‘heaven’ (svarga, sagga, svaga) is mentioned some seven times and ‘this side and the other side’ or similar terms are used some sixteen times in the surviving inscriptions.

All depends on the proper translation of sagga and of idha (hida) and paratrā (palata). Sagga may mean not a future heaven but the present peace of Nibbāna in this life (Ap. C b; see §§ 2, 7, below; Ch. 6 a § 4 [5]; Ch. 9 b § 2 [3]). Idha and paratrā (Ap. E c ii § 6, 20) may mean not ‘this side and the other side’ of death, but ‘this side and the other side’ of that stream which is reached by the sota-parma at the time of conversion (Int. § 12; Ch. 14 b § 8 [2] n; Ap. C b § 11 (370); Ap. D c, stages; cp. orimam tiram and pārimam tiram, in Ch. 14 f § 1 [210]; Ap. H 4 a § 3; and Ch. 8 j § 6 [3]). This rendering has the advantage of presenting the Emperor to his subjects as a sagacious practical ruler rather than as a pious zealot. No mention of a correlative hell is made.

<sup>13</sup> Meanwhile the opposite and more philosophical Mahāyāna movement (Int. § 21) arose as a new effort to transcend individualism and insisted not merely that individuality was transient but that the whole world was a figment. Int. §§ 11, 48 n (Heaven).

Besides the schisms created by Devadatta<sup>1</sup> and the Six Buddhist Dissentients (the Cha-bbaggiyā)<sup>2</sup> constantly mentioned in the Vinaya-Piṭaka there doubtless arose various sects in the Buddhist Church within the two hundred and fifty years immediately succeeding Gotama's death. To some of these allusion is made in Asoka's Sārnāth Edict.<sup>3</sup> But there seems little reason to doubt that the main teachings of the Buddha still dominated the Church and are represented adequately by the Dhamma of Asoka. The Kathā-vatthu,<sup>4</sup> the fifth book of the Abhidhamma-Piṭaka, which is traditionally but doubtfully<sup>5</sup> stated to have been composed by Tissa Moggali-putta in Asoka's reign, sets forth the controversial questions which early arose.

That the Emperor summoned a Buddhist Council<sup>6</sup> to settle the Canonical texts before sending forth his religious missions, mentioned in Rock Edict XIII,<sup>7</sup> seems more than likely. The circumstances indeed almost necessitated this measure. But it may well have been an informal affair since the Edicts say nothing on the subject. It is difficult to avoid feeling that the Pāli Canon<sup>8</sup> as known to us, though it probably includes the Canon of Asoka's time, comprises much more and was brought together as a whole at a later period, and further that the first four Nikāyas, and even the older Suttas included in them, contain much added matter, though some less than others. The texts mentioned by the Emperor as pre-eminent passages<sup>9</sup> are doubtless included in the Canon as we know it, but probably imbedded in later accretions.

Vincent Smith's translation of the Edicts (third edition, 1920) is here used. Different renderings have been suggested in footnotes. The original texts, as found in all the different versions of the rock and pillar inscriptions hitherto discovered, are collected and edited, with an English translation, in Hultsch's learned edition, published by the Government of India in 1925. The texts transliterated in Roman characters are collated and a Glossary of all words used is given in A. C. Woolner's Asoka, 1924.]

The Address to Rāhula,<sup>12</sup> beginning with the Subject<sup>13</sup> of Falsehood—spoken by the Venerable [Bhagavatā] Buddha—these, Reverend Sirs, I desire that many monks<sup>14</sup> and nuns<sup>15</sup> should frequently hear and meditate; and that likewise the laity, male and female [upāsakā ca upāsikā ca], should do the same.

For this reason, Reverend Sirs, I cause this to be written, so that people may know my intentions.<sup>16</sup>

Thus saith His Sacred Majesty:<sup>2</sup>

For more than two-and-a-half years I was a lay disciple,<sup>3</sup> without, however, exerting myself strenuously. But it is more than a year since I joined<sup>4</sup> the Order, and have exerted myself strenuously.<sup>5</sup>

The gods<sup>6</sup> who up to this time had been unassociated<sup>7</sup> [with men] in India (Jambudvīpa)<sup>8</sup> have now become associated.

For this<sup>9</sup> is the fruit of exertion.<sup>10</sup> Nor is this to be attained by greatness only, because even by the small man who exerts himself immense heavenly bliss<sup>11</sup> may be won.

For this purpose has the proclamation been made:<sup>12</sup> 'Let small and great exert themselves.' . . .<sup>13</sup>

§ 3. Minor Rock Edict II (Brahmagiri text).<sup>14</sup>

Thus saith His Sacred Majesty:

Father and mother<sup>15</sup> must be hearkened to; similarly, respect for living creatures<sup>16</sup> must be firmly established; the truth<sup>17</sup> must be spoken. These are the virtues<sup>18</sup> of the Law which must be practised. Similarly the teacher (ācariye) must be revered by the pupil (aṃtevāsīnā), and fitting courtesy must be shown to relations.

<sup>5</sup> Devā; Int. § 49. In the Edicts this word is used only in this passage excepting in the title Devānāmpīya and similar royal titles (Hultzsch). It is here used freely as equivalent to svage ('heaven') i.e. Nibbāna on earth. The passage may be freely rendered: 'But in this time heaven which before seemed distant now appeared [to me] to be near, [here] in India.' Cp. Ch. 20 § 11 [29] n, where devatā may mean Arāhats; and Dhp. verse 200; also Ch. 17 b § 1 n.

<sup>12</sup> The edict then states that this proclamation was made by envoy (vyuthena), 256 persons being employed. The Sahasrām version (Hultzsch, p. 170) states that the proclamation was made by envoy on 256 occasions. The conventional number 256 is  $4 \times 4 \times 4 \times 4$  and may indicate every quarter and sub-division of the empire. Cp. § 5 [iv] below (Officers); V. A. Smith, p. 214 (vyutha).

People perform various ceremonies.<sup>6</sup> In sickness, at the weddings of sons, the weddings<sup>7</sup> of daughters, the birth of children, departure on journeys—on those and other similar occasions people perform many<sup>8</sup> ceremonies. Nay, the womenkind perform many, manifold, trivial, and worthless ceremonies.

Ceremonies, however, have to be performed, although that kind bears little fruit. This sort, on the other hand, to wit, the ceremonial<sup>9</sup> of piety (dhamma-magale), bears great fruit.<sup>10</sup> In it are included proper treatment of slaves<sup>11</sup> and servants, honour to teachers (gulumā), gentleness<sup>12</sup> towards living creatures, and liberality towards ascetics and Brāhmins.<sup>13</sup> These things and others of the same kind, are called the Ceremonial of Piety.<sup>14</sup> . . .

2. THE PRESUPPOSITIONS OF THE DHAMMA

a. Metaphysical Presuppositions<sup>7</sup> of Gotama: the Fundamental Unity,<sup>8</sup> and Altruistic or Collective Karma<sup>9</sup>

[Note. Whilst Gotama the teacher, in remarkable contrast with his later followers, steadily refused to interest himself in metaphysical discussions, repeatedly declaring that the religious life did not depend on them, it was nevertheless impossible for him to dissociate his mind entirely from such considerations. After long and eager study of the philosophical thought<sup>10</sup> of his day and the practice of yoga<sup>11</sup> under Brāhmanical teachers,<sup>12</sup> and after

<sup>4</sup> 'In this world (idha) and in the world beyond (paratrā)' is a free rendering and perhaps not justified. The literal meaning is 'here and on the other side'. The terms may indicate the outer world of practical life (cp. § 5 [v. enjoyment] above) and the inner world of the converted spirit (Int. § 12). The passage might be rendered: 'In this practical life I increase the well-being of some, and on the other (and spiritual) side they may gain the heaven (of selflessness and Nibbāna).' Cp. Ap. C b § 4 (this world); also Ch. 7 b § 2; Ch. 18 a § 2 [261]; Ch. 18 c § 2 [8].

<sup>8</sup> Int. §§ 8, 35 (i), 39, 49, 67; also IN 8 a. Cp. Ch. 4 § 16 n; Ch. 5 a § 10 (Immortal); Ch. 14 c § 2 [1] n; Ch. 14 d § 3 (Mūla); Ch. 17 d § 4 [3] (ādi); Ap. C b § 10 (attha); Ap. The difficulties inherent in the idea of impersonal divinity are plainly less formidable for altruism (Int. § 3) than for individualism. See A. Coomaraswamy's Buddha and the Gospel of Buddhism, 1928, pp. 239-40, on the Void (cp. Ch. 15 a § 11 [3]).

<sup>10</sup> The form of his Four Noble Truths may have been borrowed from the Sāṅkhya philosophy (Ap. G 2 c, Note), which has for its object the cessation of suffering, and defines a fourfold process of (1) suffering, (2) liberation or the cessation of suffering, (3) the cause of suffering or the failure to discriminate between the soul and matter, (4) the means of liberation or discriminating knowledge (see Eliot, H. and B., ii, p. 297). The Buddhist way of liberation is by overcoming desire, the Sāṅkhya way is by overcoming ignorance (Ap. D b, avijjā; Ap. D a § 10, 251, moha). Cp. Ap. F 2 d, Note (Sāṅkhya).

years devoted to intense contemplation, he arrived at the conclusions impressively stated in his first sermon delivered to his five earliest followers in the Deer Park near Benāres. These conclusions are purely ethical outwardly, but they are necessarily based upon his previous metaphysical analysis of human life and of the universe with which it is surrounded. He himself found it unnecessary to state these bases, except cursorily;<sup>1</sup> he did not wish to be entangled in unpractical discussions, which might be endlessly prolonged<sup>2</sup> by the learned without light, and might divert the attention of the world from the simple lessons which it so much needed and which remained true, whatever the result of these arguments.<sup>3</sup> He felt that his conclusions, once arrived at, were self-evident,<sup>4</sup> and could be mastered by any simple earnest mind. True, he hesitated at first<sup>5</sup> in face of the task of convincing the world that individualism was the great delusion; but he appears quickly to have felt that the same statement put in another way, namely that the self was the great evil, that selfishness was the root-cause of sorrow, that self-forgetfulness and kindly labour brought solace and peace and the consoling sense of unity and love, would be acceptable to men of good will, whose best instincts spontaneously prompt them to the same effect and who only need a definite call to accept and believe.<sup>6</sup> He hesitated to preach the doctrine in its metaphysical shape; but he did not hesitate to state it in its ethical form. But the metaphysical form remains as the background or the basis of the ethical teaching, and though it may not be necessary it seems desirable to examine it.

In the account of Gotama's early inquiries given in the Introduction to the Jātaka we have a very cursory account of the teachings of his first masters, Ālāra Kālāma and Uddaka. 'Coming to Ālāra Kālāma and Uddaka, the disciple of Rāma, he acquired from them the eight stages of meditation; but becoming convinced that they did not lead to enlightenment he ceased to practise them.'<sup>7</sup> In the Majjhima-Nikāya a somewhat fuller, but still by no means clear, account is given of the several doctrines of these teachers. On his asking Ālāra Kālāma how far his doctrines conducted, he received the answer that it conducted to 'the realm of nothingness';<sup>8</sup> and when he put the same question later to Uddaka, regarding the discipline taught by Rāma his master, the answer was that it conducted to 'the realm of neither perception nor yet non-perception'.<sup>9</sup> Of these eight stages of meditation, which he 'ceased to practise' a fuller account is given in the texts cited in Appendix I (Trances). It is remarkable that the Mahā-parinibbāna (Great Decease) Sutta, in the form in which it has come down to us, gives a long account<sup>10</sup> of how Gotama the Tathāgata, immediately before his death entered each of these stages, namely first the four trances,<sup>11</sup> and then successively 'the realm of the infinity of space . . . the realm of the infinity of consciousness . . . the realm of nothingness . . . the realm of neither perception nor yet non-perception', till finally 'rising from the realm of neither perception nor yet non-perception, he arrived at the cessation of perception and sensation', the last or ninth stage being apparently a completely negative refinement of the eighth and equivalent to total escape, though even then, according to this account, the Tathāgata returned through all the stages, only to repeat the four trances before attaining to parinibbāna or final liberation. One may suspect that Gotama's followers, responsible for this portion of the narrative, returned to the doctrines which he himself learnt but rejected 'becoming convinced that they did not lead to enlightenment'. In these doctrines we apparently have in some form the ancient Vedāntic theory of Māyā (illusion)<sup>1</sup> or idealistic monism, according to which the world is appearance only and the individual soul has but to make a sufficiently great and prolonged effort to be able to transcend the illusion and realize its identity with the One. That Gotama was acquainted with this philosophic theory and with the great Vedāntic dictum 'Tat tvam asi (That art thou, or, Thou art that)'<sup>2</sup> seems more than probable. That it impressed him, and that he finally rejected it, as he finally rejected, though without any harshness or hostility, the teachings of Ālāra Kālāma and Uddaka, would follow; but it would leave its traces on his mind in a vivid perception of the unity of the world.<sup>3</sup> Monistic by inclination, but deeply moral and practical, Gotama rejected the doctrine of illusion and its consequent passivism. The world to him was not illusory, but vividly real; a place for the exercise of all virtue, a field and opportunity for the duties of the Noble Eightfold Path, the last and the culmination of the Four Noble Truths. The an-atta doctrine<sup>4</sup> so strongly emphasized by him declares the transience of individuality, yet insists upon an ultimate or fundamental unity.<sup>5</sup> But this unity is not that of the idealists; it relies not upon contemplation and passivism for its attainment, but upon action,<sup>6</sup> charity, and love; upon the breaking down of the barriers set up by self-interest,<sup>7</sup> not upon the elimination of thought and perception. Thus behind the teachings of Gotama there is a monism which is not idealistic or māyā-ist, but realistic,<sup>8</sup> moral, and practical.

Throughout the Canonical Books mention is made of Brahmā Sahampati, Sakka, Indra, Māra, and other divine or supernatural personalities, good or evil. These plainly are inconsistent with Gotama's an-atta doctrine of the transience of personality, and would therefore seem necessarily to be later accretions acquired by Buddhism during the long process which assimilated it to Hinduism<sup>9</sup> before finally extinguishing it in India.

The personification<sup>1</sup> of divinity is a process natural to the human mind whether in Asia or in Europe. The opposite process is more familiar in the East than in the West. Behind the greatest of the gods, behind the supreme Brāhmanical triad<sup>2</sup> of Brahmā the Creator, Vishnu the Preserver, Shiva the Destroyer, there exists for the Hindu mind a more primeval power, a still deeper and more mysterious divine force, the impersonal Brahman,<sup>3</sup> the Ātman<sup>4</sup> (Sanskrit, Ātman, breath, spirit), the source from which they rose and into which eventually after incalculable ages they must at last be resolved. Hence it has been maintained that Hinduism in spite of its pantheon of myriads of gods is at bottom mono-theistic. The force that runs through and maintains all, however, is not to the Indian philosophic mind theistic, but impersonal; not a deity but divine; not an individuality, however supreme, but breath or spirit. To Western thought the notion of an impersonal divinity contains a contradiction in terms; not so to the Eastern mind. The teachings of Gotama seem necessarily to imply this Eastern philosophic attitude and to involve not atheism, for the moral structure of the world is implied in every utterance of his doctrine, and chance and mechanism and irresponsibility are repudiated by every word of the zealous preacher and every effort of the laborious and imperious organizer, but the belief in a single divine impersonal force behind the fleeting lives of men, leading their spirits away from particularity back to unity, and combating that assertion of the self, that thirst and grasping, in which Gotama found the cause, a negative one necessarily involved in transient and separate being, of all sorrow and evil.

The obscure list of sequences known as the paṭicca samuppāda<sup>5</sup> may perhaps fairly be interpreted as meaning, in its original form, that from the fundamental Unity arises individuality, and with the individual arise ignorance and desire, decay, and death, and from the ignorant desires of the perishable individual arise all the sorrows of our existence; and that if one can get rid of individualistic desire one can return to the harmony of the underlying fundamental Unity. With the addition of the theory of re-birth to the original nucleus the present complete confusion was introduced. That such speculations were foreign to the times can hardly be maintained in view of the Brahmajāla-Sutta<sup>6</sup> and the date now generally assigned to the early Upanishads.

That Gotama was acquainted with the Hindu doctrine of transmigration<sup>7</sup> is scarcely open to question. The notion that Buddhism introduced this doctrine seems no longer tenable. There are not only proofs of the greater antiquity of the doctrine, but it is strictly opposed to Gotama's own tenets, especially to his an-atta theory. Yet it seems clear that this great belief did not leave him uninfluenced. The great moral lesson vividly impressed by the doctrine of Karma is that every action, word, and thought<sup>8</sup> bring their inevitable consequences, and the teachings of Gotama are full of the sense of this responsibility. But whereas to the Hindu the consequences are purely, or at least primarily, borne with an artificial poetic justice by the individual responsible, the doer, who though he may apparently escape from or miss them during this life will inevitably be overtaken by them or draw the advantage of them in another life, to Gotama this personal, individualistic, incentive or appeal is not only negated by the essential theory of the transience of the soul, but is also strongly reprobated<sup>1</sup> by it as an appeal to that very individuality which is the basis of all thirst, desire, grasping, sorrow, and evil. Eager to retain the great moral force in the doctrine of transmigration, Buddhists, at an early date apparently, endeavoured to reconcile these two irreconcilable positions, by maintaining that though the soul is transient and does not survive, yet the consequences of its actions cannot be lost and therefore must pass on<sup>2</sup> at the moment of death to a new-born soul, as a flame from one lamp to another, or knowledge from teacher to pupil; and thus a new life, bearing the consequences of the actions of the old life, and scarcely distinguishable from it, carries on the load, heavy or light, imposed by the earlier agent. But it would not appear that Gotama himself promulgated a doctrine thus dependent on an entirely arbitrary assumption and limitation. By what force should the actions, words, and thoughts of an individual concentrate themselves at the moment of death in order to transfer themselves to a new and disconnected individuality? To Gotama it must have been obvious—all his words seem to imply it<sup>3</sup>—that every action, word, and thought of man has its immediate consequences, here and now, on all who are brought into relationship with it, and that these consequences have no end, but proceed relentlessly onward from life to life, from generation to generation. The force of Karma thus is real, is ever-present and eternal. But it is not one single individual who suffers or who gains by any action whether in this life or in another; nor is it one soul who passes on a load, heavy or light, or an advantage, great or small, to one other soul brought into some close and mystical relationship with the former; but it is all the world, in each transient generation, that suffers or gains by the deeds, words, and thoughts of every fleeting individuality that manifests for a brief lifetime the phenomenon of separate being. And it is in so far as these actions of the transient self negative the separation of individuality, and reassert the original and fundamental unity of life, that they cancel sorrow and bring the joy of Nirvāṇa or self-forgetfulness. Thus the Karma accepted by Gotama appears not as an individualistic force appealing to the fears and hopes of each unit, but as an altruistic moral power, which may perhaps be termed Collective Karma. Of such Karma the sanctions appear to be at least as powerful as those of individual loss or salvation, and indeed the sense that in thinking an evil thought one is injuring the whole fabric of human society, the texture of the all-inclusive One, may be almost an excessive moral burden.<sup>4</sup>

It should never be forgotten that Buddhism is a reformed Brāhmanism, as is evidenced by the invariably honorific use which Gotama makes of the title Brāhman,<sup>5</sup> and it therefore takes for granted certain Vedic or Vedāntic postulates. This accounts for certain partial silences in the Buddha's teachings. The back-ground of Buddhism, as that of Brāhmanism, is Brahman, the impersonal divine unity,<sup>1</sup> underlying, and harmonizing all individualities, all egoism, all differences, and all strife. And equally important as a background to Buddhism is the characteristic Hindu doctrine of moral responsibility, the endless succession of the consequences of actions, but with the essential differences imposed by Gotama's equally characteristic doctrine of the non-permanence of individuality. That Gotama was actuated by the keenest sense of this moral responsibility, is evidenced by almost everything that is recorded of him, but special mention may be made of his repudiation of the charge of being an a-kiriyavādin,<sup>2</sup> and of his rooted hostility to the doctrine of irresponsibility propagated by the nihilist Makkhali Gosāla.<sup>3</sup> That he accepted the doctrine of the consequence of actions in some form or measure is clear; but his teaching of the impermanence of the self necessitated his rejection of the Hindu doctrine of personal reward and punishment in repeated rebirths. The consequences of actions are borne collectively, or ultimately, by the underlying One. This view seems adequately, and alone, to explain Gotama's last words: 'Individuals are perishable by their nature; work therefore strenuously.'<sup>4</sup> The meaning of this last message to mankind must be—the individual has but a little while in which to labour, lovingly and lastingly, for the whole. Gotama was a realist; but later Buddhism tended towards, and Mahāyānism actually adopted, like the Vedāntism of the Hindus, the theory of māyā or idealism, and found in the Buddhist Canon justification for attributing the same idealism to the Master. There must presumably therefore have been something in Gotama's teaching, realistic though it was, which was not dissonant with, and indeed approached to, idealism; and this may perhaps be found in this Collectivism, in an insistence on the importance of the unseen Whole and on the transience of the visible individual, in whose self-regard he found the origin of all sorrow.

The first portion of the Anguttara-Nikāya containing the Eka-nipāta (the 'One' or 'Synthesis' section) concludes with the Jhāna-vagga or chapter on profound meditation,<sup>5</sup> and the last part of this chapter treats of the Amata,<sup>6</sup> the Immortal. This Immortal or Deathless may be either Nibbāna, the state of harmony with the fundamental unity, or that unity itself, the a-kata,<sup>7</sup> the unmade, the uncreated, whence arise for ever the harmonies of goodness, truth, and beauty,<sup>8</sup> and in separation from which arise sorrow, error, and discord, the fires of lust, of ignorance, and of enmity.<sup>9]</sup>

[Note. The source of the ill-regulated thoughts and passions which arise unwelcomed in the mind, perhaps especially in a mind stirred and rendered sensitive by religious fervour, must be to those who are conscious of them a frequent subject of wonder. It seems natural to attribute them to a malicious Spirit, the personification of evil, as the Canonical Books frequently do.<sup>11</sup> In the first of the following extracts the Buddha answering a question replies that Māra, the principle of destruction, is found wherever the constituents of individuality are found; in other words transience and discord abide in individuality, in selfishness, and egoistic desire.<sup>12</sup> This extract seems clearly to define the Buddha's attitude. In the second and much later passage the very names of the three daughters of the Tempter show that these dread figures are mere personifications of mean vices.<sup>13</sup> The habit of personification and the mythopoeic faculty are inherent in man's nature as is shown in all men's speech and writings, and stored-up myths are always ready with examples and supplementary surmises. To these sources of darkness may be added the occult relations<sup>14</sup> which appear between minds made unhealthy or sickly by undue self-

<sup>2</sup> Ch. 16 d § 8 [8]. These are enumerated in Dīgha 33 (iii. 2; Ch. 13 a § 3 [4] n) a discourse attributed to Sāriputta (Ch. 7 a § 18), very late in tone and highly complex; and also in the 'nines' in Ang. Nik. (PTS, iv, p. 401). The nine 'abodes' are those of individual men and spirits liable to deterioration, spirits of the Brahma-body (Int. § 93, vi), spirits of radiance, spirits of brightness, unconscious spirits, and beyond these the four states which succeed the four Trances, and of which the last is that of neither consciousness nor non-consciousness (Ch. 3 § 5; Ch. 22 b § 26; Ap. Craving (Taṇhā), Dislike (Aratī),<sup>9</sup> and Desire (Ragā), the three daughters of Māra,<sup>10</sup> said: ‘Our father is not to be seen. Where now is he?’ Looking for him they saw him writing dejectedly on the ground. Going up to their father they asked ‘Why art thou, dear father (tāta), sorrowful and dejected?’ ‘Dear ones (ammā),’<sup>11</sup> he answered, ‘this great devotee transcends my power; watching him for so long a time I cannot see a defect in him; therefore am I sorrowful and dejected.’ [p. 79] ‘If so,’ they replied, ‘think no more; we will have him in our power, and return bringing him.’ . . . Approaching the Blessed One they said ‘We are thy hand-maids,<sup>12</sup> O devotee.’ The Blessed One neither paid attention to their speech nor opened his eyes to look at them.

stages, which in reality interpenetrate each other. The first stage is the Vedic or naturalistic, in which are worshipped the great nature-gods<sup>1</sup> behind whom is seen vaguely a universal divine creative impersonal power. In this stage the individual soul is taken for granted with little if any speculation as to its immediate origin, but speculation as to its future has given rise to theories of heavens<sup>2</sup> and hells<sup>3</sup> and limbo. In limbo the souls of the departed are supported by the prayers and offerings given in ancestor-worship<sup>4</sup> by their living descendants. The tree and serpent worship<sup>5</sup> of this stage is doubtless a survival from an earlier indigenous animism.<sup>6</sup> The second stage is the transmigrational<sup>7</sup> in which the vague speculation as to the origin of the individual soul has led to the conclusion that the total number of souls was created in the beginning by Brahmā the Creator and that these migrate from form to form and from age to age through all vicissitudes towards the highest heaven and either eternal existence there or ultimate re-absorption along with all the Gods in the impersonal creative power underlying all. The doctrine of transmigration seems to have been non-Brāhmanical in origin<sup>8</sup> and is markedly dualistic in character. The third stage is the Vedāntic,<sup>9</sup> in which the phenomenal world and the transmigrations of the soul cease to be material and become ideal or a process of divine thought. The ultimate triumph of Hinduism in India shows the enduring strength of the Brāhmanic religious philosophy, which had become a monistic idealism, comprehending and transcending a realistic polytheism, teaching the ethical and personal dogma of transmigration, enforcing caste discipline and daily ritual, and tolerating or favouring spirit worship and magical rites. Where it has encountered them in prolonged conflict, the reasoned self-transcendence of Buddhism has been overcome by the disciplined hierarchy of caste and by the fervour of monotheism. With other opponents it has met and compromised.]

more spiritual effort emerged in asceticism<sup>1</sup> or the sacrifice of the external self, and the austerities of Gotama before his enlightenment are examples of this movement. Higher than these was the endeavour to attain by some form of idealistic, intellectual, or spiritual union (yoga)<sup>2</sup> to religious insight or knowledge,<sup>3</sup> and by this intellectual movement the age of Buddhism is marked.

Six orthodox Brāhmanized views.<sup>4</sup> The six great orthodox schools (literally 'views') of Hindu philosophy may not have been fully developed, but seem to have existed in sufficiently distinct forms, in the Buddha's time. Of these the first pair, comprising Vedānta, or the Uttara Mīmāṃsā,<sup>5</sup> and its ceremonial basis the Pūrva Mīmāṃsā, are in their theoretical part monistic and idealistic; the second pair, comprising Sāṅkhya<sup>6</sup> and its ascetic application in (psychic non-Vedāntic) Yoga, are dualistic; the third pair, comprising the Vaiśeṣhika<sup>7</sup> (analytical) philosophy with Nyāya its companion analysis of the laws of logic, are pluralistic and materialistic. The order in which these are here placed is not necessarily that of time, but the Pūrva (old) Mīmāṃsā, which sets forth the Vedic ceremonial, is doubtless the starting point from which the rest proceed. Vedānta and Vedāntic are names which may be applied comprehensively to the literature and period immediately following the Vedic period. The names, however, belong more especially to the speculative books which express the monistic idealistic philosophy drawn by genius from the hymns and ritual of the Vedas. It is sufficiently established that some part of this literature existed before Gotama's day. The great contribution<sup>8</sup> of Buddha to religious philosophy is the clear teaching that selfishness or individualistic desire is the cause of sorrow; and the corollary of this is his insistence that the individual or self is transient.<sup>9</sup> It is not, as the Vedāntists teach, ignorance that is the root-cause of sorrow and ill, but ignorant desire; it is not the reality of the individual self that is to be doubted but the inflated importance attributed to it. To Gotama, moreover, the many have real importance in their universal relation to each other<sup>10</sup> and towards the One. The dualistic theory of mind and matter was the fundamental doctrine of the Sāṅkhya philosophy. The frequency of the question put to Gotama by his opponents as to whether the soul was or was not the same as the body,<sup>11</sup> shows that the subject was familiar to the times. The Vaiśeṣhika materialistic and pluralistic philosophy regards the soul as subtle matter, and all matter as finally resolvable into atoms. It finds the fundamental substance to be not one but the many. By its acceptance of the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul it was brought within the scope of Brāhmanical orthodoxy. It has been maintained, though unconvincingly, that its first great exponent Kaṇāda<sup>12</sup> preceded the Buddha. Buddhism, which is often regarded as based on the Sāṅkhya philosophy, is rather a development of both Vedānta and Sāṅkhya, being both monistic and realistic in that it accepts the reality of the visible universe and finds a fundamental unifying force in it. It is a question whether Gotama borrowed from early Sāṅkhya or Sāṅkhya borrowed from Buddhism. Gotama appears to have been familiar with dualism and also with idealistic monism, and to have endeavoured to synthesize these in his own realism or substantialism, which finds the divine principle or substance in all individuals, and all individuality transient. In the ultimate analysis all things are not the divine mind but the divine substance. Beyond finding the divine fundamental and eternal principle to be universal and harmonious, and declaring the origin of all discord to be in transient individuality he refuses to speculate. But this synthesis presupposes an examination of both dualism and monism, and it may be added of pluralism, at any rate in their rudiments. Pluralism in the spiritual world was a main tenet of Jainism, the most active opponent of early Buddhism.

Six unorthodox non-Brāhmanical teachers.<sup>1</sup> The most controversial of Gotama's opponents were Pūrāṇa Kassapa, Makkhali Gosāla, Ajita Kesakambalin, Pakudha Kaccāyana, Sañjaya Belaṭṭhiputta, and Nātaputta. These unorthodox Hindu opponents of Gotama ignored, as he did, the Vedas and caste, but did not all reject the theory of rebirth. They included materialists, fatalists, nihilists, and sceptics, and in all these respects were repugnant to the Buddha. It is important to notice how much their opinions resembled, as well as how much they differed from, the teachings of Gotama. The greatest of these non-orthodox opponents of Gotama was undoubtedly Nāta-putta the Nigaṇṭha,<sup>2</sup> whose sect, which has been identified with the Jains, has outlasted that of the Buddha in India. The Nigaṇṭhas ignored the Vedas and caste, as did Gotama. They believed in the fundamental duality of mind and matter and in the eternal plurality of souls. They accepted the theory of rebirth, but to them karma, the cause of transmigration, was a material substance, a subtle element of corruption, ultimately to be eliminated. These views were rejected by Gotama except the belief in moral consequence or responsibility, which is implied in his teaching of the continuity of evil and of good.<sup>3</sup> According to the Nigaṇṭhas that which passes on is matter, and matter is the foundation of evil; according to Gotama that which passes on is influence, and the root of evil is desire; whereas the Vedāntists taught that what transmigrates is ignorance, and that ignorance is the basis of ill, in an illusory world. It is difficult to see, apart from mere externals, what differences of internal principles divided Buddhists from Jains after Buddhism had accepted the doctrine of transmigration, except as regards the theory of that which was liable to transmigrate and the tendency of Buddhism to monism (later to idealistic monism) as opposed to the dualism of the Jains. When once the canonical books of the two sects had been composed these differences might suffice as a cause of quarrel, but during the lives of the two founders Ch. 7 a § 18 [1] where the tīthiya leader Sañjaya is termed a paribbājaka (wanderer). In Saṃ. Nik. (i, p. 68) the six are termed samaṇa-brāhmaṇā (Ch. 14 b § 3 [5]); cp. Ch. 14 c § 10 [6] n.

this was not the case and apart from the doctrine of rebirth no sufficient cause of grave and prolonged dispute appears. Jainism in its long intercourse with Hinduism has retained its fundamental and distinctive principle of dualism. Buddhism, when it lost sight of its original doctrine of pure, disinterested, and Stoic altruism,<sup>1</sup> retained no guiding principle capable of resisting the idealistic monism of Vedānta and the personal adoration of bhakti in medieval Indian philosophy and religion. Stoicism, when once it had merged the earthly 'city of God'<sup>2</sup> into the unorganized realm of self-culture and self-sufficiency, retained nothing that could resist the other-worldly thought and emotion of early Christianity.

Six Buddhist dissentients.<sup>3</sup> Six is also the number of the opponents of Gotama within the Buddhist Saṃgha, but these necessarily only appear in the later years of his life. They are the opponents of his administration, such as must arise in any sect or congregation, and their opposition and practices gave occasion to new rules recorded from time to time in the Vinaya.

Steps towards Bhakti<sup>4</sup> (adoration) and emotional Hinduism. The warmth and glow of Buddhist ethical feeling seems to have influenced the growth of bhakti or religious adoration, which has since characterized the Hindu beliefs. It is markedly different from the earlier ritual respect paid to unseen powers. Bhakti is the union of the inward self with a divine person, whereas Vedānta and Buddhism teach union with an impersonal divinity. The period of the great Epics which celebrate the exploits of heroic incarnations of divinity, shortly followed the age in which the philosophic religious systems of Vedānta and Buddhism originated and first flourished. The glow in Buddhism helped to kindle the fire in the Bhagavad-gita,<sup>5</sup> just as Buddhism owes much of its intellectual radiance to Vedānta. That great poem, in discussing the means to salvation, elevates adoration above works and knowledge. In it the rapture of adoration has replaced the rapture of self-transcendence in the Buddha's threefold 'comprehensive statement' of his teaching.<sup>6</sup>

The first four of these philosophers are definitely 'non-moral' or 'unethical'; the sixth is indefinitely so; the fifth is individualistic. The views of the first four are somewhat differently distributed in the Saṇḍaka-s.

[Note. The Pātimokkha rules are given in the Vinaya Pīṭaka, embedded in a very voluminous Commentary.<sup>4</sup> The Vinaya Pīṭaka<sup>5</sup> consists of three main parts—Part I comprising the two Sutta-vibhaṅgā or Rules-analysis; Part II comprising the Khandhakāṇi or Divisions of the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga; and Part III comprising the Parivāra or Supplement. The two Vibhaṅgas contain rules of morality and conduct, or rather a classification of transgressions requiring confession. The Khandhakas, comprising the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga, contain administrative resolutions, those in the Culla-vagga being closely connected with the administration of the rules in the Vibhaṅgas. In the Mahā-vagga and Culla-vagga reference is made from time to time to ‘the two Pātimokkhas’,<sup>6</sup> into which the whole of the rules are divided. These apparently correspond with the rules in the two Vibhaṅgas, the first comprising the Pārājikā, Samghādisesā, Aniyatā, and Nissaggiyā Pācittiya rules,<sup>7</sup> while the second contains the remaining rules, possibly of later date. Distinction is also drawn between those rules which deal with morality and those which deal with conduct,<sup>8</sup> that is to say between the Pārājika and Samghādisesa rules and those of minor importance. A main distinction is also drawn between the Pārājikā (expulsion) section and the Pācittiya (penance) section.<sup>9</sup> The four Pārājika rules along with the Introductory Formula constitute the essential portion of the Pātimokkha Recital,<sup>10</sup> which should strictly be recited, whilst the rest might be omitted at times of danger; and thus are clearly the nucleus of the rules. The rules amounted ultimately to 220, or 227 including the Adhikaraṇa-samathā, which are not strictly rules.<sup>11</sup>

The Pātimokkha recitation is the chief feature of the Uposatha service.<sup>12</sup> In the Mahā-vagga account of the origin of that service great stress is laid upon the discourse<sup>13</sup> which was to explain the nature of the Dhamma. This discourse implies an instructive public profession of faith, not a mere recital of the Rules of the Order or a confession by monks; and indeed the public were excluded from such confessions.<sup>1</sup> No summary positive profession of faith is set forth in the Mahā-vagga account. Such, however, may perhaps be found in the Three Refuges of the Ordination Service,<sup>2</sup> which were on occasions expanded.<sup>3</sup> A negative summary is provided by the four Pārājika rules,<sup>4</sup> which form the nucleus of the existing Pātimokkha, and by the Ten Prohibitions<sup>5</sup> set forth in the Ordination Service. That a positive teaching was originally provided is indicated not only by the Mahā-vagga account but by the third rule of the mendicant sisters,<sup>6</sup> requiring them on Upasatha day twice a month to listen to a sermon (ovāda) by a member of the assembly of mendicant brothers. It is to be noted that Upasatha day was utilized by the Emperor Asoka<sup>7</sup> for the publication and repetition of his pious and ethically admirable Edicts to his subjects in the districts, and that therefore the public must have been present at some part of that day's service, though not necessarily at the Pātimokkha recital. Clearly the present Pātimokkha, which is a private and specific confession of sins,<sup>8</sup> would not satisfy the popular demand for an explanation of the Doctrine. The confession must have been succeeded or preceded by a public religious discourse, which being of a variable form has dropped out of the formal record. The whole service was evidently of a simple, non-ritual character. The Puritanical simplicity of early Buddhist religious observances is notable. Religious ritual<sup>9</sup> was avoided by the new sect or, so far as rendered necessary by custom, was left to Brāhmins, as still in modern Buddhist Siam the chief part in religious ceremonies is played by nominal Brāhmins or Bakus.<sup>10</sup>

The signification of the word Pāti-mokkha is highly complex. The root meaning of the principal part of the word is 'liberation', and the prefix is adversative. In the root meaning may be found the ideas of a state of liberation or purification, an act of purification or confession, a state from which one must be freed of sin, and the act of freeing or absolution; whilst the adversative prefix introduces the idea of compulsion or binding rule. The ancient commentarial meaning, namely that which is foremost, is connected with another root, signifying 'face' or 'fore-front'. Possibly all these meanings are combined in the Buddhist mind.

The organization of the observance of Upasatha day<sup>11</sup> is elaborately set forth in Khandhaka II of the Mahā-vagga, which may be summarized thus:

Chs. i-iii. Origin of the Upasatha Ceremony.

Ch. iv.<sup>12</sup> The Pātimokkha not to be recited every day, but on Upasatha day, once each half-month, on the 14th or 15th day.

<sup>5</sup> Ch. 8 d § 5; cp. § 6 [8] below. Of these Prohibitions the first four correspond closely with the four Pārājika rules, and with the first four Sīlāni (Ap. H 4 a n). In the Hare Birth-story the observance of sīla (duty) is practically equivalent to the keeping of the Upasatha service (Ap. F 1 a § 2), thus it may be gathered that public recitation of the Sīlas, and possibly instruction on them, formed part of that day's service.

- Ch. v.* The Upasatha service to be held unitedly, i.e. as far as one 'residence' (district)<sup>1</sup> extends.
- Ch. vi.* The Samgha to determine the boundary of each 'residence' (district).<sup>2</sup>
- Ch. vii.* The boundaries<sup>3</sup> to be three yojanas<sup>4</sup> in extent at most; no boundary to extend to the opposite side of a river, unless there be a regular ferry-boat or causeway.<sup>5</sup>
- Ch. viii.* The Pātimokkha to be recited in a regular place appointed; never two Upasatha halls to be in one district.
- Ch. ix.* The Samgha to determine the size of the Upasatha hall.
- Ch. x.* The Elders (Therā) to assemble first.

- Ch. xv.* Abridgements of the Pātimokkha; allowable only in cases of danger.<sup>8</sup> Questions about the Vinaya to be put and answered only by duly appointed persons.
- Ch. xvi.* On reproofs, authorized and unauthorized. The Pātimokkha to be recited audibly; and not before laymen.<sup>9</sup>

- Ch. xviii.* Reckoning by days of the half-month. Counting the Bhikkhus.
- Ch. xix.* The Elder (Thera) of the community to proclaim the Upasatha day in due time.
- Ch. xx.* The Upasatha hall to be swept; seats to be placed; lamp, drink, and food to be provided.<sup>10</sup>
- Ch. xxi.* Cases of ignorance of Upasatha day and Pātimokkha.
- Ch. xxii.* Cases of absence for sickness at times of Upasatha. 'Upasatha is not to be held by an incomplete assembly'; an absentee must send his declaration of pārisuddhi<sup>11</sup> (purity) by deputy.
- Ch. xxiii.* Cases of absence for sickness at times when the Samgha meets to transact business; an absentee must send his assent (chanda) by deputy.
- Ch. xxiv.* Similar provision in cases of absence under compulsion.
- Ch. xxv.* The insane to be certified and excused.
- Ch. xxvi.* Cases of communities of less than five.<sup>12</sup>
- Ch. xxvii.* Cases of offence on the very day of Upasatha,<sup>13</sup> or of doubtful offences, or of offence remembered during the Upasatha ceremony, of offences in common (not confessed in common but individually), cap. ii. The Buddha authorizes the form of exclusion from the Pātimokkha.

cap. iv. Conditions under which a Bhikkhu may take upon himself the conduct of an accusation. Five necessary conditions: (1) right time, (2) the accusation must be just, (3) it must tend to advantage, (4) probability that the accuser's associates will support the case in accordance with Dhamma and Vinaya, (5) the Samgha, as a result of the case, shall not fall into strife.<sup>10</sup> are not ordained priests, free at the time from all liability to ecclesiastical censure, shall keep at a distance of two and a half cubits<sup>1</sup> from the assembled chapter. It was on my pointing out that this was the only direction of Buddha on the subject, that the priests consented to make an exception in my favour, and to break their rule of meeting in secret conclave.<sup>2</sup>

'After we were seated the priests retired two and two together, each pair knelt down face to face and made confession of their faults,<sup>3</sup> one to another, in whispers. Their confessions being ended, they took their seats on mats<sup>4</sup> covered with white calico, in two rows facing each other. The senior priest, the seniority<sup>5</sup> being reckoned from the date of ordination, sat at the head of one row, the next in order at the head of the opposite row, the third next to the senior priest, and so on right and left down the room. The senior priest remained sitting, the others knelt and made obeisance to him, saying: "Permit me. Lord, give me absolution from all my faults committed in deed, or word, or thought."<sup>6</sup>

"The senior then says: "I absolve you, brother. It is good to grant me absolution." All reply: "Permit me. Lord, I absolve you." The second in order of seniority now resumes his seat, and all his juniors<sup>7</sup> kneel and receive and give absolution . . . and so on, till no one has a junior present. . . . After all are seated, they fall together on their knees and say: "Praise be to the blessed one, the holy one, the author of all truth". . . .<sup>8</sup>

"The priests here rise from their knees and resume their seats. The senior, or some other deputed in his stead to officiate, then takes a seat at the top between the two rows. The interrogatories<sup>9</sup> are then proceeded with. . . .

"The interrogatories being ended, the Pātimokkha is intoned. . . . The text . . . will be found divided into ten chapters, as follows: I. Interrogatories relating to the requisites for forming a chapter. II. The Introduction. III. The four deadly sins. IV. The thirteen faults involving temporary separation from the priesthood. V. The two undetermined offences. VI. The thirty faults requiring confession and absolution, and involving forfeiture of the article in reference to which the offence has been committed. VII. The ninety-two faults requiring confession and absolution. VIII. Four offences requiring confession. IX. The seventy-five rules of conduct. X. The seven rules for settling cases. § 5. Extract from J. F. Dickson's paper<sup>2</sup> on the Pātimokkha ceremony: the three Refuges, according to the Ceylon Kamma-vācā.

'We believe in the blessed one, the holy one, the author of all truth,<sup>3</sup> who has fully accomplished the eight kinds of supernatural knowledge<sup>4</sup> and the fifteen holy practices,<sup>5</sup> who came the good journey which led to the Buddhahood, who knows the universe, the unrivalled, who has made subject to him all mortal beings, whether in heaven or in earth, the teacher of gods<sup>6</sup> and men, the blessed Buddha. I bow my head to the ground and worship
 The Law, the noble doctrine of the Three Baskets.<sup>1</sup>
 If in aught I have sinned against the Law,
 May the Law forgive me my sin.

'Buddha's holy Church,<sup>2</sup> the congregation of righteous men that lead a godly life, that walk in the straight way, in the way of wisdom, that walk faithfully in the four paths<sup>3</sup> of holiness, the eight orders<sup>4</sup> of the elect, worthy of offerings from afar, worthy of fresh offerings, worthy of offerings of the daily necessities of life, entitled to receive the respectful salutation of joined hands raised in homage to the forehead, this holy Church produces merit<sup>5</sup> which, like unto a rich field, yields its increase for the benefit of this world of men. Through life till I reach Nirvāṇa I will put my trust in the Church.

The Church as it has been in the ages that are past,
 The Church as it will be in the ages that are yet to come,
 The Church as it is in this present age,
 I worship continually.

I have no other Refuge,
 The Church is my noble Refuge;
 By the truth of these words
 May I worship and win the victory.

I bow my head to the ground and worship
 The Church, threefold and best.
 If in aught I have sinned against the Church,
 May the Church forgive me my sin.

Buddha and the Law, the Pacceka-buddhas,<sup>6</sup>
 And the Church are my lords.
 I am their slave.
 May their virtues ever rest on my head.

The three refuges, the three symbols<sup>7</sup> and equanimity,<sup>8</sup>
 And lastly, Nirvāṇa,
 Will I worship with bowed head, unceasingly.
 Thus shall I receive the benefit of that threefold Power.

The first and simplest form is that used by Gotama himself and distinguished by the formula 'Ehi Bhikkhu'.<sup>15</sup> The second form recorded is that used by the early individual missionaries and distinguished, so far as externals are concerned, by exclusive insistence on the repetition of the formula of the three Refuges.<sup>16</sup> The third and final form of the ordination, superseding that used by individual missionaries, required the sanction of a formal chapter<sup>17</sup> assembled at the local headquarters of the Order. and is still used by the Buddhist Order in Ceylon. In the Ceylon formulary,<sup>1</sup> however, a distinction is drawn between the Pabbajjā (going forth or renunciation) and the Upasampadā (admission) ceremonies. The latter ceremony includes the former, but the Pabbajjā ceremony is also held separately for the purpose of conferring upon qualified persons the rank of probationer or novice.<sup>2</sup> The necessity for this distinction doubtless arose when it became evident that a long probationary period<sup>3</sup> of instruction in the Doctrine was required, and also when the need arose to exclude<sup>4</sup> or expel<sup>5</sup> the unqualified and unfit. As will be seen the present form of Upasampadā-ordination in the Ceylon Kammavācā follows very closely the ancient lines of the Vinaya-Piṭaka. It is naturally the third or most developed formula which is used, not either the primitive formula adopted by the Buddha or that attributed to the early individual missionaries.

The probationary period<sup>6</sup> between the two ordinations varied in length according to circumstances, it being eventually ruled that the minimum age for the Pabbajjā should be fifteen,<sup>7</sup> whilst the Upasampadā-ordination could not be conferred upon anyone less than twenty years of age.<sup>8</sup> A status of service or pupilage junior to that of the regular probationers seems to be indicated in the texts.<sup>9</sup>

The three Refuges, the formal recognition of which is the essential part of both ceremonies, are frequently mentioned<sup>10</sup> in the first four Nikāyas, but apparently not as part of a specific rite. Similarly the four Nikāyas use the terms pabbajjā and upasampadā frequently, but these are not precisely distinguished from each other or used with reference to a formal ceremony other than the personal call of the Buddha, excepting perhaps the account of the eight conditions imposed by Gotama when at last he was persuaded to admit Mahāpajāpati and her female companions to ordination.<sup>11</sup> This might be expected from the fact that the first four Nikāyas<sup>12</sup> claim to record only the discourses of the Buddha and a few of his greatest and earliest disciples.]

And it is thus, mendicant brothers, that the renunciation-ordination<sup>1</sup> should be conferred: [The candidate] should have his hair and beard cut off, assume the yellow robes, adjust the outer wrap over one shoulder, salute the feet of the mendicant brothers, sit upon his heels and raise his joined palms; then he must be told to say thus: "I come for refuge to the Enlightened, I come for refuge to the Law, I come for refuge to the Community, and so a second time . . . and a third time. . . ." I sanction, mendicant brothers, the renunciation-ordination for novices with these three declarations of taking refuge.<sup>2</sup>

. . . 'Let not a boy (dārako) less than fifteen years old<sup>3</sup> receive the pabbajjā-ordination. If anyone [so] confers the pabbajjā-ordination he is guilty of a grave offence.'<sup>4</sup>

The notable exemption here granted indicates a sympathy between early Buddhism and the doctrine of a divine eternal fire from which all things originate and to which all things return (Ch. 5 c § 7; Ap. G 2 a, Unity). The Jains (Int. § 184), in whose favour no exemption is here allowed, were associated with the doctrine of Karma, in the usual sense of that term, more closely than the fire-worshippers. The latter, as physical philosophers, must have accepted a Karma which was a law of harmonious, and not necessarily mechanical, unity and continuity of action. Gotama was opposed to the ritualistic Brāhmins (Ap. G 1 a; Ap. G 2 c) and to the worship of Brāhmanic or Vedic deities (Ap. G 1 a § 8), but he evidently sympathized with the prominent Brāhman sect which worshipped Agni, the divine universal principle of fire (Int. § 186). Cp. Ch. 14 f § 5 [291] n.

[When all the candidates have been ordained, one of the assembly (generally one of the tutors) rises and addresses the following exhortation to the recently ordained:]

(1) 'It is meet to measure the shadow of the sun; it is meet to tell the season and the division of the day; it is meet to tell all these together.'<sup>5</sup>

(2) 'It is meet to tell the four requisites of a priest. . . .'<sup>6</sup>

3. THE GOVERNMENT<sup>8</sup> OF THE SAṂGHA<sup>9</sup>

[Note. The code which provides for the government of the Samgha is the Vinaya Piṭaka.<sup>10</sup> This, the first division of the Canon, is itself divided into three parts, the Sutta-vibhaṅga<sup>11</sup> (containing the Pātimokkha rules with their setting), the Khandhakāṇi (comprising the Mahā-vagga or greater chapter and the Culla-vagga or lesser chapter), and the Parivāra<sup>12</sup> or supplement (comprising later regulations). The Pātimokkha<sup>13</sup> rules concern conduct or personal discipline; they are not only a classified series of rules to be observed by individual monks, but also from another point of view constitute a survey of the powers of the Samgha to inflict penalties upon

<sup>3</sup> 'It is quite possible, even after ordination, for any member to leave the Brotherhood. There is no compulsion. Whosoever yearns again after the joys of this world may confess his weakness to the Thêra, when the Samgha will not detain him, and he may leave without any stain upon his character.'—Baynes, Way of the B., p. 67. <sup>5</sup> 'Then let them measure the shadow, tell (the newly-ordained Bhikkhu) what season and what date it is, tell him what part of the day it is, tell him the whole formula', MV, I. lxxvii (SBE, xiii, p. 234). The purpose was to fix the seniority of the Bhikkhus. Ap. H 2 a 5 (Wesak); cp. Ch. 1 § 3.

<sup>6</sup> MV, I. lxxvii, which repeats I. xxx. 4 (as in Ch. 8 d § 2). For references see Ap. H 2 c (headline). In insisting that monks must beg their food and possess no private property, Gotama was not insisting upon asceticism either for priests or laymen, but was emphasizing the connexion of personal cares and anxieties with that selfishness or individualism which is the root of all sorrow. The monks at least should attain to freedom from individualistic cares, and so set an example of unselfishness to the lay-brethren whose necessary labour supported their families and the monks themselves, and so the ideals preached and upheld by the latter. offending members of the community, as is shown especially in the sections called Pārājika<sup>1</sup> (expulsion) and Samgh-ādisesa<sup>2</sup> (penalties supervised by the Samgha). The subjects of the sections or Khandhakāni grouped together as the Mahā-vagga are as follows: 1, Admission;<sup>3</sup> 2, Upasatha<sup>4</sup> and Pātimokkha; 3, Vassa;<sup>5</sup> 4, Pavāraṇa;<sup>6</sup> 5, leather shoes,<sup>7</sup> seats, and vehicles, and indulgences for outlying districts<sup>8</sup> such as Avanti<sup>9</sup> and the southern jungle<sup>10</sup> (Avanti-dakkhīn-āpātha); 6, medicaments and food;<sup>11</sup> 7, Kathina cloth;<sup>12</sup> 8, apparel;<sup>13</sup> 9, validity of procedure;<sup>14</sup> 10, schisms.<sup>15</sup> The subjects of the sections forming the Culla-vagga are: 1, Disciplinary procedure<sup>16</sup> (kamma); 2 and 3, Samghādisesa<sup>17</sup> offences; 4, settlement (samatha) of cases;<sup>18</sup> 5, small points of daily life;<sup>19</sup> 6, lodgings, seats, and beds;<sup>20</sup> 7, schisms;<sup>21</sup> 8, classes<sup>22</sup> of Bhikkhus, the refectory, hot baths,<sup>23</sup> &c.; 9, exclusion<sup>24</sup> from the Pātimokkha; 10, the Order of mendicant-sisters (bhikkhuni);<sup>25</sup> 11, the first General Council<sup>26</sup> at Rājagaha<sup>27</sup> after the death of the Buddha; 12, the second General Council at Vesālī.<sup>28</sup> Thus it may be stated generally that the Culla-vagga is an appendix to or expansion of the disciplinary personal rules contained in the Pātimokkha, whilst the Mahā-vagga has a broader outlook and comprises for the most part administrative regulations of a wider bearing. The occasion of each rule or regulation is set forth, and every ruling is attributed to the Buddha. The 'occasions' are generally credible and rational but sometimes magical,<sup>29</sup> absurd, and superfluous, e.g. MV, v. 1, where journeys through the air and performances in the sky are described. A perusal of the lengthy volumes of the Vinaya-Piṭaka leaves a feeling of radical incongruity between the practical and systematic tone of the bulk of the material and the imaginative accounts of spirits and marvels which distinguish the introductory and evidently commentarial portion of Khandhaka I of the Mahā-vagga.<sup>30</sup>

The elaborate and thoroughly competent procedure of Buddhist assemblies was based apparently on that of the numerous public assemblies,<sup>31</sup> imperial or local, which flourished in the time of Gotama and are referred to in the Mahā-Parinibbāna-Sutta.]

[Note. The general rules of conduct, which must be observed by all mendicant brothers and by the laity, are known as the Sīlas (sīlāni) or collectively as sīla (duty). The particular regulations of the Order are developed in great detail in the Pātimokkha<sup>13</sup> rules for the ordained clergy only. The pious layman<sup>14</sup> was expected to share for a short period each year, either at home or in a monastery, the duties of a probationer preparing for ordination, and thus to observe the general rules as distinguished from the Pātimokkha regulations by participating in the novices' life of ideal simplicity as to lodging, food, raiment, and strict life and thought. The general rules known as Sīla closely resemble but are not identical with the ten Sikkhāpadāni<sup>15</sup> or Precepts for probationers. The first four Precepts correspond though not exactly with the four Pārājika<sup>16</sup> Rules, breach of which implied expulsion from the Order, as well as with the first four Sīlas. The fifth Precept corresponds, though not invariably, with the fifth Sīla; and these five are compulsory for all alike,<sup>17</sup> ordained mendicant brothers, novices, and laymen, throughout life. rules, embodying the monastic mode of life, are arranged differently in different parts of the Canon, and appear sometimes as five in number, and sometimes as three, owing to omission of the rule against the use of precious metals and the grouping of two of the remaining rules together. Thus the main Duties<sup>1</sup> are known sometimes as the Five Silas, and these at times are expanded to ten and at times to seven only, whilst indeed in the ancient treatise known as the Cūla-sīla (Brief Duty) they number still more than ten. Again the Precepts or perhaps better the Injunctions (sikkhāpadāni) are ten in number, occasionally compressed into eight,<sup>2</sup> the later Precepts being sumptuary rather than ethical and so different from the later Duties, whilst the five earlier Precepts correspond closely with the five main Silas.

The treatise known as the Sīla<sup>3</sup> or Duty is inserted, not without awkwardness, in each of the first thirteen Suttas of the Dīgha-Nikāya. It is divided into three parts entitled Cūla-sīla (Brief Duty), Majjhima-sīla (Middle Duty) and Mahā-sīla (Longer Duty). Of these the last two are expansions of the first with variations in the arrangement, being thus apparently of a somewhat later date. They present a vivid and displeasing picture of the priestcraft, both Brāhmanic<sup>4</sup> and unorthodox, and of the general life<sup>5</sup> of the times, displaying a laxity of pursuits and habits which is contrasted with the severe purity of the Buddha's followers.

Apart from the general rules of Duty and the disciplinary regulations of the Pātimokkha, with the penalties for the breach thereof, there were the self-imposed penances<sup>6</sup> and austere exercises of the ascetically minded who were not contented with the minimum of piety enforced by the regulations. Buddhist ascetic ideals perhaps are best expressed in the poetic Songs of the Brethren and Songs of the Sisters included in the somewhat miscellaneous collection constituting the fifth Nikāya,<sup>7</sup> which contains compositions of various dates evidently added to the Canon from time to time. They are also expressed though with less concentrated ardour in the verses of the Dhammapada and in some of the poems contained in the Sutta-Nipāta, all being included in the wide fold of the fifth Nikāya. Implied in all these ideals is to be found the idea of the transcendence of individuality and of all appertaining to it. This further implies the equality of all good men and the ignoring of caste distinctions.<sup>8</sup> The only inequalities are those of progress along the Eightfold Path. And as the true disciple of the Sakyan must give up all pretensions to caste superiority, so he must abstain from all claims to ritual secrets and magic influence<sup>9</sup> over supernatural forces, and live as the selfless exemplar, not as the self-righteous superior or the favoured lord, of men.]

<sup>14</sup> The 'attainment' of outlook is sammā-ditthi (see § 3 [2] below; Ch. 5 b § 4 [18]; Ap. G 1 b), which is defined as belief in the reality (Ap. G 1 a, iii; cp. Ap. D b, Illusion) of the world [of origination and cessation], in the results of actions, in a beyond (para-loka; Ch. 5 a § 6), and in beings arising spontaneously (Ap. G 2 c § 3 i [32]; Ap. <sup>15</sup> Cp. Ch. 20 § 3 (2); also Ch. 15 b § 2 [513] (vulgar).

<sup>16</sup> From the definitions which follow it is clear that citta is the heart or willing mind, distinguished from the thinking mind; citta-sampadā is defined as freedom from covetousness and malice (see § 3 [2] below. Cp. citta-vimutti, Ch. 5 b § 9 [29]).

<sup>2</sup> It is interesting to observe how Gotama evaded the theme of 'the further shore' and kept the discussion to the plane of ethics. Cp. Ch. 6 a § 4 [5] (sagga); Ap. C b § 11 (174); Ap. G 1 c, Note (heaven). <sup>3</sup> Or, slander. Ap. H 4 c § 2 (4).

<sup>4</sup> Or, greed. Ch. 9 a § 1 [1]; Ch. 15 a § 10 [3]; Ch. 16 d § 7 [21]; Ch. 18 f § 2 [8]. Cp. Ch. 11 c §§ 13 [2] n, 15 n; Ap. D a § 10 (ii, desire). The last three Silas amount practically to avoidance of the Three Fires. In their positive attitude they closely resemble the samādhi and paññā of the Comprehensive Discourse (Ch. 20 § 8; Ap. H 3 b § 2 [3]) and the first two and also the last two sections of the Eightfold Path (Ap. F 2 d).

<sup>6</sup> Or, false views; i.e. egotism and scepticism, the first two Fetters. The ten are classified as three of the body, four of speech, and three of the mind (Ch. 13 a § 2 [1] n; and Int. § 25; cp. Ap. F 1 b § 1 [4] (deeds)).

<sup>11</sup> Ch. 7 a § 11 [2]. In the first thirteen Suttas of the Dīgha-Nikāya the brief setting of the Silas varies, but their substance is the same. In some Suttas the word Bhikkhu more appropriately takes the place of Samaṇo Gotamo.

'The Samaṇa Gotama renounces malicious speech,<sup>3</sup> abstains from malicious speech. What he has heard here he does not repeat to people elsewhere to divide them from those here, and what he has heard elsewhere he does not repeat to people here to divide them from those elsewhere. So he is a binder of the divided, a producer of union, delighting in agreement,<sup>4</sup> rejoicing in agreement, loving agreement, a speaker of words which cause agreement.' . . . 'The Samaṇa Gotama renounces harsh speech, abstains from harsh speech. What speech is hurtless, pleasant to the ear, loving, moving the heart, civil, pleasing to people, gracious to people—of such words he is a speaker.' . . . 'The Samaṇa Gotama renounces frivolous talk, abstains from frivolous talk. Speaking in season, speaking of fact, speaking of reality<sup>5</sup> (attha-vādi), speaking of the law and of the discipline, he is a speaker of words worth treasuring, timely, reasonable,<sup>6</sup> definite, conforming to reality<sup>7</sup> (attha-samhitam).' 'So indeed, mendicant brothers, let the ordinary man speak in praise of the Tathāgata.

<sup>13</sup> Omitting what is apparently a supplementary and somewhat fortuitous list, including such matters as going on messages, buying and selling, cheating with weights, bribery, maiming, highway robbery, and plundering villages (Int. § 189, land). The development of the three Sīla treatises may be considered an apt example of the growth of the Canon from concise to full beauty and thence to questionable diffuseness, incongruously but fruitfully enclosing the original nucleus (IN 6, Canon).

<sup>16</sup> Omitting unfavourable terms. These scarcely accord with Gotama's known tolerance, and may probably be attributed (IN 6, Canon) to those monks who favoured the common life in monasteries rather than the solitary life of the hermit. The condemnation is in accord with the social tendency of Buddhism, which is opposed to individualistic concentration upon self-salvation (Ch. 8 h, Duties). The Dhūtangas are similarly depreciated in Parivāra, vi, v.

[Note. The following abstract is taken from the Sumaṅgala-Vilāsini (I, 45), Buddhaghosha's<sup>2</sup> Commentary on the Dīgha-Nikāya. The translation is abbreviated from H. C. Warren's Buddhism in Translations (1922). The passage is also translated in T. W. Rhys Davids's (Lectures on) Buddhism, its History and Literature (1896).<sup>3</sup> The Sumaṅgala-Vilāsini was written about nine centuries after Buddha's death, but the references given below show that the great commentator closely followed the Canon in the credible details of his narrative. In adding incredible and unnecessary accessories he doubtless sought to enhance the nobly simple humanity of the Teacher. The whole passage shows clearly what may be called the medieval Buddhism of Buddhaghosha, which differs markedly from the religion of the Emperor Asoka's Edicts<sup>4</sup> and is practically equivalent to the Buddhism of modern Ceylon.<sup>5</sup>]

[p. 91] . . . His before-breakfast<sup>7</sup> habits were as follows: The Blessed One would rise early in the morning, and when . . .<sup>8</sup> he had rinsed his mouth<sup>9</sup> and otherwise cared for his person, he would sit retired until it was time to go begging. And when it came time, he would put on his tunic, girdle,<sup>10</sup> and robes, and taking his bowl, he would enter the village or the town for alms. Sometimes he went alone, sometimes surrounded by a congregation of priests. . . .<sup>11</sup> [p. 92] Some would implore him 'Reverend Sir, give us ten priests to feed';<sup>12</sup> some 'Give us twenty'; and some, 'Give us a hundred priests'. And they would take the bowl of the Blessed One, and prepare a seat for him, and zealously show their reverence for him by placing food in the bowl. When he had finished his meal the Blessed One, with due consideration for the different dispositions of their minds, would so teach them the Doctrine that some would become established in the refuges,<sup>13</sup> some in the five precepts,<sup>14</sup> some would become . . .<sup>15</sup> established in the highest fruit, that of saintship,<sup>16</sup> and would retire from the world. . . . He would rise from his seat, and return to the monastery. [p. 93] On his arrival there, he would take his seat in a pavilion, on the

Then the Blessed One, having thus finished his before-breakfast duties, would first sit in the perfumed chamber, on a seat that had been spread for him by his body-servant, and would wash his feet.<sup>4</sup> Then taking up his stand on the landing<sup>5</sup> of the jewelled staircase<sup>6</sup> which led to the perfumed chamber, he would exhort the congregation of the priests, saying: 'O priests, diligently work out your salvation.'<sup>7</sup> . . .<sup>8</sup> At this point some would ask the Blessed One for exercises<sup>9</sup> in meditation, and the Blessed One would assign them exercises suited to their several characters. #### TRANCES AND OCCULTISM

[Note. The knowledge and insight<sup>1</sup> which Gotama sought and found are rather scientific than metaphysical.<sup>2</sup> He sought to penetrate phenomena and find the stable basis supporting their fluctuating forms, rather than to rise above the material world to a higher sphere of spirit. Realizing that everything which has a cause has also a cessation<sup>3</sup> he strove to attain in thought to the uncaused cause, the amata,<sup>4</sup> the akata,<sup>5</sup> which being ever One and the selfsame<sup>6</sup> suffers no increase or diminution, no origination or decay.<sup>7</sup> From this origin all transient phenomena arise spontaneously,<sup>8</sup> and thus they are made of it rather than by it and are interfused by it rather than transcended by it. In their non-realization of this fundamental union, in the egotism and desirousness of individuals, lies the cause of sorrow.<sup>9</sup> The dualistic attempt to cast off the material world and so reach a higher spiritual sphere is condemned by him as not being due to absence of desire.<sup>10</sup> Having experienced the nature of the attempt he early repudiated the method of trance.<sup>11</sup> The compiler of the Mahā-parinibbāna-Sutta attributes to the Teacher on his death-bed a long succession of trances and 'attainments'<sup>12</sup> culminating in his decease; but the account stultifies itself since it describes a procession through eight successively higher stages to the highest followed by a return to the lowest and then again an ascension to the fourth stage, where final release or parinibbāna was attained, thus describing sixteen supererogatory stages prior to the ultimate four. These four stages<sup>13</sup> when examined may be seen to be successive efforts to shake off individual desires and so attain to the tranquillity of upekkhā, wherein the universal harmony is realized. Herein it is realized that the amata is the origin of the whole universe of beauty<sup>14</sup> and right impulse; sorrow and evil finding their natural source in the discords of fleeting individual desires. All that is contrary to this harmony is repudiated by Gotama. True yoga<sup>15</sup> is found in the harmonizing activities of sīla, paññā, and samādhi,<sup>16</sup> not in the floating dreams or the dreamlessness of trance. The trance-method is repudiated as exaggerated asceticism is repudiated. These things are not free from egoistic desire. Similarly the Brāhmanic practices of auspices, prognostications, interpretation of omens, dreams, and signs, are repudiated,<sup>17</sup> being calculated to increase and not to diminish personal aims and desires. And in like manner is repudiated all claim to personal spiritual distinction;<sup>1</sup> and all pretension to powers of a supernatural order. Miracles<sup>2</sup> are attributed in parts of the Canon to Buddha and to his disciples; but the Canon also records Gotama's disapproval and prohibition of all such personal displays. Here<sup>3</sup> and not only hereafter is the divine life, and it is inconsistent with all self-seeking.<sup>4</sup>

The theory that Gotama himself recommended the habit of Trance, or attainment of states of mystic unconsciousness as distinguished from profound but natural contemplation, is inconsistent with his known teaching. It seems probable that his followers after his death developed the method in sympathy with the later Yoga discipline of the Sāṅkhya school.<sup>5</sup> Doubtless Yoga seeks to get rid of the individual self by immersion in the universal self; but in its isolation it leaves the rest of the world to look after itself and is but seeking its own salvation or escape from the toils of individual existence. Only in active altruism, in the Eightfold Way,<sup>6</sup> could Gotama's spirit find peace. Regarding this subject T. W. Rhys Davids<sup>7</sup> writes as follows: 'Buddhism . . . has not been able to escape from the natural result of the wonder with which abnormal nervous states have always been regarded during the infancy of science. It has mistaken the temporary cessation of the outward signs of life for an actual victory of mind over matter, and has regarded the loss of mental power as the highest form of mental activity. But it must be added, to its credit, that the most ancient Buddhism despises dreams and visions; and that the doctrine of Jhāna is of small practical importance compared with the doctrine of the Noble Eightfold Path.' In the Eightfold Path the last two sections are right recollection (sammā-sati) and right transport (sammā-samādhi) of which the former consists in remembrance<sup>8</sup> of the transient nature of man's body,<sup>9</sup> sensations, perceptions, individual character, and consciousness, whilst the latter induces a state of mind dependent on this remembrance of individual mortality. Right recollection underwent a process of metamorphosis; remembrance of the transience of all individual life became knowledge of previous existences, divine vision,<sup>10</sup> and knowledge of the process of causation, or alternatively a supernatural knowledge comprising the six abhiññā,<sup>11</sup> namely the power of spirit over matter (iddhi),<sup>12</sup> the heavenly ear, knowledge of the thoughts of others, knowledge of previous existences, knowledge of future existences and certainty of emancipation.<sup>13</sup> Here the path of duty ends and we enter through a forest of mysticism<sup>14</sup> the realm of miracles, of magic transport through the air, of spirits and talking animals, and those prognostications<sup>15</sup> which Gotama declared to be 'corruption'.]

Gotama is represented earlier in this Sutta (Ch. 3 § 5 [165]) as having rejected the teachings of Uddaka as of Ālāra Kālāma because they did not proceed further than this and the preceding realms respectively. It is implied in the present passage that had they proceeded to the next step, namely the cessation of perception and sensation, he would have been satisfied, and that his own achievement was the attainment of this. This would mean that the contribution of Buddhism to religion consisted in the ninth stage (Ap. G 2 a § 9 n) of trance, or complete cessation of perception and feeling, a meagre substitute for the Third Truth (Ch. 5 b § 7) and Gotama’s ethical system. Cp. § 4 below (upekkhā); also Ch. 14 c § 10 [6] (perception); Ch. 18 a § 2 [259] n; Ch. 18 f § 2 [13] (perceptient).

dwells in the cessation<sup>1</sup> of perception and sensation.<sup>2</sup> And on insight (paññāya)<sup>3</sup> appearing his taints (āsavā)<sup>4</sup> are ended. Of this Bhikkhu, mendicant brothers, it is said: "He has made Māra<sup>5</sup> blind, he has struck the eye of Māra so that it cannot follow, he has become invisible to the evil one (pāpimato), he has passed beyond adherence<sup>6</sup> to the world (loke). . . .<sup>7</sup> He is beyond the range of the evil one." Thus spoke the Blessed One; the mendicant brothers rejoicing welcomed the word of the Blessed One.<sup>8</sup>

' . . .<sup>10</sup> [5] Moreover, mendicant brother, the gradual (anupubbaṃ)<sup>11</sup> cessation of the composite-unity<sup>12</sup> (sankhārānam) is announced by me. For one who has attained the first trance speech ceases. For one who has attained the second trance reasoning<sup>13</sup> and investigation cease. For one who has attained the third trance joy ceases. For one who has attained the fourth trance exhalation and inhalation<sup>14</sup> cease. For one who has attained the realm of space-infinity perception of form ceases. For one who has attained the realm of consciousness-infinity the perception of space-infinity ceases. For one who has attained the realm of nothingness the perception of consciousness-infinity ceases. For one who has attained the realm of neither perception nor non-perception the perception of the realm of nothingness ceases. For one who has attained the cessation of perception and sensation both perception and sensation (vedanā)<sup>15</sup> cease.
